THE EDUCATORS ADJOURN

CLOSING SESSION OF THE EDUCATIONAL CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the Last Day of the Successful Meeting—J. A McIntosh of Washington County Elected President.

Minneapolis, Dec. 30.—The final session of the State Teachers' association opened in Central hall at 2 o'clock yesterday with the paper of Prof. Max E. Alletzhaeuesser of St. Paul, on "Physical Culture." The professor improvised a class of gentlemen from the association, and placing them on the stage, put them through some of the exercises which he uses. The exercises were greatly enjoyed by all. The paper expected from Prof. Jordan on "Preparation of Teachers," was not presented, for the reason that the professor was called away from the city. President Lord, of the Moorhead normal, read the paper of Prof. Parr on "How to Better Enforce the Compulsory Law," which, owing to the absence of Prof. Parr, had gone over from the last previous meeting. The paper closed with recommendations in the form of resolutions, which were referred to the committee on resolutions. Officers were elected as follows: President, J. Q. McIntosh, county superintendent of Washington county; vice president, Miss Gertrude C. Ellis, Austin; corresponding secretary, S. A. Farnsworth, St. Paul; secretary, Miss Emma T. Allen, Rochester; treasurer, Z. Vaughn, Anoka. The association directed the appointment of a committee of three on the state publication of proceedings of the association, as declared for in the resolutions.

Retiring President Denfield appointed the various committees, as follows: On state publication of proceedings, Messrs. Farnsworth, Buell and Hubbard; natural work, Messrs. Galbraith and Ashea, Miss Arnold and Messrs Ceott and Hayne; compulsory legislation, Messrs. Parr, Gilbert, Jordan, Weld and State Superintendent Pendergast.

The various sections of the association, in separate sessions, finished their work yesterday, before the final meeting of the general association.

The department of high schools elected the following officers: President, W. J. Schmidt, superintendent of schools at Albert Lea; vice president, Supt. H. C. Hess, of the Sleepy Eye schools; secretary, Miss Dora Wells, principal of the St. Cloud high school. The remaining numbers of the programme were introduced by Prof. S. A. Farnsworth of St. Paul, on the function of the high school as preparatory school for fitting for active practical life, and in the discussion which followed Professors Selleck of Austin and Lohr of Duluth participated. A resolution was adopted to propose to the county superintendents to hold a joint portion of the next session of the association to be devoted to the question of how best to advance the common schools in relation to the high. Prof. A. J. Vandyke of Wabasha led in the presentation of this subject. The round table conference was the concluding subject of the session, Professors Edward S. Adams of Rochester and F. V. Hubbard, bearing the leading parts.

The department of elementary education resumed its work with a paper by Miss Mary Gilman of Minneapolis on "Science as the Basis of Primary Readings," which was followed by Miss Lizzie Tait of Sauk Center on "Literature as the Basis of Primary Reading." Discussion followed both papers, that of the former taking a wide range. Following this Prof. Maria L. Stanford of Minneapolis discussed the "Mechanical Part of Reading in the Intermediate Grades," and Miss Bertha Gould of Rochester presented a very attractive subject in "Class in the Eighth Grade." The officers for the ensuing year were elected at the close of the session as follows: President, Miss Brooks, St. Paul; vice president, Miss Keyes, Winona; secretary, Miss Watkins, St. Cloud.

The work of the department of music opened with the subject of "Music in the Kindergarten," presented by Antoinette Choate of St. Paul; and the next number was a "Plea for Music," by George E. Krinbill of Red Wing. May Usher Giffin of Mankato discussed "Music for Primary Grades." The concluding number was discussion of the question, "What Part Shall the Artistic Play in Public School Music?" Each of these subjects brought out long and interesting discussion. There was also a branching out into several other topics connected with the general subject.

Report Not Ready.

St. Paul, Dec. 30.—The pine lands committee is still in session at the Merchants engaged in arranging testimony and preparing to go on with its work. It was expected that a report would be made to the governor to-day, but Secretary Staples said that no report would be made at this meeting and that there would be nothing whatever to give out to the public. The committee has obtained the sanction of the governor to use the remaining $3,000 of the $8,000 left over from the appropriation for legislative expenses last winter, and recommended the appointment of Senator Dedon as a cruiser to investigate fraudulent pine land deals, but the appointment has not been formally made yet, and it is not certain that Senator Dedon will accept it if it is tendered him. He was not sure upon this point himself this morning.

A Sixteen-Year-Old Victim.

West Superior, Wis., Dec. 30.—Thomas Norman, charged with abducting Alice Howard, is in jail here awaiting trial. Norman was a millwright at Old Superior and boarded with the Howard family. Alice is a pretty dark-eyed girl of sixteen summers. Norman did not have a family here and became intimate with her. Officers have been searching for them for a year. They were found in Minneapolis.

Too Hard Times for the Sentinel.

Alexandria, Minn., Dec. 30.—The publication of the Douglas County Sentinel, weekly, owned and edited by A. C. Lawrence, ceased this week on account of hard times. The franchise and good will of the paper was purchased jointly by the Alexander Post and Douglas County News.

Kentucky Lotteries Reopen.

Louisville, Dec. 30.—The court of appeals has granted writs of error in the lottery case. The lotteries will resume business pending further developments.

Mrs. Lease is Deposed.

Topeka, Kan., Dec. 29.—The Populist camp was yesterday thrown into the wildest excitement by the action of Gov. Lewelling in removing Mrs. Mary E. Lease from the state board of charities. This was done after a long conference with his associate state officers and other leaders of the People's party, and was no doubt in anticipation of the war which Mrs. Lease was preparing to declare against the state administration. To a reporter Gov. Lewelling said:

"I don't want to say much about it, and I want you to be careful to quote me correctly. I have removed Mrs. Lease in the interest of harmony and good government. There seems to be some lack of harmony in the charitable institutions of the state and considerable trouble in the board, and I concluded Mrs. Lease's removal was the remedy, and accordingly removed her. That's all I have to say about it this afternoon."

"Don't you think you have stirred up a row?"

"Maybe I have, but I guess there will be no great trouble grow out of it."

It is not believed the removal was wholly caused by the row in the board, for that has been of long standing and was open and notorious. That somebody had to go has been known for three months, for Mrs. Lease on the one side and Mr. Householder and Mr. Waite on the other could never harmonize, but it was not intended to let it be Mrs. Lease until yesterday morning, when intelligence was brought to the governor that Mrs. Lease had not buried the hatchet, but was getting ready to make another assault through the newspapers upon the administration. She, in conversation with a well known Populist within the last forty-eight hours, stated that she was not satisfied with the terms of peace made for her with the governor. She said Gov. Lewelling and the entire state house crowd ought to be turned down, and that she was loaded with letters and other documents that would make trouble. She said she proposed to go after the governor on account of a good many misdeeds, and, especially on account of the appointment of Artz and Todd. When this reached the governor's ears it decided the question of removal in his mind, and instead of letting out Householder and Waite he let out Mrs. Lease. The removal means the administration has accepted Mrs. Lease's challenge to battle, and the contest will be full of fire and interest.

Poison in Cakes.

Grand Island, Neb., Dec. 29.—Miss Adele Egge, a young lady aged twenty-five years, a daughter of one of the oldest families in the city, arose this morning, mixed strychnine into a batter of cakes, baked them and ate of the food. She lived with her widowed mother, Mrs. Augusta Egge, a brother and a sister in a home of their own in this city. The mother and son had not yet arisen, but her sister, Miss Margaret Egge, came into the room where she was eating her breakfast and also began to eat. Margaret noticed that the cakes were bitter and questioned her sister the reason therefor. The young lady answered with a smile that it was better thus for all of them. Her sister became alarmed and a doctor was called, who in turn called assistance. Five minutes after the arrival of the physician Adele was a corpse, having died in intense agony. The younger sister was given an emetic, which acted promptly and she was saved.

Died in India.

London, Dec. 29.—The Indian mails announce the death of Miss Tucker, well known all over the world under the initials of "A. L. O. E." For the last eighteen years Miss Tucker has been engaged in missionary work in India, where the proceeds of her pen have been used to benefit the missions, and it is understood that all money earned by her works after death is also to be placed at the disposal of the Indian missions.

They Tackled the Wrong Deputy.

Cincinnati, Dec. 29.—A special to the Commercial Gazette from Barbourville, Ky., says that Deputy Sheriff William Main was fired upon at his home by Dempsey, Ben and John W. Parrin, three desperado brothers. The sheriff was in his own house. He returned the fire, killing Dempsey Parrin and wounding John W. and Ben. He arrested and jailed Ben, but John W. escaped.

Children Burned.

Paducah, Ky., Dec. 29.—The residence of Bob Wood, colored, was discovered to be on fire. When the department arrived they put out the fire and saved about half the building. It was then discovered that two of Woods' children, aged about four and seven, were inside roasted to a crisp.

Two Drowned Near the Soo.

Detroit, Dec. 29.—A special to the Tribune from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., says: Mrs. Andrew Trim and an unknown man were drowned near Detour yesterday while crossing the ice from Drummond island with a dog team.

Stephanie Hasn't Found a Husband.

London, Dec. 29.—A Vienna correspondent of the News says that he is authorized by Archduke Charles Louis to deny the rumor of the engagement of Stephanie to Archduke Francis, his son.

Detective Leagued With Anarchists.

London, Dec. 29.—A Madrid dispatch to the News says that Detective Nunez will be tried on a charge of inciting the anarchists, Delboche and Ferriera, to commit crime.

Steamer Sunk, Crew Saved.

Gibraltar, Dec. 29.—The British steamer Corn Hill collided to-day off this port with the British steamer Glass Hill. The Corn Hill sunk. Her crew was saved.

People Injured In a Riot.

London, Dec. 29.—A strikers' riot occurred in a colliery at Pontyminster, Wales, on Christmas day. The police charged the rioters. Twenty persons were injured.

Louisville, Dec. 29.—From present indications it would seem that the unfound bodies that were lost in the Louisville and Jeffersonville bridge disaster may remain in their watery graves. That of John Holden was the last recovered, and since then, no traces of the remaining bodies have been found. The coroner will probably hold an inquest some time in January. He will wait until all the chances of finding any more of the twelve men who are supposed to be in the wreck are given up.

Not Guilty of Poisoning.

Indianapolis, Dec. 29.—Anna Wagner has been acquitted.

MURDERED AND CREMATED

FATE OF A WEALTHY SOUTH DAKOTA CATTLEMAN.

He Is Killed by Revolver Shots and an Unsuccessful Attempt Is Made to Burn the Body—Robbery the Object of the Butchers.

Chamberlain, S. D., Dec. 29.—The mystery surrounding the death of Cattleman John Meyers at his home in the eastern part of Meade county, near the Cheyenne river, remains unsolved. That Meyers was murdered there is no doubt, but by whom is the question that is disturbing the officers in that region. The murdered man was a German about seventy years of age, and was quite wealthy. He lived by himself six miles from any neighbor, and was found dead in his lonely ranch house by a boy. The appearance of the house showed no signs of a struggle. Two bullets had entered the body of the murdered man, one in his head and the other in the right side. His shirt at the neck had been torn open and his coat and pants pockets rifled of their contents. On a small table in the room was found evidence of a meal having been eaten by two persons.

The party or parties who committed the awful deed after the murder took the stove wood out of the wood box, piled it on the floor near the dead man and, throwing some rags upon it, poured kerosene oil over it and the body and set it on fire, no doubt intending to burn up all evidence of the crime. The fire burned the wood and rags and burned through the floor without burning the body and then went out. Meyers was known to have secreted his money somewhere about his home, as he was an eccentric person and had often spoken of being unwilling to trust the banks with his money. It was probably this fact that led to the death of the old man, and it may be that the greater portion of his money is still buried in the vicinity of his house. The body was taken to Sturgis and buried near the city. In all probability the perpetrator of the deed will escape, as apparently no clue was left whereby the crime can be ferreted out.

Wedded at First Sight.

Chamberlain, S. D., Dec. 29.—A romantic wedding took place the other day at Running Water, Bon Homme county. A lady of good address, neatly though not extravagantly dressed, arrived on the Milwaukee train the evening before the wedding and asked for Daniel Lake, a young and somewhat eccentric farmer living west of Running Water. Lake arrived in town later in the day, and the two were married by Justice Treffry. Lake and his bride, a North Dakota woman named Mrs. Carrie Brainerd, about thirty years of age, had never met before, but had been in correspondence for a short time. From the brief interchange of letters a mutual affection arose between the two, and the quiet wedding was the result. Of course the good people of that vicinity had something to gossip about, but the newly-wedded couple paid no heed to the talk.

A Manitoba Scandal.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 29.—The quiet town of Alexander, about 150 miles west, has been thrown into a state of great excitement by the fact that one of the leading churchmen and his alleged wife, who were prominent members of the choir, proceeded to Brandon, where the woman was married to a young English dude who had been paying her some attention at Alexander. When they returned the former husband spent his evenings and nights with his alleged wife and the new dude husband monopolized her during the day. When the scandal became known the three fled south, and are now supposed to be in Minneapolis They left a big board bill behind.

Lost in the Snow.

Heland, S. D., Dec. 29.—A nine-year-old child belonging to G. Burso, living south of town, was sent to a neighbor on an errand and was lost in the storm. Help was called for and a crowd of men searched the prairies to no avail. The search was given up at dark. At 2 o'clock in the morning the girl returned whole and hearty and told her story. She had traveled for many miles, and at last as she got sleepy she buried herself in a straw pile not forty rods from her own home. When she awoke she could see her house, and to the great rejoicing and wonder of her parents walked in on them.

Promotions and Dismissals.

Washington, Dec. 29.—General changes in the personnel of the pension bureau are expected to be made next Tuesday. Most of these changes will be promotions, but a large number of reductions are expected. A few dismissals may be ordered. Although the officials decline to confirm the report of the changes and have made a great effort to keep the action quiet, it is generally expected that between fifty and a hundred promotions and reductions will be made.

Visited by the President.

Washington, Dec. 29.—A letter received at the office of the lighthouse board yesterday from Capt. Robley D. Evans, its secretary, in relation to the burning of the Lower Cedar Point (Md.) light house, about forty-five miles down the Potomac, indicates that the light house tender Violet, with the president and Secretaries Gresham and Carlisle on board, visited the scene of the fire Wednesday morning.

Colorado Steelworkers' Wages.

Pueblo, Dec. 29.—At a conference with a committee of the Amalgamated Steel Workers' association yesterday, Supt. Robinson, of the Pueblo Steel works, proposed that on the resumption of work the Pittsburg wage schedule be adopted.

Bought a Railroad.

Yonkers, N. Y., Dec. 29.—J. Pierpont Morgan, representing the New York Central, bought the New York & Northern railroad for $1,000,000 at the foreclosure sale to-day. His was the only bid.

Dean of Ely Dead.

London, Dec. 29.—Charles Merivale, dean of Ely, is dead. He had been ill for some time, and became unconscious on Tuesday night. The earl of Derby used to say that Dean Merivale's translation of Homer's "Iliad" was one of the finest things in the English language.

Prominent Lumberman Dead.

New Richmond, Wis., Dec. 29.—Samuel A. Jewett, one of the distinguished citizens of this part of the state, is dead. He was one of the old settlers, and had been an extensive land owner and lumberman. His home was at Jewett's Mills.

Hoskins is a Maniac.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Dec. 30.—Soon after Editor Hoskins was committed to the hospital a request was made to Gov. Nelson to investigate the case. He requested Dr. Jones of Minneapolis, a specialist on nervous diseases, and a member of the board of trustees to come to Fergus Falls and investigate the case. Dr. Jones arrived in the city Thursday morning and spent the day at the hospital, and a thorough examination physically as well as otherwise was made. Supt. Welch was present, and at the close of the examination Dr. Jones wrote out his report to the governor. This report will not be made public until it reaches the governor's hands, but it will silence, if anything can, the claim of Hoskins' friends that he has been unjustly and wrongfully committed to the hospital. The report, which is concurred in by Supt. Welch, confirms and sustains the decision of the local commission which examined and committed Hoskins. The substance of the report is that Hoskins is on the border line between sanity and insanity, and when excited is unable to control himself. His insanity is of the maniacal form and it is dangerous to have him at large. He is suffering from severe nervous degeneration, and the doctors are emphatic in their statement that public interests as well as the interests of Mr. Hoskins demand that he remain in the hospital for treatment. Dr. Jones says that there are any number of conditions in Mr. Hoskins' case which shows the insanity. Mr. Hoskins is more quiet and less nervous than when received at the hospital, and if his friends will let him alone his recovery will be much more rapid than if he is constantly stirred up by them. When first taken to the hospital he refused to take the medicine prescribed for him, but was of course compelled to. As soon as he realized that he was no longer in court and that rules must be obeyed, he acquiesed cheerfully.

Jailed for Forgery.

Fairmont, Minn., Dec. 30. — Charles Nelson, buyer for the farmers' warehouse at this place, has been arrested for forgery and for falsely obtaining money in other ways, and is now in jail after a nearly successful attempt to escape. Nelson is said to have forged indorsements to drafts and to have issued a number of checks against the warehouse, the money for which, it is claimed, he used to pay gambling debts with. He is said to have been the victim of a set of gambling sharpers who came here for the purpose of making him their prey. When the sheriff desired to serve his warrant the bird had flown by team across the country to St. James. He was apprehended and brought back and has had his hearing. Being unable to secure bondsmen he has been confined in jail.

Evans Escapes.

Fresno, Cal., Dec. 30.—The excitement which prevailed here last evening on account of the escape of Chris Evans from jail has subsided and is quite as noticeable as the stir of the previous evening. Nothing has been heard from Sheriff Scott and posse, and it is thought they have followed the bandit and his confederate to Sampson's Flat. There is little doubt that Evans made for that section and is now probably with friends. Evans' condition is regarded as against this roughing it as he did when in the wilds before, and but few think the officers will take him. If he should be taken alive soon there is little doubt but he would be promptly lynched, and Morrell also.

A Month Without Sleep.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 30.—Thirty days have passed since George Woodruff, a wealthy farmer of this county, has slept. Mr. Woodruff was afflicted with the same strange malady a year ago, when he went sixty-five days without sleep. He is to all appearances healthy, and works each day. His case is attracting great interest among the medical fraternity. His physicians have utterly failed to produce even a stupor with drugs.

Will Resume Work.

Pittsburg, Dec. 30.—The Lower Union mills of the Carnegie plant in this city paid off to-day, and the men were taken individually into the office, where the new scale was presented to them. The details of the scale were not made public, but without doubt the men will accept whatever reductions it may bring. A resumption in all the Carnegie plants will take place on Tuesday next.

Three Tourists Lost Life.

Vienna, Dec. 30.—Three tourists have lost their lives in attempting to ascend the higher of the two peaks of the Cross Glockner. Dr. Kohn's body has been recovered, but those of his companions, believed to have been named Pick and Dr. Passau, have not yet been found.

Mayor Fitch Exonerated.

Hastings, Minn., Dec. 30.—The case of Mayor Charles Fitch and Chief of Police Gibbons of South St. Paul, indicted for unlawfully conniving at the escape of a prisoner from jail was dismissed in the district court on the grounds that the indictments didn't state facts sufficient to constitute a public offense.

Atlantic, Iowa, Bank Fails.

Atlantic, Iowa, Dec. 30.—Theodore G. Steinke was yesterday appointed receiver of the Cass County bank. The assets are $260,000, liabilities $200,000. The depositors will probably be paid in full.

Fataly Crushed.

Fairmont, Minn., Dec. 30.—J. E. Cantight, a farmer living three miles north of town, was run over by his team yesterday and received injuries which will prove fatal.

Eight Odell Cattle Captured.

Ipswich, S. D., Dec. 30.—The wolf hunt resulted in the capture of eight wolves. The proceeds will go towards an oyster supper to-night.

Harrington as Editor.

London, Dec. 30.—Timothy Harrington has been appointed editor of United Ireland, succeeding the present editor, Mr. Leamy.

The Charge Against Vaillant.

Paris, Dec. 30.—The formal charge against Vaillant will be intent to destroy the chamber and attempted assassination.

Rests on His Bier.

GOES TO DR. PRICE.

World's Fair Jury Decides in His Favor.

Chicago, Jan. 1—On the analysis and recommendation of Dr. Wiley, Chief United States Government Chemist at Washington, and greatest living authority on food products, the World's Fair jury to-day gave the highest award to Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder for strength, purity and excellence. This conclusively settles the question of superiority. Dr. Wiley rejected the alum powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considers them unwholesome.

To See the Receivers.

St. Paul, Dec. 29.—"Northern Pacific employes are sensible, fair-minded men," remarked General Manager Kendrick recently. The policy adopted by the men yesterday appears to justify the assertion. The subcommittee of the conference committee appeared before Receiver Oakes yesterday morning at 11:15 o'clock to ascertain whether or not he was willing and had the power to adjust the differences between themselves and the company, in case he could be persuaded that their grievances were well founded. Mr. Oakes answered in the affirmative. He stated that he would be willing to receive a written statement from each organization of its case through Mr. Kendrick. The employes are pleased with the manner in which Mr. Oakes received them, and are agreeable to his proposition. The subcommittee of seven, which was elected at the union meeting and has since transacted the affairs of the entire body of employes, will prepare detailed statements by each member on behalf of his organization, which will be argued with Mr. Kendrick. Receiver Oakes will assume the role of arbitrator, and to him the general manager will submit each case when it has been thoroughly sifted. Mr. Oakes will then take the matter under consideration with the other receivers, Messrs. Rouse and Payne, and the courts.

South Dakota Educators.

Parker, S. D., Dec. 29.—At the educational association last evening Gov. Sheldon delivered an address on "Public Education; What Kind and How Much." It was a practical and masterly effort and highly complimented by all, showing South Dakota's governor to be posted in educational as well as political matters. He predicted a brilliant future for South Dakota schools, etc. Prof. Mauck presented the report of the educational council, and seven new members of the same were elected, as follows: Louis McLouth, G. M. Smith, J. K. Failing, J. H. Snoddy, H. L. Bras, M. D. Miller and B. F. Hood; also, to fill vacancies, Prof. Dempster and Prof. Vert. After a spirited contest Huron was selected as the next place of meeting. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, R. S. Gleason, Kingsbury county; corresponding secretary, I. F. Nickell, Huron; recording secretary, Kate Landman, Plankinton; treasurer, H. L. Bras, Mitchell; delegate to national association, Prof. Lovejoy of Aberdeen.

Sioux Falls Spray.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Dec. 29.—A test of the new chemical fire engine was given yesterday afternoon. A small building in which were stored boxes and rubbish saturated with kerosene and covered with tar was fired. In four minutes from the time the alarm was turned in the fire was out. The test was regarded as satisfactory.

Harry M. Dungan of Sioux City and Miss Emma B. Hahn were married at the residence of the bride's parents in Humboldt township yesterday. A large number of people from here attended the wedding.

Sturgis, S. D., has been bothered greatly of late with tramps and vagrants, and in order to afford protection to citizens an ordinance has been passed inflicting a fine of $100 and thirty days in jail for cases of this kind. Work will be provided, and it will be hard enough to make it unattractive.

Counties Must Pay the Printer.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Dec. 29.—A number of newspapers throughout the state have been unable to collect their fees for publishing the forfeited tax sale. Over one-half of the counties paid for it by the folio without objecting, but in a number of counties the commissioners have refused to pay more than 12 cents for each description. In Le Sueur county the Sentinel appealed to the district court from the action of the commission, and Judge Caldwell has rendered a decision giving the Sentinel judgment for the amount claimed, folio rates, as certified to by the state printer, together with statutory costs and 7 per cent interest from the time the bill was presented to the commissioners. Ramsey and Washington counties have thus far failed to settle, but the decision furnishes a precedent.

Jubilation Days at Huron.

Huron, S. D., Dec. 29.—Holiday week will be full of special enjoyment for Huron people. Besides a number of private parties, family reunions, etc., not less than four weddings are announced, and the number is likely to be increased. The Knights of Pythias will give their annual reception and ball, and Queen Huron will also give a grand party. Dr. Clark will lecture for the benefit of the old soldiers, and Langley's orchestra have engaged the opera house for a number of nights for roller skating.

New Armory Hall at Shattuck.

Faribault, Minn., Dec. 29.—The plans for the new armory hall for Shattuck school have been received by the directors. The building will be a very fine and large one. During all the past cold weather work on the armory was continued, and brick was laid when it was 20 below zero. The directors expect to have it finished by March 1, and will then have an opening. The cost will be about $25,000.

Banqueted the Honest Scotchman.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Dec. 29.—Chief Douglas and the pine examining corps, who are spending their Christmas vacation in this city, were tendered a reception and banquet last evening by the citizens. Fully 200 persons participated.

Mr. and Mrs. Runyon at Court.

Berlin, Dec. 29.—The empress of Germany at noon yesterday received the new United States ambassador, Theodore Runyon, and Mrs. Runyon. The audience is said to have been of a cordial nature, the empress being especially gracious to Mrs. Runyon.

Made Money Order Offices.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Supt. Gasden, of the money order service, will sign orders early in January making 145 fourth-class postoffices money order offices and extending postal note facilities to fifteen offices in various parts of the country.

Dr. Josiah Strong says that in Massachusetts the average laboring man is not able to support his family, and so in that state we find 30,000 children under sixteen years of age employed in factories and such places. In 1880 there were in the United States over 1,100,000 children fifteen years and under, at work who should have been at school, and in Pennsylvania there are herds of little children at work in the coal breakers. Then over against this poverty and oppression of the toilers put this statement of the newspapers for 1889: "The profits of the Wall street kings the past year was enormous. It is estimated that Vanderbilt made $36,000,000, Jay Gould $15,000,000, Russell Sage $10,000,000, etc."—National Republican.

There is certainly one firm of brokers in New York that have got their eyes opened to the real situation. In a late circular that firm makes the following statement: "The American eagle and the Russian bear are asking the English lion to eat them up. Overflowing bins of each compete to empty treasuries of both. Plentiful bushels are making scarce dollars. A ragged coat on the farmers back means an empty sack in the mechanics pantry. Profits of the custom house are losses in the bill of lading. The cheaper the food the lower the wages. The bounty of nature appears to foster the greed of man. The English gold bond takes the pound of American flesh."—Henry R. Legate in Boston Traveller.

Washington Dec. 29th. In his report to Land Commissioner Lamoreaux, Special Agent Parke recommends that the pine lands of the Red Lake Indian reservation be put upon the market as speedily as possible. He says:

"Settlers in the neighborhood claim that the reservation is simply used to provide places for political friends, and if a change of administration should occur in four years a new set of men would be employed from the party in power to re-estimate the work done under the direction of the present administration, and thus would matters continue while the development and settling up of that fine farming section of Minnesota is being retarded. I interviewed hundreds of leading citizens of both political parties and found the feeling to be intense. They claim that it is not a political question but one of vital financial interest to all the people of that section and the universal demand and keynote of the situation is the early placing on the market at least a part each year of what has been estimated. I found myself, on investigation that much of the lumber used for building in the thriving town of Thief River Falls, which is in a few hundred yards of the Red Lake reservation, is brought from Tacoma and at $22 to $65 per M The same is true of St. Hilaire, a town only seven miles distant, and the farmers are prevented from building proper houses to protect their stock, or even to have as comfortable homes as that cold region demands. Great quantities of Red Lake timber is being blown down each year by cyclones and if the placing on the market is delayed until all has been estimated as provided by the Nelson bill a re-estimate would have to be made if for no other reason than the forest fires. These facts are well understood by the people and intensify feeling over the prospect of long delay and promote prejudice against government employes. From the foregoing it is readily seen how anything done by the estimators is exaggerated and made to appear in public print. Certainly a more competent gentlemanly set of men could not be selected and I was surprised that men of such intelligence and character could be found who would leave all the comforts of life and endure the hardships and privations of that cold and dangerous region."

Mr. Parke gives a letter of A. Douglas, chief examiner of Chippewa Indian lands, which is addressed to S. M Lamoraux, commissioner of the general land office. It says:

"Fires and cyclones are damaging and destroying such an enormous amount of pine every year upon the Red Lake reservation in Minnesota, that as soon as your honor is satisfied that the estimate upon that part of the Red Lake reservation south of the Red Lake agency outside the deminished line is correct, you place the same upon the market that this great loss may be avoided."—St. Paul Globe.

"The man was driving a sorry old horse along the road, hitched to a light wagon, when he met a chap from town.

"Mister," he said, "air you from the city?"

"Yes."

"What do you think this horse of mine ought to bring there?"

"He ought to bring a load of wood or cheek, I should say," laughed the traveler.

"But he won't," sighed the owner, never seeing as he saw the joke, "and that is why I want to sell him."—Detroit Free Press.

What Decided Him.

"It's no use," said the poet to the barber "I will have to get my hair cut."

"All right. Want it pretty short?"

"Close up. I want the job attended to thoroughly."

"Long hair isn't in style any more," ventured the barber in an effort to be genial.

"It isn't the style I care for. Just a few minutes ago I was introduced to a man, and he said, 'Which do you play, football or the piano?'"—Exchange.

His Argument.

"But why should I give you money instead of work?" said the householder to the tramp.

"It's very simple, sir," returned the tramp. "If I did the work, you'd have to have it done over again. I'm such a poor hand at work. It's money in your pocket to pay me and let me go."—Harper's Bazar.

HE HAD A GOOD HORSE.

And They Wanted to See His Talents Wasted.

At a recent Monday [illegible] of Methodist divines one of the [illegible] of the cloth narrated [illegible] of an itinerant clergyman [illegible] and his experience [illegible] over to the passion of running horses.

"It is not many years ago," said the speaker, "that [illegible] rode up on a [illegible] town in Western Texas [illegible] ed. As he threw the [illegible] boy and gave some [illegible] for the care of his horse, [illegible] a half dozen or so men gazing admiringly at the animal.

"Entering the hotel, the brother wrote his name in the register without prefixing the abbreviation 'Rev.' Then he went to the washroom, and was busily engaged in removing the signs of travel when a teamster rushed in and said:

"'By the way, Mr. Blank, will you let your horse run? There's a short track right back here a piece, and the money's up.' With these words he shook in the face of the astonished clergyman a number of bank notes.

"'No, sir,' replied the minister, with great [illegible] 'I [illegible] positively not,' and then he turned away and busied himself with other affairs. Shortly after this the supper bell rang, and Mr. Blank, who was strolling upon the plaza when he turned to enter the dining room was met by a courteous stranger, who, addressing him politely, said:

"'I hope, sir, you will allow your mare to run. As soon as you rode up this afternoon I offered to bet $[illegible] that she would cut down anything here, and the money is up. I [illegible] a [illegible] of horses, and yours is a pretty piece of flesh. If you let her run, I'm sure she'll win.'

"'Do you think, sir,' replied Mr. Blank, 'that it is compatible with my calling to sanction horse races? Let me inform you, sir, that I am a Methodist minister.'

"The man was too much surprised to reply, and the minister went to his meal. Later in the evening the stranger came to him, and getting him one side remarked: 'You must excuse me, sir, but I must apologize. I assure you I was unaware of your calling, and beg your pardon. Nothing could induce me to knowingly insult a clergyman.'

"'I am certain,' replied the reverend gentleman, 'that no insult was intended, and therefore no pardon is to be granted.' After that the two spent a pleasant hour in conversation, and the following afternoon the minister, having completed his errand, rode away.

"A few months following Mr. Blank rode up to a blacksmith's shop in another portion of the county. After he had dismounted the smith, who had come forward, said, 'Wasn't you at Cross Roads village with that mare one day last summer?'

"'Yes,' replied the clergyman. 'Why do you ask?'

"'Oh, for nothing. The boys wanted to run her, didn't they?'

"'They did, indeed, but I refused my permission. I am a minister of the gospel.'

"'Well, now,' said the smith, chuckling at the recollection, 'that's all right, preacher, but the boys got her out, they did, and they run her anyway; but I say, preacher! she beat, she did. She won the money in as pretty a race as I ever see.'

"Judge," said the speaker, in conclusion, "of the outraged feelings of our reverend brother when he learned that his horse had been made to race, without his permission, by the apologetic stranger. Still, there was one feeling of satisfaction in that [illegible] had won so handily."—New York Herald.

The Solution of It.

They had been engaged only 15 years, but it seemed a long time to her, and she was growing restless.

"Darling," she said in gentlest accents, "our betrothal has been very sweet, has it not?"

"It has, it has, indeed my own."

"But it has been very lo[illegible] don't you think?"

"Yes, it has been pretty middlin long," he replied.

He Wanted to Learn.

Did you ever try to teach a man how to waltz? If you never have, don't attempt it. One girl went through such an ordeal, and this is what she says about it:

"In the first place, I stood beside him, took hold of his hand and tried to illustrate how the first steps went.

"Then I told him to do as I did, and he began to seesaw back and forth like a wild Indian.

"When he whirled around, both arms sprung out, sometimes hitting me in the eyes and occasionally giving me a whack in the back of the neck.

"His feet made themselves into Chinese puzzles. He invariably toed in, walked on his own heels, or else pranced around 'heel and toe' fashion.

"He said that he had no idea that he had so little control over his feet.

"I had to sit down every few moments to collect my thoughts, which the [illegible] and refrain from [illegible] cross-eyed trying to keep track of the whereabouts of his shoes. It was 'one, two, three, four' until my lips became parched from constant counting.

"I kept saying, 'You must be very tired; won't you rest awhile?' and he always answered: 'Tired? Well, I guess not! This is just too jolly.'

"And then off he'd go in a mad tangle of jumps and hops, and all the time he sang that awful thing about 'My left foot is crazy, my right foot is lazy, now don't be unazy, I'll learn you to waltz.'

The Old Man's Idea.

"I met an old fellow down in Ohio not long ago," said the drummer, "on a train going out of Columbus, and he became communicative on very short notice. He was quaint, though, and I rather liked it. He talked a great deal about his boys, and I asked him after awhile how many he had.

"'Seven,' he replied.

Like Jimmy Kenyon's sister
The night that Bill McKee devised
The scheme by which he kissed her.
The two were standin at the gate,
To whistle she was learnin,
Her lips were temptin, and 'twas late—
To kiss 'em Bill was yearnin.

"To whistle you must do like this,"
Said Bill, and, leanin over,
He showed his, puckered, to the miss,
Whose own, as red as clover,
Soon puckered in the selfsame way;
Then, would you believe it, mister,
Ere she could turn her head away
The cheeky chap had kissed her.

The color flamed into her cheek,
Her neck was dyed with blushes,
She trembled so she could not speak,
An down among the rushes
The brook leaped up to tell the flowers
That bent their heads to listen
How Bill McKee taught Susie Powers
The old, sweet game of kissin.

I sorter guess she liked the game,
For many hours they tarried
Beneath the sumach's flags o' flame,
An in six months they married.
I seed Bill yesterday go by,
A baby carriage wheelin.
He never knowed or thought then I
Knew all about his stealin.

DEVILS LAKE CHAUTAUQUA.

The first summer Assembly of the North Dakota Chautauqua comes off June 27th [illegible] July 17th. An extensive program has been arranged, including many noted speakers, singers, etc., and the occasion promises to [illegible] most interesting and instructive. Devil's Lake is a summer resort point. The Great Northern Railway gives reduced rates. Address P. Fancher, Secretary, Devils Lake N. D. for programs and other information. A trip to the lake and assembly will make an enjoyable outing.

A LARGE DROP IN RATES TO THE WEST

The Great Northern inaugurated its new train service to the Pacific Coast on the 2[illegible] to t. With sweeping reductions in rates amounting to 40 per cent in many cases. The rate from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Puget Sound was reduced First class, from $40.00 to [illegible] to Spokane from $35 to $30; and to Helena and Butte from $40 to $25, with corresponding reductions on second-class tickets and through rates applying proportionately to intermediate points. It is the purpose of the Great Northern to make rates to help the development of its territory. It is the shortest line across the continent, was built on business principles, and at a cost of about one half of that of the older transcontinental lines, and is therefore enabled to correspondingly well by its territory and patrons in rates and accommodations.

MONKEY AS A SLUGGER.

He Pounded a Bulldog Until He Could no Longer Hear His Heart Beat.

"The most novel fight I ever witnessed," remarked Mr. James Meehan to a Cincinnati Enquirer man, "was between a bulldog and a monkey, down in Cuba. A friend of mine had a bulldog that had licked every canine on the island, and he was very proud of him. A gentleman from South America said that he had a monkey that could whip the bulldog, and the owner of the latter laughed at the idea. After some talk a wager of $500 was made, and the only advantage that the monkey was to have was that he was to be allowed the privilege of using a baton about the length of a policeman's club, but not so heavy.

"The fight was in a public place, and in a pit that was surrounded by an iron grating. There was a big crowd out to see the fight. Of course everybody thought the bulldog would chew up the monkey. After a few minutes, however, the audience was surprised at the sagacity displayed by the monkey. The bulldog would make a rush at the monkey, and the latter would jump aside and allow the bulldog to hit his head against the iron gratings. This was kept up for twenty minutes or more, and then the dog began to get tired. The monkey began to fight. He would let the dog make a rush and then jump on the dog's back and strike him several times with the baton. This was kept up for an hour or more, and finally exhausted, and the monkey actually pounded him to death. The monkey would strike the dog several blows, and then place his ear to the canine to see if he still breathed.

"Finally the owner of the dog agreed to give up the fight, but the monkey's owner told him that it was too late, as the monkey would not quit until he had killed the dog. This was one of the peculiarities of the monkey. They always killed their victims. The owner of the dog said he did not want his dog killed, and insisted on taking the monkey off. While they were talking the monkey belted the dog several time with his baton, placed his ear on the dog, and with a sudden jump leaped on the shoulder of his owner and commenced to use monkey language. The dog was examined and found to be dead. The people applauded the victory of the monkey, and it looked as if the monkey understood it."

Tamping and Ramming Boreholes.

An innovation in mining work is an invention for tamping and ramming boreholes. The hole itself is made of a smaller diameter at the inner end where the cartridge is placed. A small wood disk rests against the shoulder made by the smaller hole and protects the cartridge. The tamping consists of blocks of compressed clay, which are broken up in the hole by the rammer. The disk, blocks and hammerhead are all perforated so that they can be threaded on to the fuse wires. Clay blocks are made at a very cheap rate by a simple machine, and by their use uniformity in the tamping material is secured.

What the Picture Needed.

One morning Jerrold and Compton proceeded together to view the pictures in the gallery of illustration. On entering the anteroom they found themselves opposite to a number of very long looking-glasses. Pausing before one of these, Compton remarked to Jerrold:

"You've come here to admire works of art! Very well; first feast your eyes on that work of nature," pointing to his own figure reflected in the glass. "Look at it! There's a picture for you;"

"Yes," said Jerrold, regarding it intently, "very fine—very fine indeed." Then, turning to his friend: "Wants hanging, though.—Sala's Journal.

Stopping a Generating Plant.

A clever method of stopping a generating plant at a distance has been devised by a New Zealand electrical engineer. A late installation, which was carried out with the addition of this device, was for a private residence, the turbine being about half a mile distant from the house. The main switch was arranged in the owner's bed room, so that he could shut down after retiring to rest.

NOTHING TO GET MAD ABOUT.

There were a Good Four Inches Between Nose and Bullet.

"It was while Stemwinder Johnson had the upper store at Rosebud," said Col. George Barry the other night at the Lotos club, "that Mose Howard was the chief of government herder for the agency," quotes the New York Sun. "I was stationed at Fort Niobrara in those days, and occasionally got over to the Rosebud at other times than issue day. Old Bill Huston, a sort of retired cowboy, was hanging around the agency then, sometimes working as a herder, but for the most part picking up what he could as a hunter. He was the finest shot with a Winchester I ever saw, and thought nothing of taking off the head of a sage hen at 100 yards. He wouldn't pick up a jack rabbit that he'd hit anywhere else than in the head.

"Mose Howard and old Bill Huston were good friends. Mose used to say in his slow drawl: 'Old Bill ain't such a—of a feller as he use' to be, he's a humble citizen, an' that's me every time.'

"One day, when I happened to be in Johnson's store, Mose came in more excited than I had ever seen him before. For a quarter of an hour he didn't say a word, but stood over by the big stove—it was a cold, raw day in the fall—chewing tobacco and shooting tarantula juice in a way that showed violent perturbation of spirit.

"Say, Johnson," he drawled out, 'what d'ye think old Bill Huston done? Well, if he didn't come plum night to shooting me cold, I'm a goat. I was comin' up f'm the lower store 'nd was 'bout half way across when a Winchester ball pinged right past my ear so close I could feel the wind of it. I looked around a bit an' over there on the creek, 'bout half a mile, was old Bill Huston pickin' up a sage hen. Sa-a-y, maybe you fellers b'lieve I wasn't hoss-tile.'

" 'What did you do, Mose?' asked Johnson.

" 'I jess waltzed over there,' answered Mose, 'an' say I to Bill: 'What in thunder,' I says, 'air you a-shooting at?'

" 'Humph!' says Bill. 'You darn fool; don't you spose I seen you? Moved around till you was plum four inches out o' range.' "

STUDYING A NEW PART.

An Actor Describes His Sensations While Thus Occupied.

In the study and preparation of a part what a myriad of sensations and emotions the actors go through; what elation and depression; what exaltation and despair he experiences between the inception of a role and its delivery to the public! at the first reading of the play and his trying to "see himself" in the part he is cast for, or at the rereading of the part when he has it in manuscript form. The emotion is only different in degree, as the part may be a small one or a great one. After committing it to memory (the very smallest portion of the study of a part) comes the real study of it, the shaping and composing it, making himself, his personality, and perhaps his peculiarities, if he have them, consonant with the role, and fitting himself into the part so that he shall be what the author designed—now elaborating and then repressing and curtailing, accepting or rejecting mental suggestions, and making, from an adumbration, a perfect picture; in short, going through all the travail of making a part. For, with all credit to the author who gives him the character, it is the actor who makes it animate. That is the real life of the actor away from the footlights, where his emotions and sensibilities are brought into play.

When the part he has struggled and fought with, cajoled and anathematized by turns, during the study of it, is presented to his public, it is then complete, and a finished thing with the rest of the play. But what days and nights has he had before that premiere! From the beginning of the study of a part (and the feeling is more tense the more important that part may be) until the playing of it, the actor and the character he is studying are never apart.—John Drew, in Scribner's.

Air Power for Street Cars.

Paris is shortly to try a new experiment with tramways worked by compressed air. There are already electric tramways running from the Madeline to St. Dennis and Pantin with accumulators under the carriage. These are reported to work very satisfactorily and are much more sightly than those of the "trolley" system in use in some of the French departments. The new compressed air machines, which are to be started from the Louvre to Versailles and St. Cloud, are expected to be more satisfactory than either as well as more economical in their working. The locomotives will weigh eighteen tons and have a pressure of about 150 pounds, and be capable of drawing three or four cars loaded with passengers. The water of the Seine has been utilized as motive power for the compression of the air. The advantages expected are, besides economical working, the absence of smoke or odor from the machines, and they also, it is said, offer better facilities for dispatching several car loads of passengers at the same time by the same machine.—Transport.

Coal Discoveries in the Southwest.

A six foot seam of coal has been discovered in Arizona and is pronounced of good semi-anthracite quality. It is improbable that this is the only seam, but this may be easily ascertained by further boring. In northern Mexico, also, there are considerable beds of coal, and apparently all that the capitalist needs to make this region of America an important manufacturing center, not dependent upon precarious gold and silver mining, is confidence and enterprise. Supplies of fuel are essential to the development of manufactures. However abundant and cheap other raw materials are, without cheap fuels industrial centers of other parts of the country will continue to keep the lead. It is said that a railroad will connect Guaymus with a coal field eighty miles distant. This would form an important outlet for the Pacific coast, and might, by shipment down the gulf of by rail, give San Diego a much-needed inducement to establish manufactures.—San Francisco Call.

JARED HARPWICK'S TASK.

THE task was brought upon Jared Harpwick by a letter, which came to him one September afternoon as he sat reading on his vine-shaded porch. He rose promptly, lifted his straw hat from the floor and put it on, and walked through the front gate to the pike.

Through the long village street and a half-mile along the dusty pike he trudged; then, turning aside into a narrow by-road that branched off at the foot of a steep hill, he came to a rude saw-mill. A stalwart man sat upon a large moving log, from which a perpendicular saw was rasping a board.

"Good afternoon, Neighbor Gray," said Jared.

Gray eyed him keenly from under his shaggy brows; then rising, he walked to a lever, pulled it aside, and stopped the saw.

"Sit down on the log, Jared," he said. "We can't hear each other when the saw's going. I see by your face that something has happened."

"I've got a letter from Joe. He's in trouble."

"Just as I supposed. Bankrupt, I'll warrant?"

"That's about it."

"And he has written to you to get me to help him?"

"That's true; but, John, don't be angry. This matter must be considered with our coolest judgment."

"I'll not consider it with cool judgment nor any other kind. He'll get no help from me, Jared."

"Very well, John, very well; but you'll hear what the trouble is, won't you?"

"Oh, I suppose I can listen," replied the father, taking a piece of bacon from a shelf and proceeding to grease the saw.

"Well, Gray, it's a bad embarassment. A customer bought a thousand dollars' worth of Joe's patent machines, promising to order twice as many more soon. Joe supposed he was perfectly good for it, and on the strength of this ordered two thousand dollars' worth from the man that manufactures them. Well, the customer turned out bad; he didn't pay the thousand dollars, nor order more. Joe lost the machines, and owes the manufacturer two thousand dollars, which he is unable to pay.

"Joe writes that he might have stood this if a fire hadn't broken out, and burnt up his two thousand dollars' worth of machines."

He glanced up quickly, and caught a shade of sympathy upon the sawyer's face.

"The manufacturer is unluckily in a tight fix himself, and he is pushing the boy. Joe writes that this will ruin him and just when his business was most promising. I tell you, Gray, it's hard on your boy."

"Well, I don't pity him a bit—not a bit. He was determined to go to the city; now let him dig for himself. I gave him a thousand dollars to start his crazy business, mortgaging our little place here, and that's enough. Mother has pinched herself and worked her fingers almost to the bone, and I have slaved early and late to pay it off, and now that it's paid, do you think I'm going right back into that struggle again?"

"No, Jared, not for a boy that forgets his old mother, as Joe has done. Why, he hasn't written a line—not a line—to mother or me for a year, and now, when he wants help, he writes to you, Jared."

"Does he deserve help? Just answer me that; does he deserve it? I don't want to hurry you away, but I'm going to start the saw."

He turned decisively, and pulling the lever, set the saw rasping again.

"Very well, John," said Jared, coming nearer. "If that's your decision, I've nothing more to say. I shall have to write to Joe that you refuse. It does seem a pity to leave him in his trouble. He's not a bad boy, but dear knows where this will drive him. Good afternoon, John."

At home he sat down upon the porch again to think it out. He knew well the character of this father and son. Since Joe had been old enough to assert himself there had been antagonism between them. The father was arbitrary in his ideas of right; the son obstinate, and inclined to waywardness.

Jared's relation to the family was almost that of a son. He was to have married Sallie, the daughter five years before, but she had been taken ill three weeks before the appointed day, and died ten days later. Her last request to Jared had been to watch over Joe as an older brother, and to help to keep him from evil ways.

"Father is growing old," she had said, "and if ever you have a chance to bring him and Joe to a good understanding, do your best. I know you will do your best, Jared—even to sacrificing yourself a little, for my sake."

The final estrangement came when Joe declared that he intended to leave home. He had invented a machine for compressing sawdust into ornaments, and was wild over his prospects of wealth.

Through the mother's influence, aided by Jared, who hoped that gratitude would touch the boy's heart, the farm was mortgaged.

"Here are a thousand dollars," the father had said on the morning Joe went away. "You want to leave us, so go! This is all the help you can expect from me. If you lose it, you must shift for yourself. If you succeed, I shall look for you to pay it back. I wish you success, but I don't expect it."

No sympathy was in the words or tone, and Joe went away, feeling that there was no love for him in his father's heart.

Jared knew that Joe had been lacking in his duty to his parents. He had written enthusiastically of his prosperity, but had not offered to pay a dollar; so there was at least a little reason for the father's refusal of help.

But something must be done. This trouble and his father's refusal would be likely to drive Joe into recklessness and ruin. As he sat upon his little porch, he almost fancied he heard Sallie telling him that here was the opportunity she had hoped for.

But he did not know what to do. He had little knowledge of business. His early life had been spent in farm toil, and subsequently a lucky rise in land values had brought him resources sufficient for a quiet, humble life.

He saw that help from the father would certainly touch the boy's heart now; but without it, he felt that a hard task was before him. Sallie's request, however, was strong upon him, and he decided to go to Philadelphia next morning.

He arrived in the evening, and sought Joe's room. As he tapped, he heard Joe's voice:

"Come in, fellows!"

Jared entered, and Joe, who had come half-way to the door, stopped in surprise, and then turned, confused toward a table.

It was too late to hide what lay upon it—cards, a box of cigars, and two or three unopened bottles.

"I wasn't expecting you, Jared," Joe stammered. "I thought it was the fellows knocking."

Jared walked forward; and, clasping his hand warmly, said, I see you weren't expecting me, Joe. But I'm welcome, ain't I?"

"Yes, yes—certainly. Sit down. Here, take this rocking-chair, and give me your hat."

Joe was handsome, and in stature, attire and bearing a striking contrast to plain little Jared Harpwick.

"I see that I've come at a wrong time," he said, pleasantly. "Just when you're expecting company."

"Yes, you did—but don't worry about that, Jared."

"Joe, my boy, what kind of company were you expecting?"

"It wasn't good company," said Joe, recklessly, "I've just fifty dollars left of what was a prosperous business, and I don't know where more is to come from. In sheer desperation, I invited two dissipated young men here in the hope of winning more from them at cards."

"And suppose you had lost the money—what then?"

"I don't know, and I don't care."

"Why didn't you wait till you heard from me, Joe?"

"Well, I didn't expect any help. I knew just how father would act when you went to him—hardly listen to you, and maybe go on sawing. He never has treated me right; but Jared, I haven't done right either. I know that now better than I ever did. I was never a good son at home, and I've been worse away."

His voice had sunk from harshness to softer tones, and as Jared, looking his sympathy, let him go on, he proceeded in words that showed that now was the time to touch his heart.

"I have thought, Jared, that if father would help me a little, now when, I don't deserve it, I could feel better toward him, and we could be as a father and son should be. I should know that he thought something of me. But I can't expect it, and I'm not going to ask you what he said, for fear he has been hard on me, and to save you the pain of telling me."

"I've come with help, Joe," said Jared, "and I—"

A loud, confident knock interrupted. Joe opened the door and stepped into the hall. Jared heard him explain that he "could not have the game." There were angry expostulations in unsteady voices.

By and by Joe returned, and he and Jared talked long into the night, Joe fully telling the circumstances of his failure.

"I've come to try to help you," said Jared, "and to-morrow I'll call upon your creditor and see what arrangement can be made."

"I would go with you said Joe, "but we had a quarrel the other day, and I guess I used pretty hard language. He says he'll not see me again, and is pushing me now harder than before."

"I'll go alone, then, Joe."

"If you succeed, Jared, I promise you I'll try to be better to father, to compensate him for this!"

A shade passed over Harpwick's face, and he did not reply.

Next morning he went to see the manufacturer, and Joe met him anxiously on his return.

"I've arranged for the payment of your debt," said Jared, quietly, "and the manufacturer agrees to furnish you fifty machines, on time, to start again with. You are on your feet once more."

"God bless father!" cried Joe. "I'll write him a letter thanking him for his goodness."

"No, Joe," said Jared, knitting his eyebrows a little, "I wouldn't if I were you. Let me report it to him."

"Very well, Jared, but I'll go home in two weeks for a visit, and I hope we can meet then as a father and son should meet."

Jared went home, and next day he again trudged out to the sawmill. Gray was rolling a log into place.

"John," Jared began, "Joe is on his feet again."

"He didn't deserve it, Jared," he replied, glumly, picking a cluster of lichen from the log.

"And he is coming home to see you in two weeks."

He saw the old man crush down his pleasure, and his effort in making the incredulous response. "We'll see him when he comes."

He showed no curiosity to know how the matter had been adjusted, and Jared left him.

The two weeks brought the evening of Joe's arrival. Jared met him at the little station, and walked with him toward home. They heard the rasping of the saw from a distance, and as they went nearer, Joe's eagerness to clasp his father's hand and enter upon a close relation impelled him to start ahead.

Jared quickly caught him by the arm, and said, "Joe, I wouldn't—say anything to him about the money. A word might ruin my hopes. Just act as if there had been no trouble."

The father sat upon a log, and they came quite near before he heard them. He hastily arose. Joe sprang forward, extended his hand, and said:

"Father, I've come back to be a son to you."

It had been two years since they met, and Jared, anxiously watching Gray now, saw the old hardness come to his face. But as the father looked upon his boy, he saw a manlier look than he had seen before, and a look of regret and hope as well.

The hardness was driven from Gray's face, and clasping his son's hands in his, he said, with tears starting, "Joe, Joe, Joe, you're welcome home, and I'm your father!"

Gray turned quickly and stopped the saw. Then, hurrying to the end of the mill, he called loudly, "Mother! mother!"

His wife soon appeared, hurrying, as if she feared an accident had taken place. Joe was hiding behind Jared, but the old father caught him by the arm, and asked joyfully:

"Mother, who is this?"

"Joe!" she cried: "my son!"

"And mine, mother; and all forgiven and forgotten."

They walked toward their little home, but Jared said good-by very strangely, the three thought, and turned away.

He stopped after taking a few steps, and called Joe to him;

"I wouldn't say anything until to-morrow, my boy," he said in low tones. "It might spoil it all. It's glorious that this has been brought about."

He turned away, and the three, watching him, thought he had never looked so sad and lonely since he had lost Sallie.

Next day Joe and his father went to town to see Jared. Their rap at his cottage brought a stranger to the door.

"Jared Harpwick?" he replied. "Why, don't you know that he has sold his place here, and left this morning on the early train? I thought every one knew it here. But are you John Gray? Harpwick left a note that he wanted me to give to you."

He brought it, and the old man read:

"DEAR JOHN.—I have lost all my money, except a very little, and am going far into the West to begin life again. God bless you and Joe. Always be kind to him. He is a good boy at heart. Goodby. JARED."

Father and son turned to each other, knowing then how Jared had performed his task.

WHY THE BOYS CRIED.

The fence on the Eighth avenue side of the Manhattan Athletic Club grounds, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh streets, is always covered with theatrical posters. Within the past few days a large and highly-colored picture representing the death of the heroine in a melodrama attracted the attention of passers-by. The prostrate figure of the woman is life size, and the words "She is dead" appear as coming from the lips of a man who is standing over her.

One evening two small boys paused in front of the picture. They were ragged and dirty, but pert and quick-witted, as most New York gamins are. There was an unbroken line of pedestrains moving up and down the street. Suddenly, with voices pitched in a shrill key the urchin began to cry. Each one rubbed his grimy fists in his eyes and danced about as if in pain. Louder and louder grew their yells as their physical contortions increased in vehemence. People stopped and gazed at the boys in amazement. Soon a good sized crowd blocked up the sidewalk, and still the urchins kept up their racket.

A sympathetic young woman touched one of the boys on the shoulder and said: "Little boy, what is the matter? Tell me, and perhaps I can help you."

"No yer can't," blubbered the lad between yells.

"Why not? What is it?" asked the sympathetic lady.

"'Cause she's dead!" shrieked the boy, pointing to the picture, and then he and his companions gave vent to peals of derisive laughter, such as only New York boys can emit. The crowd speedily dissolved.—New York Times

The Art of Self-Shaving.

Men who shave themselves often complain of the difficulty that they experience in keeping their razors sharp. If they would adopt the methods of the professional barber in one or two respects they would find the task of keeping the razor in a proper condition by no means a difficult one. If you watch an amateur stroping his razor you will notice that when he turns it the edge is frequently next the leather —in other words, he turns it on the edge. This should never be done, as the fine edge is very likely to touch the strop and be turned. A barber always turns his hand so that the back of the blade is next the leather and the edge in the air. Again, a man should never use a strop made of leather glued to wood. A great many are sold, but all are destructive to razors. There is always more or less of a shock when the thin blade is brought against any unyielding substance, and the entire edge is frequently turned upward along its whole length. The worst cuts are inflicted by such a razor. The strop should be of leather, with no backing whatever. Another point that is little understood is the efficiency of hot water in keeping a razor blade sharp. Why this is so is a mystery, but the effect is unquestionable. Let a man who shaves himself frequently dip his razor into very hot water, and he will find that the operation is much easier and that the blade requires far less stropping than when this is omitted.

Take Care of the Schoolgirls.

Dr. Backus, of the Packer Institute, in Brooklyn, has been saying some severely common sense things to ambitious parents. In addressing a meeting of educators he very forcibly expressed his opinion regarding the responsibility which parents should feel in their physical care of the young student in her school days. He emphatically disapproved of the practice of keeping her on the piano stool for hours every day. "Put her to bed early and don't waken her in the morning," he said. "If she is not being overtaxed she will waken herself in time for school, and if she doesn't let her sleep. Give her a good breakfast, too, before she starts out. Her stomach, at that time of life, is a more important organ than her brain." All of which is sound sense and was so enthusiastically received by his listeners that it is to be hoped every scholar's guardian present took away the good seed to bear fruit.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Not a Local Disease

Because Catarrh affects your head it is not therefore a local disease. If it did not exist in your blood it could not manifest itself in your nose. It is a constitutional disease, and to cure it, therefore, it requires a constitutional remedy and a thorough blood purifier like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which expels all trace of the impurity in which the disease originates, and thus perfectly and permanently cures Catarrh. THE WORK OF CONGRESS

RESUME OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The tariff debate of 1894 did not begin in the house as was anticipated. The Republicans showed fight at the very outset and scored the first victory. Before the time arrived for Mr. Wilson to take the floor Mr. McCreary tried to arrange an amicable agreement by which two days, Friday and Saturday, should be given to the consideration of the Hawaiian resolution. Mr. Hitt, the Republican leader of the foreign affairs committee, expressed a willingness to acquiesce in the arrangement, but Mr. Boutelle of Maine wanted to precipitate the question immediately by calling up his resolution. Both sides were ugly, but after a lively row the speaker held that Mr. Boutelle's resolution was privileged. The Democratic members on the ways and means committee were not willing to go ahead with the Hawaiian discussion until the tariff debate had been gotten well under way, however, and the question of consideration was raised against the Boutelle resolution. The Republicans then executed a flank movement by refusing to vote. The Democrats found themselves in the humiliating position of not being able to muster a quorum. They were in check, and after revoking all leaves of absence Mr. Wilson reluctantly moved an adjournment. The Democrats confidently expect a quorum to-day, but the outcome of yesterday's Republican tactics will probably be that the Hawaiian matter will be entirely postponed until after the tariff bill is disposed of.

The most significant thing in the session of the senate was a resolution introduced by Senator Frye of Maine, declaring it to be the sense of the senate that the administration should not commit an overt act of interference in Hawaii pending the investigation of the imbroglio by the senate committee on foreign affairs. The evident object of the resolution is to declare the sense of the senate adverse to any American interference either direct or indirect should any coup d'etat be resorted to for the purpose of restoring the queen to the throne. The senator asked that the resolution lie upon the table for the present, and it is expected that he will make it the subject of some pertinent remarks before asking its reference to the committee on foreign affairs.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Although the lack of a quorum blocked the tariff debate yesterday—an order was passed recalling absentees—only ninety-eight members by actual count were on the floor when the house was next called to order. The prospect for a Democratic quorum looked gloomy. Still Col. Ike Hitt, the Democratic whip, expressed the opinion that a quorum of Democrats were in the city. Some communications were laid before the house, and the speaker announced the appointment of Messrs. Wheeler of Alabama, Breckinridge of Kentucky and Hitt of Illinois as the regents of the Smithsonian institute. Immediately the fight over the Hawaiian matter was precipitated by Mr. Boutelle of Maine. Although the Democratic members of the ways and means committee were willing to make an arrangement to devote two days to this subject, they decided, after the wasting of the day yesterday, through the persistency of Mr. Boutelle, to shut the Hawaiian debate out entirely until the tariff bill was disposed of. Accordingly when Mr. Boutelle called up his privileged Hawaiian resolution Mr. McMillin, on behalf of the committee, raised the question of consideration. Mr. Boutelle was sarcastic and Mr. McMillin rather contemptuous in the exchange of shots before the vote was taken. By a rising vote of 58 to 124 the house decided not to consider the resolutions. The ayes and nays were then demanded. The Republicans refused to vote and the Democrats could not secure a quorum, so the only thing to do was to adjourn.

On motion of Senator Gorman the senate agreed to adjourn until Monday.

Republicans claim that there is a quorum of Democrats in the city, but that they are opposed to the Wilson bill, and are staying away and thus aiding the Republicans in their fight. One Democrat, a Connecticut congressman, worked with the Republicans and refused to vote.

There was a light attendance when the senate met, only a score of senators being present when the vice president rapped the senate to order. Senator Hoar presented the following resolution, with a request that it lie on the table for the present:

"Resolved, That the secretary of the treasury be requested to inform the senate of what sums have been paid to the Hon. James H. Blount for salary, services or other expenses as a special commissioner to Hawaii, together with copies of all orders, vouchers and receipts for such payment, and also to inform the senate from what funds and under or by virtue of what appropriation or law the same have been paid."

Washington, Jan. 6.—The Democratic caucus met in the hall of the house of representatives last night to consider the Wilson tariff bill. There was a good attendance. Judge Holman was chairman and Mr. Alderson secretary of the caucus. Although the roll call showed only 124 members present, many came in during the call, and it was estimated that there were 147 Democrats in attendance when the proceedings began. There are 216 Democrats in the house and a caucus quorum is 108. The attendance indicated that in the neighborhood of forty who are in the city remained away. There were no conspicuous absences among the "kickers." Speaker Crisp offered a resolution declaring that it was the duty of every Democrat to vote for the consideration of the tariff bill, and also that it was the duty of all Democrats to attend the sessions of the house and maintain a quorum until the tariff bill is disposed of. In a ringing speech the speaker took occasion to rather sharply reprimand Democrats who had been responsible for the inaction of the house during the past three days. Several speeches were made for and against the bill, after which Speaker Crisp's resolution was adopted. Another resolution was adopted that it was the sense of the caucus that if a proposition for an income tax was reported from the committee that two days' additional should be given for debate.

The power of the committee on rules was invoked to break down the obstruction in the path of the tariff debate in the house. An iron clad order was brought in setting out the programme for the tariff debate and fixing Jan. 25 as the day for taking the final vote. This resulted only in side-tracking Mr. Boutelle and his Hawaiian resolution, as when the vote came to be taken on the adoption of the order the Democrats lacked nine votes of a quorum. At least twenty Democrats at the capitol either absented themselves from the hall or refused to answer to their names when called.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The Democratic quorum in the house has not as yet materialized. Saturday night the house adopted the extreme expedient of ordering the arrest of all members absent without leave, and deputies are busy serving warrants on these members, of whom twenty-one are Democrats and nineteen Republicans. From the Republican absentees, of course, no aid is expected. They can be brought here under duress, but they cannot be made to vote. This applies to some of the Democrats as well as Republicans, and if the opposition within the ranks of the Democratic majority can be organized, as some of them desire, enough Democratic members might refrain from voting to prevent the consideration of the bill in its present shape. Privately some of the Democrats do not hesitate to admit that the gravity of the situation is very great. The possibility of defeating the consideration of the bill strikes terror into their hearts, and some of them, like Col. Oates of Alabama, openly advocate a resort to the parliamentary expedient utilized by the Fifty-first congress of counting a quorum. Speaker Crisp asserts most positively that they will not be forced to this resort. He thinks a voting quorum will be here certainly on Tuesday at the farthest. If it cannot be obtained then, another Democratic caucus will be called. This is indeed what those who are dissatisfied with the bill are aiming at. They declare that as soon as they can demonstrate that not a sufficient number of Democrats will vote to consider the bill the leaders will be obliged to submit to material modifications which the disgruntled members will propose. Some of the Eastern Democrats who are fighting the income tax proposition are willing to go to almost any length to eliminate this feature of the bill.

The principal item of the senate programme for the week has been agreed upon. It is to be the consideration of the federal election bill. This programme, like all other prearrangements in the senate, is subject to change, but it is believed that it will be practically observed in this instance except in one contingency. It is barely possible that the affairs of Hawaii may again demand the attention of the senate to the exclusion of all other subjects for at least a portion of the week. If the government should fail to give explicit denial to the report in circulation that Mr. Willis has asked the Dole government to retire in the interest of the queen, there are sure to be a number of resolutions of inquiry introduced, and several very pointed speeches may be expected.

Great Winter for Logging.

Marshfield, Wis., Jan. 8.—From an inch to two inches of snow has fallen nearly every day last week, keeping sleighing at its very best for all kinds of hauling. Since Nov. 21 there has been an estimated snow fall of over three feet, but the recent rains so settled it that at present there is not more that fifteen inches in the woods. It is an exceptionally good winter for loggers, and the scale rule at many camps shows from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 banked, while last year at this time hauling had scarcely begun.

O'Brien County Indebtedness.

Sheldon, Iowa, Jan. 8.—Another suit has been started to invalidate the large part of the indebtedness of O'Brien county, on the ground that the warrants originally issued by the county, as evidence of indebtedness, were, by the constitution of Iowa, invalid, for the reason that at the time the indebtedness was incurred and the warrants issued, the indebtedness of the county was in excess of the 5 per cent constitutional limitation.

Great City in Embryo.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 8.—The Northwestern has agreed to put in a side track and erect a depot at the junction of its line and that of the Great Northern south of this city. Twenty business men from this place, Centerville, Yankton and Sioux City are ready to go there as soon as spring opens and boom the new town.

Store Burned at the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 8.—The store of Feltus & Treadwell, who own and operate a saw mill at Raber, forty miles from this city, was burned last night with all its contents. George F. Treadwell and family, who lived above the store, had a narrow escape. The loss is $6,000, with no insurance.

New Lumber Company.

Marshfield, Wis., Jan. 8.—During the past week a new lumber company, to be known as the Centralia Lumber company, was formed with mills at Centralia, this county. The company is composed of Charles and W. F. Kellogg and Messrs. Daly and Sampson. They are all experienced lumbermen.

Mayor Powers' Divorce.

Yankton, S. D., Jan. 8.—Mrs. Harriet Powers' divorce from her husband, William M. Powers, mayor of Yankton, was obtained upon evidence of infidelity committed in Chicago with a Yankton woman while Powers was officiating as world's fair commissioner from South Dakota. There was no denial.

New School Book Proposition.

Willmar, Minn., Jan. 8.—The annual meeting of the Kandiyohi County Farmers' alliance was held here yesterday. Part of the programme mapped out is to have the school books of the state printed by the convicts of Stillwater and furnished free to the schools of the state.

Election in France.

Paris, Jan. 8.—The triennial elections for a renewal of one-third the senators, took place yesterday. The results as far as known show that seventy-eight Republicans, nine Radicals and seven Conservatives have been elected.

The Allens Divorced.

Red Wing, Minn., Jan. 8.—A. H. Allen has been granted a divorce from Mrs. Lois Allen on the ground of adultery. Mrs. Allen, it will be remembered, figured in a sensational arrest in St. Paul last summer.

TRAIN MEN HELD UP

AN ATTEMPT AT TRAIN ROBBERY IN MISSISSIPPI.

Two Bandits Hold Up the Conductor and Porter, but Are Frightened Away Before Securing an Entrance to the Express Car.

New Orleans, Jan. 8.—The Mississippi Valley passenger train that arrived here this morning was held up at the crossing of the Vicksburg & Meridian railroad, just south of Vicksburg at 1:05 a. m. The train was stopping at the railroad crossing, waiting for the Vicksburg & Meridian train to pass when it was boarded by two masked men. A third man was standing guard on the track. Conductor Morris, in an interview, gave the following account of what happened on the train:

"We were just a few minutes out from the Vicksburg station and had reached the Alabama & Vicksburg road's crossing in the suburbs of the city. The train always stops at this point and the engineer waits for some one to come and flag the train. I was in the second car of the train. It is divided into two compartments, the part in front of the partition being a baggage compartment and the rear end a passenger compartment. I was standing in the front part of the baggage room with Mr. Dorsey, the baggage master, when I heard a man yell: 'Hold up your hands.' I looked through the door and saw two men, both masked, marching the porter down the aisle towards us. They had us covered with pistols and, of course, our hands went up. One fellow was a big man, weighing, I judge, about 160 pounds. He kept us covered while his partner, a small nervous fellow, went through our pockets. The little man was evidently new at the business. Dorsey was searched first. He had no gun and nothing was taken from him. Then they turned their attention to me. I had no weapon. He left a $10 bill in my vest pocket and other little articles which I had in other pockets. They then marched us to the express car and ordered me to open the door. I told them the door was bolted. 'Then kick it in,' said the big man, and I kicked. I was still kicking at the door when the porter, finding himself for a moment uncovered by the guns, leaped from the train and rushed for the rear. The two men jumped out and a moment later disappeared in the darkness. Just as the men got off the train the express messenger opened the express car. The robbers evidently became frightened when they saw the porter jump off and run to the rear."

Unkind Reference to Lowell.

London, Jan. 8.—Robert Buchanan, in a letter to the Chronicle in reference to journalism, "Zola and Vizetelly," complains of the neglect of original men, who, he says, are seldom lucky enough to survive as Zola has done. He concludes: Thus, when great men like Walt Whitman die the event is only thought worthy of a passing paragraph, but when a tablet is placed in Westminster Abbey in memory of an American flaneur and diner-out the newspapers overflow with enthusiasm. The Chronicle in an editorial dissociates itself from Mr. Buchanan's unkind reference to Mr. Lowell.

Caused by Jealousy.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Mrs. Maud Bond made a desperate attempt to take the life of Mrs. Mary Gardner to-day by shooting her three times with a revolver. Jealousy was the cause of Mrs. Bond's act. She went to the residence of Mrs. Gardner, on West Chicago avenue. "I am going to kill you," cried Mrs. Bond excitedly the moment Mrs. Gardner confronted her. She at once drew the revolver and commenced to fire rapidly at Mrs. Gardner. Three bullets struck her and she cannot live. Mrs. Bond gave herself up.

Shot His Son.

Elgin, Ill., Jan. 8.—Clark Burr, one of the wealthiest farmers of this vicinity, killed his son, Charles, with a shotgun last evening in a quarrel growing out of the latter taking music lessons. The young man, who was seventeen years of age, was endeavoring to draw a revolver when the father fired. The coroner released him in bonds of $10,000, which was promptly furnished by his neighbors.

Now She Floats.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 8.—The steel steamer Northwest, the largest and probably the finest vessel ever floated on fresh water in the United States, built for the Great Northern line, was successfully launched at the Globe ship yards in the presence of a vast crowd of spectators. Nearly every lake port between Buffalo and Duluth was represented by delegations of vessel men. A number of Atlantic coast ship builders were also present.

A Hawkeye's Suggestion.

Washington, Jan. 8.—A very odd but interesting communication has been presented to the house of representatives by Mr. Hager of Iowa, on behalf of John T. Ulbrich of Atlantic, Iowa. The communication is written entirely in German, and recommends changes in our system of taxation. He suggests the adoption of an income tax on the basis of the Prussian income tax system.

A Murderous Priest.

London, Jan. 8.—A dispatch to the Standard from Paris says: A sensation has been caused by the arrest of Abbe Bruneau on the charge of murdering Abbe Fricot, whose body was found in a well in his garden at Entralmes, in the department of Mayenne, France. Abbe Bruneau is also suspected of having caused two fires at the presbytery of Astille, where he was assistant priest before he went to Entralmes.

The Gold Reserve.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The net gold reserve of the treasury according to the figures furnished has been invaded to the extent of $23,000,000 in round numbers and is to-day $76,807,633, a reduction since yesterday of $3,061,982.

Tax on Beer.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The table showing collections from the tax on beer for the fiscal year 1892 and 1893 was made public to-day. The total amount collected on beer during the year was $31,062,743.

Why Did She Kill Him.

San Francisco, Jan. 8.—A sensational murder occurred here yesterday afternoon. Harry G. Pool, a young man well known about town, and of well-to-do family, was shot and almost instantly killed by Mrs. Shattuck, the aged mother of Estrulia Shattuck, a young and pretty chorus girl at Tivoli opera house, who had severed connection with the Tivoli company Saturday night and was to have left this morning with Henderson's "Sirbad" company. Young Pool was summoned to Miss Shattuck's home in the morning, where the girl's mother met him and demanded that he marry Miss Shattuck at once. Pool refused, and Mrs. Shattuck put a pistol to his temple and shot him dead. The woman was arrested for murder and is now a raving maniac at the city prison. The girl is also in hysterics and unable to talk. Speaking of Miss Shattuck's appearance with the Tivoli company as leader of the Amazon march in spectacular "The Island of Jewels," the Examiner yesterday morning said: "The pleasing young person with a sword who leads this march is perhaps as much entitled as any one to wear the title 'The California Venus,' as she was the model of the crowning figure in the mid-winter fair fountain in the Sunset City, and her fac simile in staff will stand amid the falling drops of water in front of the administration building as a sample of what California can produce in the way of female beauty."

The Markets.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Wheat firm; cash, 61 5-8c; May, 67 1-8c; July, 68 3-8c. Corn firm; cash, 35c; January, 35c; May, 38c. Oats firm; cash, 28 5-8c; January, 28c; January, 28 5-8c; May, 28 5-8c.

Minneapolis, Jan. 8.—Wheat—January closed at 60c; May opened at 61 3-4c; highest, 62 3-8c; lowest, 61 3-4c; closing, 62 1-8c; July closed at 63 7-8c. On track—No. 1 hard, 62 1-2c; No. 1 Northern, 61c; No. 2 Northern, 59 1-2c.

St. Paul, Jan. 8.—Hogs—Market opened slow and weak. Eastern markets were reported weak and packers were bearish. Yards cleared at a flat 10c decline. Cattle steady but quiet, there being little stuff offered; better receipts of fat cattle; stockers and feeders would sell readily.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Cattle—Extra steers, $5.75a6; good steers, $4.75a5.25; fair, $3.75a4.65; prime fed Texans, $4.10a4.40; fair to good Texans, $3a4. Hogs—Rough and heavy, $4.80a5.00; mixed and packers', $5a5.10; prime heavy, $5.15a5.30; butchers' weights, $5.20a5.30; light, $5.25a5.30.

Robbed a Robber.

Boston, Jan. 8.—Mary Kennedy, a domestic in the employ of Mrs. Minnie N. Martin of Cambridge, last night plundered a burglar who was trying to rob the house of her mistress. After supper Mrs. Martin and her daughter went out and left the house in charge of the servant girl. They had hardly departed when the servant thought she would run out for a while. When she came back she found the house lighted up, and on the way to her apartment she was startled at seeing a satchel lying on a table in the center of the room. The thought at once flashed through her mind that there might be burglars in the house. Cautiously entering the dining room, she grabbed the bag and made a wild dash for the door. The last seen of the man he was jumping from the piazza. The bag was found to contain diamond rings, gold watches and necklaces, and the Martins estimate their value at over $1,500.

Streets Undermined.

Folsom, Cal., Jan. 8.—As a horse and cart were passing along Leidersdorff street to-day one wheel passed entirely out of sight, throwing the horse off his feet. Investigation developed the fact, that the Chinese have been running mining drifts beneath the streets and the railroad, honeycombing that entire portion of the town, and probably extending under some of the business streets. It has long been known that a large body of rich auriferous gravel lay beneath the property owned by the railroad company, but they would not permit it to be mined. Considerable excitement exists as it is impossible to say how extensive are the workings.

New Cardinals.

Rome, Jan. 8.—Preparations for the consistory, which will probably meet at the beginning of March, are already proceeding. It is now stated that it will provide for six new cardinals, namely: Mgr. Jacobini, the papal nuncio at Lisbon; Mgr. Nercolla, secretary of the consistorial congregation; Mgr. Satoli, the papal delegate to the United States; Mgr. Forsti, the papal auditor; Mgr. Salvati, secretary of the congregational council, and Father Steinhueber, the Jesuit. The pope is not willing that any Italian bishop should be appointed while Italy refuses an exequator to the patriarch of Venice and twenty other bishops.

Found Murdered.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 8.—A special to the Democrat from Irving station, this state, says that Leroy R. Rogers, a retired business man, was found murdered in his home. He lived alone, and it is supposed the murder was committed last night by a burglar. So far as is known the murderer secured nothing but a watch.

Lobengula Still Lives.

Capetown, Jan. 8.—A dispatch from Palapye says that a special runner from Tatti brings trustworthy news that King Lobengula has arrived on the banks of the Zambesi river with 2,000 young and well armed warriors. It is added that small bodies of Matabeles are concentrating around Invats.

London, Jan. 8.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Vienna says the iron masters of Austria and Hungary have agreed to renew the iron ring for another three years.

Again Remanded.

Dublin, Jan. 8.—Nolan and Mearns, who were charged with having murdered Patrick Reed, have again been remanded for a week at the special desire of the attorney general.

A Clothier's Assignment.

Hastings, Minn., Jan. 8—J. P. Brandenburger, dealer in clothing, has made an assignment to N. B. Gergen for the benefit of his creditors. The assets are estimated at $7,085; liabilities not stated. The assignee has given a bond for $14,200.

STATE ELEVATOR KILLED

THE SUPREME COURT KNOCKS OUT THE LAW.

It Holds That the State Has No Power to Act, It Not Being in Accordance With the Police Powers Provided by the Constitution.

St. Paul, Jan. 8.—The supreme court has reversed the order of the lower court in the state elevator case, holding that under the constitution the state has no right to engage in the grain buying business; that it is not a proper exercise of the police power to regulate the traffic. So it is altogether probable that the elevator will not be built after all. In his opinion Judge Mitchell roasts the project to a turn, and says the state could as well go into the brewing or lumber business as the grain business. The title and syllabus of the case are as follows:

Syllabus:

Chapter 30, Laws of 1893, entitled "An act to provide for the purchase of a site and for the erection of a state elevator or warehouse at Duluth for public storage of grain, etc.," is an exercise of the police power of the state to regulate the business of receiving, weighing and inspecting grain in elevators. It has no relation to the regulation of the business, but provides for the state itself engaged in carrying it on. The police power of a state to regulate a business is to be exercised by the adoption of rules and regulations as to the manner in which it is conducted by others and not by itself engaging in it. The act in question is in violation of section 5, article 6, of the constitution, providing that "the state shall never contract any debts for works of internal improvements or be a party in carrying on such works."

Works of internal improvement, as used in the constitution, means not merely the construction or improvement of channels of trade and commerce, but any kind of public works, except those used by and for the state in the performance of its governmental functions, such as a state capitol, state university, penitentiaries, reformatories, asylums, quarantine buildings, and the like, for the purpose of education, the prevention of crime, charity, the preservation of public health, furnishing accommodations for the transaction of public business by state officers and other like recognized functions of state government. Order reversed. —Mitchell, J.

Another case of no little importance to the people of the northern part of the state is that of the State of Minnesota ex rel. J. N. Marr, relator, appellant, vs. Samuel S. Luther, county auditor of Aitkin county, respondent. The state brought the suit to tax the lands of the St. Paul & Duluth road, claiming that their exemption should have ended when they were transferred from the old Lake Superior & Mississippi road, to which they were first granted. The court holds that they are not taxable. Following is the syllabus:

Special Laws, 1865, chapter 8, entitled "An act in relation to the taxation of lands granted to the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad company," passed March 3, repealed the proviso attached to section 1 of the prior act (S. L. 1865, chapter 2), passed Feb. 23, and exempts the granted lands from taxation in the ordinary way as long as they continue to be owned by the company.

Assuming, without deciding, that laws passed subsequently to the adoption of the state constitution providing for the payment of a percentage on the gross earnings of the railroad company in lieu of all other taxes on its railroad and granted lands were invalid when passed, they were invalidated by the constitutional amendment of 1871 (article 4, section 32). Order affirmed. —Mitchell, J.

West Concord's Evolution.

West Concord, Minn., Jan. 6.—A petition to incorporate the town has been circulated among our citizens, and was presented to the county commissioners at their meeting Tuesday. The commissioners granted a hearing, and a special election will be called soon. Considerable opposition is reported against the movement, and a bitter fight will probably be the result. The town is now without a saloon, and they claim that as soon as the village is incorporated one or more saloons are sure to follow. Others are afraid of high taxes.

Frigid in Europe.

London, Jan. 6.—The severe cold continues throughout Great Britain, in many places the thermometer registering the lowest reported temperature of 5 to 10 above. It involves as much suffering as would a temperature of 20 degrees below zero in the United States. The people are entirely unprepared for such a terrible cold wave, and the result is that the suffering among the poor is intense. Many cases of death from exposure are already reported, and out door work has almost entirely suspended.

Straightening Out a Bank Tangle.

Hudson, Wis., Jan. 6.—The cases of Hughes vs. Hudson Savings bank and Farr vs. Hudson Savings bank, amounting to almost $5,000 in the aggregate, are settled by the assignee under leave of the court at 90 cents on the dollar. This disposes of all litigation against the bank. A first dividend of 15 per cent on the $600,000 liabilities is being paid this week by the assignee. About 50 per cent will be realized from the assets.

Fire Made Her Insane.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 6.—Mrs. Jessie Berlin is violently insane at the home of her brother in this city as a result of brooding over the loss of all her family property by fire a few days ago. She wants to throw herself out of the window, and she has to be watched closely to prevent her doing herself bodily injury. She will be sent to the insane hospital at Yankton as soon as arrangements can be made for her removal.

After Runaway Reds.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 6.—John Eastman, disciplinarian of the Flandrau Indian school, passed through this city en route to Parker, this state, where he goes to get three students of the school who ran away from that institution last Saturday night. Their names are Thomas Huntka, Felix Hemans and Frank Bear Elk, and were captured at Parker yesterday by the sheriff of Turner county. Mr. Eastman says he knows of no cause why the boys should run away, unless it was just for the sake of adventure.

BREVITIES

Fresh fruit at Arthurs.

Christ Hall went down to Crookston on business today.

Fred Eikhoff has been quite ill for the past few days.

Joseph Smith, of Red Lake Falls, was in town last Friday.

Congress will vote on the new Wilson tariff bill on January 29th.

Frank Kratka, of Thief River Falls, was in town a short time today.

A. C. Shmidt, of Crookston, was in town on business last Monday.

J. L. Johnson is again able to attend to business after his severe illness.

Wm. Marin, of Crookston, is doing business in this vicinity this week.

C. G. Rapp returned from his business trip to St. Paul last Saturday.

The North Side Roller Mills has a large stock of feed on hand which must be sold.

George Williams returned last Friday from Wadena where he has been for the past few weeks.

John Stranahan, of Watertown, S. D., arrived last Friday and will make his parents an extended visit.

Our teachers returned from their vacation last week and commenced school last Monday morning.

We have been enjoying some very cold weather the past week, something we can expect at this time of the year.

Indications are this afternoon that we will have one of the old time blizzards that you read about this evening.

The dance last Saturday evening in Bjerk's hall was attended by a small crowd but all who were there report a good time.

S. McDainard left for St. Paul last Friday with a car of stock. He went via the Northern Pacific from Red Lake returning home to-day.

A couple of "tin horn" gamblers were in town a couple of days looking for suckers but the run was evidently not satisfactory and they left on the next train.

County Commissioner Demers was a visitor in town last Friday. Mr. Demers was fresh from his scrap with County Attorney Holston but showed no signs of the encounter. Mr. Demers is a dangerous man to slander as he takes his revenge in the old fashioned way.

A New Yorker has just expended $180,000 for a stable for his horses. He is a clothing manufacturer, employing about 3,000 people, most of whom live in tenements, the furnishings of which do not average $50 each in value. It is far better to be such a man's horse than his servant.—St. Paul Globe.

A Populist editor writes: "The chinch bug eats the farmers grain the bee moth spoils his honey; the bedbug fills him with pain but the humbug scoops his money." To which a brother adds: "The lightning bug can't thunder much; the big bug has no fame, the gold bug has no argument, but he gets there just the same."

Emil J. Holmes has been invoicing his hardware stock this week preparing to sell out his business to C. G. Rapp. The transfer takes place today. Mr. Holmes retires from on account of ill-health and will return for the present to Goodhue county. He still retains his elevator. Mr. Rapp will take into partnership with him Oscar F. Post. The new firm will be Rapp & Post and they will handle both general merchandise and hardware. Oscar has labored long and faithfully for his promotion and deserves the congratulations he will receive. We regret to hear of Mr. Holmes' retirement and hope that his other interests here will induce him to return in the near future.

Rev. L. Evenson, of Thief River Falls will preach in the Norwegian Lutheran Church in the Scandinavian language next Sunday evening at 7:30. A full attendance of the congregation is desired.

County Attorney Holston, also editor of the Crookston Tribune, delivers himself of a crazy attack on everybody in sight in last weeks issue and all on account of the county printing. Mr. Holston formed a combination with two other papers and put in a bid for the county printing. He claims that dishonest means were used. We wish to inform Mr. Holston that the only dishonest, yes, criminal act that was made in that deal was made by his own combination. As for the assertion that the business men of Crookston were robbers and thieves, it is not our duty to defend them; but we will casually remark that if such people exist in Crookston, we feel confident that Mr. Holston would know them.

Philadelphia, Special.—Gen. Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, before he left for his home in Des Moines issued an address to knights throughout the country the country appealing to them to protest against the proposed bond issue. The language used in the address leaves no doubt as to the master workman's opinion in this matter. He says:

"The 10th plank in the preamble of the Knights of Labor platform reads as follows; 'That interest bearing bonds bills of credit or notes shall never be issued by the government, but, when needs arises, the emergency shall be met by issue of legal tender non-interest bearing money.' I wish every local assembly of our order in the United States to read the plank above quoted and discuss it at their first regular meeting in January. The reason for asking new agitation on this subject at this time is obvious. The secretary of the treasury, Mr. Carlisle, has asked congress to grant him authority to issue two hundred million dollars in interest bearing bonds.

I am also in receipt of letters from cotton regions of the South and from agricultural districts in the West declaring that the issuing of interest bearing bonds by the national government will be considered sufficient provocation to justify a call to arms. God forbid that we should ever again feel justified in using bullets in a country where ballots are so free. I suggest that upon the first attempt of congress to grant the authority asked by the secretary, the members of our order, from Maine to California, hold indignation meetings and send an unequivocable request to their representative members of congress.

The issuing of bonds is an outrage upon a liberty loving people, and should brand with eternal infamy every name connected with the disreputable transaction"

"Recent authentic statistics prove that a sum of money equal to the entire circulating medium of this nation must pass from the hands of the people of this nation into the coffers of the interest takers at least once every six months, and that means that on an average of every six months the people reborrow the money from the interest takers with new securities; thus the compound system grows and if not checked it will absorb all wealth and leave the laborer in abject servitude. Although through this process, more than any other, the rich are becoming richer and the poor poorer. No laboring man thinks for a moment that he escapes the burden: idleness never paid a penny of debt. Labor produces wealth, beautifies the earth and pays all interest, debts and taxes, and it is the duty of labor throughout the length and breadth of this nation to put its foot down so hard on the present scheme to increase the national debt that the very capitol at Washington will tremble from its righteous protestation."

Up in Ottertail County they have a way of getting clear of people who don't suit their ideas. They send them to the insane asylum straight. Frank Hoskins, the fierce editor of the Alliance Advocate, made an attack upon a Fergus Falls Bank, and was sued for criminal libel, but for fear this remedy would not be effective, a commission is appointed and he is run into the asylum on the flimsiest pretext imaginable. Hoskins is probably a peculiar fellow, but he is by no means crazy, as any one will attest who has read his paper. These proceedings will do more to bring Ottertail County into disrepute among the liberty loving people of this great State than a hundred fellows like Hoskins with free rein to their pens. Hoskins in the insane hospital will be more dangerous to his enemies than Hoskins in his sanctum. An effort is being made to have him released on a writ habeas corpus, and probably the fly high officials of that county may yet further feel the weight of Frank's head. If he don't shove'em over the road he is a goose.—West St. Paul Times.

Following a Notable Example.—The mayor of Minneapolis has been severely criticised because he adopted the suggestion of London's celebrated editor Mr. W. T. Stead, that the best way to control the liquor traffic in cities is for the athorities to consult with and be guided by the advice of the most respectable(?) (which means the largest and wealthiest of course) liquor dealers therein, assuming that they know more about the business than anybody else and hence are the most capable advisers regarding its management. While the theory is as full of holes as a skimmer, yet the unfriendly critics should remember that both mayor and editor find ample warrant for it in the traditional practice of the finance ministers of the United States. For many years the later gentlemen have done precisely what the mayor and editor think it well to do; They have counseled with the money changers, the usurers, the currency monopolists of the country regarding methods of constructing and manipulating our financial system, and have ever most favorably considered and given effect to the counsel received. It would be extremely interesting to know how many of the critics who vehemently assert that the liquor dealers would counsel and advise in their own interest cordially approve of the custom of our finance ministers and would indignantly deny that the money dealers counsel and advise in their own interest. If the country is best served by the custom of its finance ministers, why would it not be best served by the custom the mayor of Minneapolis proposes to inaugurate?

THE BEST MAN.

Showing That His Lot Is Not Always a Happy One.

There was a wedding yesterday!

Was there? Gracious, I trust this is not the bridegroom!

Oh, no! The bridegroom and the bride have left for parts unknown. This gentleman was the best man.

He seems somewhat broken up. Is he a young man of intemperate habits?

No; his habits are not bad. He is simply a victim of matrimony.

I dare say he had aspired himself to the lady's hand and has been drowning out his disappointment?

No. That is not it either. There were one or two exasperations among the ushers, but the best man was simply a faithful friend of the groom.

His fidelity seems to have brought him in for some [illegible].

It is true. His responsibilities and the anxieties of his position have aged him somewhat.

Is it indeed so serious a job to be a best man?

Indeed it is.

Why, what is there to do?

For 24 hours before the wedding the best man is the responsible owner of the groom. He tacitly undertakes to produce the groom at the church clean shaven, suitably attired and in his right mind, or else to take his place. If the groom shows symptoms of running away, he must shackle him. Some best men invariably handcuff themselves to their grooms on the morning of the day before the wedding as a reasonable precaution against accidents, for when a best man's confidence has been abused once or twice it makes him cautious.

At the convivial exercise of the day before the wedding several score of the groom's more intimate friends always insist on taking drinks with him. The cumulative effect of so much sympathetic stimulant is liable to make trouble, so the best man does not permit the groom to overindulge his feelings. The usual way is for the best man to act as the groom's proxy in this matter, so that the night before the wedding is full of trouble for him. Nevertheless he must be up early the next morning, must see that the bridesmaids have all received their bouquets, that he has the minister's money in the right pocket, that he has a wedding ring in each of his pockets, that the carriage orders are understood, that the groom has made adequate provision for his wedding journey and that the ushers are presentable and can walk.

All this he must do without letting the groom leave his sight. When the wedding is over and he has consigned his charge to the care of the bride, he takes the groom's place as host and sees in particular that the groom's friends from out of town are suitably entertained and shipped home at convenient intervals on their proper trains. Only when the last of them is [illegible] can he call his man and go home to [illegible].

Is a man ever best man more than once? Some very popular men have, [illegible] best man as often [illegible] times, but usually one or two experiences [illegible] to convince the experimentalist that matrimony itself is a less trying [illegible].—Life.

A Matter of Family.

Riding along the Clover fork of the Cumberland one day, I overtook a native [illegible], and we jogged along together. [illegible] of timber, crops and politics, and finally got down to [illegible].

"Have you [illegible]?" I asked.

"No," he replied, "I [illegible] county."

"How long have you lived here?"

"Five year, I [illegible]."

"Married, I [illegible]?"

"Yes; but I wasn't when I [illegible]. I worked by the day [illegible] and boarded with her. [illegible] I had. [illegible] home [illegible] about four mile below here."

"It's a very nice place, I noticed."

"Fust rate. I run it. I married the widder."

"Oh!" I said in surprise.

"Yes, it wasn't [illegible] inside of a year."

"Well," he said doubtfully, "I dunno shore. In course the [illegible] worth somethin, but countin in the widder, and her not a very peaceable disposition, it ain't much dern cheap livin as you might suppose it was."—Detroit Free Press.

He was standing in front of the train waving a red lantern. The shadows fell across the upper portion of his face, partly covered by an old slouch hat. The engineer reversed with a jerk and the train stopped.

"Boys," said the [illegible] farmer, "have ye robbed and captured the train?"

"Watch him, men! I know him by the photo I got in Chicago. He's an uncle of Bill Dal!"

"What's the matter with you fellers?"

"Why did you stop this train, you villain?"

"Nuthin, only thar's a bridge washed out down to Turkey Bend, and"—

But the rest of the conversation was addressed to the jug.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Telltale Look.

"How did you get on?" was asked on the Rialto.

"Oh, I met with fair success. I played Hamlet for the first time, you know. It went all right, except that I stumbled and fell into Ophelia's grave."

Question of the Hour.

Upon Afric's sunny strand they wandered, daughters of the forest in all their beauty.

Strewn upon the beach were the shattered fragments of the stanch ship that had been torn to pieces by the cruel waves the night before.

Presently they paused, shuddered and averted their faces.

At their feet lay the corpse of a woman, her golden hair all bedraggled with the brine, her bitter eyes staring to heaven.

"Look!" cried the tall native.

They turned again.

"Verily it seems"—

They were gazing in each other's faces, and the lips of one spoke for the hearts of both.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the normal department and the [illegible] department or Model school. The Normal department embraces:

(1) An elementary course for teachers of rural districts and elementary grades.

(2) An advanced course for teachers of advanced grades.

(3) A Professional course for teachers who have completed the required academic work elsewhere.

(4) A Kindergarten training course (at Winona and St. Cloud.

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificate are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota.

Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is $3.00 per week. The ladies' Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room, heat and light at [illegible] per week.

DIPLOMAS.—By a recent act of the legislature a diploma becomes a state teachers certificate of the first grade.

The next school year opens at Winona, Sept. [illegible] at Mankato, Sept. 4th at St. Cloud, August [illegible] and at Moorhead, Oct. 3rd.

DEVILS LAKE CHAUTAUQUA.

The first summer Assembly of the North Dakota Chautauqua comes off June, 28th to July 13th. An extensive program has been arranged, including many noted speakers, [illegible] The Great Northern [illegible] N. D. for programs and other information. A trip to the lake and assembly will make an enjoyable outing.

The Great Northern inaugurated its new train service to the Pacific Coast on the 12th inst. With sweeping reductions in rates, amounting to 40 percent in many cases. The rate from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Puget Sound was reduced First class from $60.00 to [illegible], to Spokane from $50 to $35 and to Helena and Butte from $40 to $25, with corresponding reductions of second-class tickets both through rates applying proportionately to intermediate points. It is the purpose of the Great Northern to make rates to help the development of its territory. It is much the shortest line across the continent, was built on business principles, and at a cost of about one half of that of the older transcontinental lines, and is therefore prepared to correspondingly well by its territory and patrons in rates and accommodations.

Last summer I was attacked with a bad case of flux, and after taking four doses of Beggs' Diarrhœa Balsam was immediately relieved and cured. I have sold it for the past six [illegible] and must say that it gives general satisfaction. J. W. Smith, M. D., Puxico, Mo.—For sale by J. L. Johnson, Druggist.

Waiting for Dead Men's Shoes.

Waiting for dead men's shoes is an old proverbial expression, and in connection with army officers and their wives still has a remarkable significance. Said an officer's wife a few evenings since: "I do dislike to take up an Army Register and scan the personals to see if any one outranking the captain is ill, or to keep an eye upon the old officers and figure out when they will be retired. But I'm not as bad as some others. Why, they get life insurance tables and study mortuary probabilities to see when an officer may be promoted by reason of death among officers outranking him. If some officers die as they should according to rule, the captain will be a general before he is sixty years old. Isn't it a mean business to think about? But we get paid back, for when my husband is old all the rank and file will be indulging in the same kind of speculation, and wondering why old General Blank doesn't die."—Cincinnati Tribune.

Memories of John Jacob Astor.

In a Philadelphia shop window a unique old relic of a piano is displayed, bearing the following inscription: "John Jacob Astor sold this piano to one of the first families of New York more than a century ago. Mr. Astor is believed to have been 'the first piano dealer in the United States.'" Then follows a copy of an advertisement in a New York paper, dated Jan. 10, 1789. It reads: "J. Jacob Astor, at 81 Queen street, next door but one to the Friends' Meeting-house, has for sale an assortment of pianofortes of the newest construction, made by the best makers of London, which he will sell on reasonable terms. He gives cash for all kinds of furs, and has for sale a quantity of Canadian beaver and Canada coatings, racoon skins, muskrat skins, etc."—New York Tribune.

TO PUT ON needed flesh, no matter how you've lost it, take Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It works wonders. By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it builds the flesh up to a safe and healthy standard—promptly, pleasantly, and naturally. The weak, emaciated, thin, pale and puny are made strong, plump, round, rosy, and robust. Nothing so effective as a strength-restorer and flesh-maker is known to medical science. Filthy Cod Liver Oil and all its disguised compounds can't compare with it.

They build up fat, not healthy flesh.

Practically, you can get the "Discovery" on trial. In everything that's claimed for it—in purifying the blood, and building up the flesh and strength—if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

On these terms, is any substitute that may pay a dealer better to urge and sell, likely to be "just as good" for you to buy?

Nothing else, at any price, is really as cheap. You pay only for the good you get.

HIDING PLACES FOR ROBBERS.

Subterranean Dens Found by Two Ohioans While on a Hunting Trip.

Two farmers, John Davis and Charley Schlosser, while out hunting recently near Delaware, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, accidently stumbled onto the hiding place of a band of robbers. They were prowling around in a very unfrequented place on the banks of the Olentangy, near the little Village of Clinton, when their attention was attracted to a deep hole in the ground, very similar in appearance to the many sinkholes which are found in this part of the country. Davis went down and found the opening to be an outer entrance to a subterranean passage in the side of a hill. Torches were improvised and the two men crawled into the entrance. About ten feet in they found two or three ledges of rock, arranged like a short flight of steps, which led down into a large chamber. The light from the torches showed the room to be nearly square, measuring ten feet. The floor, walls and ceilings, though formed only of clay soil, were as hard as stone or the cemented floor of a cellar. A hole in the wall near one corner of this chamber proved to be a door opening to a low, narrow passage way which led to a room similar in size and appearance to the first, except that the ceiling was arched.

Another door opened from this chamber into a third chamber, the largest of them all, with high vaulted ceiling formed by an immense arched roof. From this hall another gallery led to a smaller inner room farther in the earth. All four of the rooms were built in the solid clay, dry and hard, and devoid of all living things. Nothing of much importance was found, although the general appearance of the subterranean cavities gave evidence that it was once used by a gang of men as a storehouse or hiding place. The partition walls between the rooms were from four to eight feet thick, while the ceilings were from seven to fifteen feet high. The rooms were perfectly dark, save from the light of the torches. The cave had no ventilation whatever except that afforded from the outer opening. When the rooms were dug, how they were constructed and what became of the earth removed from them can of course be the merest conjecture. It seems however, that they were used by outlaws at no very remote period.

TO HELP HIS TRADE.

Why Hats Should Not Be Worn in the Theater.

Chauvin, the newly elected barber deputy, has just presided at a gathering of professors of the tonsorial art in Paris. The ample tresses of a blonde beauty were artistically disposed by the nimble fingers of an expert coiffeur, and when at the termination of the task he had placed a neat toque on the lady's head he rushed on to the platform, and in stentorian tones cried: "Coiffure l'Alliance." Shouts of applause rent the air, while the band struck up the Russian anthem. But the enthusiasm reached its height when Chauvin made his appearance, and, in reply to a cordial address, told his audience that he did not wish to touch on politics, and proceeded to congratulate his colleague on having invented a fashion which would replace the "Greek style."

He said the ladies must be prevented from going to the theaters in hats and bonnets. If this were done they must have their locks elaborately dressed, and this would give work to the coiffeur. Chauvin said that he well knew that it was difficult to oppose feminine tastes, but a monster petition might do something.

Finally this irrepressible Figaro remarked that, although he had been raised to the dignified position of a legislator, he does not consider that his old occupation is quite gone, but intends to stand up for the hair dressing interests in the chamber of deputies, his entrance into which opens out a vista of rather comical possibilities.

Pocket Telescope.

A very handy pocket telescope has appeared, which closes up to the thickness of an inch, is no heavier than an ordinary watch and can be carried in the waistcoat pocket. It is said to possess the qualities of a good, powerful field or opera glass. It is opened or closed by a set of aluminum bars with toothed gearing. This gives an absolutely parallel motion and the act of opening or closing by means of these bars is also the means of focusing. It is claimed that this glass is of high power and splendid definition, suitable to all purposes, especially to military and racing men, who are likely to find it a great convenience to be able to dispense with the cumbersome glasses hitherto in use.

Bold Wooers in Arabia.

Bashful lovers are almost an unknown curiosity in Arabia, for Arab "courtship" is unceremonious, to say the least of it. A young man sees a girl whom he would like to marry in another tribe. He rides up at night, finds out where she is sleeping, dashes up to her tent, snatches her up in his arms, puts her before him on his horse and sweeps away like the wind. If he happens to be caught, he's shot; if he is not, the tribe from which he has stolen the girl pays them a visit in a few days. A priest of the tribe joins the hands of the young man and girl, and both tribes join in the festivities. Most of the brave men steal their wives, but there are some few peace-loving youths who do not.—Philadelphia Times.

Tornado-Proof Houses.

An interesting idea from the west is a tornado-proof house. It revolves on a pivot, with a big weather vane at one end and a six-pound cannon looking out of a port-hole at the other. When a revolving storm cloud strikes the dwelling the latter necessarily turns to face it; and the six-pounder is automatically discharged into the face of the "twister," destroying it. This notion is adopted from the well known practice of firing guns from ships at waterspouts which approach dangerously near.—Milwaukee Journal.

A MAN'S REVENGE.

"I hate you, I hate him! I detest him, though I have never spoken to him. The very mention of his name is hateful to me, so I wish you would never speak of him to me," and Vera Thomas paused breathless after her vehement outburst and looked at the man lounging in careless ease on the veranda.

"But Vera," he protested, lazily, "Jack isn't such a bad fellow. He's handsome, rich and young. What more do you want?"

"Lawrence Raper," Vera answered earnestly, "once for all, I tell you I hate him, because—well because—and now don't let us talk of him. Are you going to the tennis tournament this afternoon?"

After making arrangements for the afternoon Lawrence took his leave and sauntered slowly along the dusty road. So engrossed was he in his thoughts that he heard or saw nothing until he was aroused by a hand laid on his shoulder and a cheery voice saying, "Well, old fellow, are you asleep?" and turning, looked into the tanned face of his chum, Jack Williams. Much to Jack's surprise Raper burst out into peals of hearty laughter. Jack regarded his friend suspiciously for a moment, then exclaimed: "Look here, old man, where have you been?"

"At Vera Thomas'," Lawrence answered, and another peal, heartier than the first, disturbed the summer air.

"Say, what's the joke? Don't stand there like an idiot, but out with it!"

Thus counseled, Lawrence proceeded to tell Jack all that Vera had said of him. A deep flush mounted to Jack's cheeks and an ugly light came to his eyes as he said:

"So the very mention of my name is hateful to her is it? By Jove, I'll make her regret that she ever said that But come along. We mustn't waste time," and catching hold of Lawrence's arm he started down the road. But Lawrence, who regretted having told Jack, hesitated and said:

"Look here, Williams, what are you going to do?"

"Do? I shall mount my charger and dashing up to the princess' castle I shall call on her to retract, what she said or I will raze her ancestral halls and carry her off to captivity. Now, will you come along?"

Five months passed, Lawrence Raper stood in the parlor of the Thomas home, leaning against the mantel, his eyes resting on the girl crouching before the fire, watching the play of the light on her soft hair, rounded cheeks and drooping figure, cursing himself in his heart for his falseness to her.

For he had been false, guilty of something for which he could never forgive himself, and she—ah, heaven! what would she think? What would she say when she knew?

His mind recalled the events of the last five months; his first conversation with Jack about Vera; then Jack's introduction to her, followed by the most marked attention and admiration on his part, and through it all, while the hot blood flushed his cheeks, Lawrence recalled the confidences he and Jack had exchanged, he telling Jack all that Vera said of him, Jack repeating with great glee all the conversation he had with the innocent girl, who, alas! trusted them both. Only the night before Jack had said, with an odd look in his handsome eyes:

"Our little comedy is drawing to a close. Only two more acts remain." And Lawrence had responded, somewhat anxiously:

"And the actors? What is to become of them?"

Jack had answered with a short, unpleasant laugh and turned away.

"Oh," Lawrence thought, "if I could but forget! Would to heaven I could live these five months over again!"

"Lawrence," a soft voice broke in on his musing, "I have something to tell you. You have been my dear old friend, more than a brother to me, ever since I can remember."

Vera rose and came to him, laying her hand softly on his arm. He did not look at her, but gazed moodily at the fire.

"Jack was here this morning," she went on, "and he is coming to-night, and—and he is going to bring—can't you guess what?"

Lawrence hesitated for a moment, then forced himself to say, lightly:

"What? A box of candy? The latest novel?"

"Don't jest, dear. I cannot stand it to-night," she said, unsteadily; then, after a short pause, went on, so softly that he could scarcely hear her:

"He told me that he loved me and asked me to be his wife. And oh, Lawrence, I am so happy!"

Lawrence could not speak. It was as if a great load had been lifted from him. He drew a deep breath of relief.

"Why don't you congratulate me? Are you not glad?" she asked poutingly.

He took her hands in his and as he looked tenderly into her eyes, said:

"Glad? I am so glad that words would not express my feelings. Dear, if I could only tell you——"

He stopped abruptly and walked to the window. She followed him in silence.

"There comes Jack," he said, as the familiar figure came up the street. "I think I'll vanish. I don't want to be a crowd. Good-by and—God bless you," and he was gone.

She watched Jack as he came in the gate and saw him meet Lawrence, as the latter ran down the steps. But she did not hear Jack's, "Well, have you heard the happy news?" nor Lawrence's reply, as he wrung Jack's hand, "Yes, old fellow, and I congratulate you from the bottom of my heart."

Jack looked at him a moment, then laughed a mocking, bitter laugh and said:

"Congratulate me—and her—six months from now," and he ran up the steps.

• • • • • • • • • •

It was a lovely evening in April. The air was balmy and redolent of the odors of spring. The chirping and twitterings of the sparrows, as they fluttered about looking for places to build their nests, were the only sounds disturbing the soft silence. The scene was serene and beautiful, but its peace and beauty were lost on Lawrence Raper, as he swung along the road, switching the grass with his cane as he passed.

He was thinking of Vera; when did he not think of her? and also of Jack, whose conduct was a puzzle to his old friend. For a short time after his engagement to Vera had been announced Jack had been the most adorable lover the heart of any girl could ask and then had come the change.

His neglect of Vera became as marked as his attentions had been. No opportunity to slight or humiliate her had been allowed to pass, and Raper, looking on in helpless silence, had seen the happy light die out of the girl's lovely eyes and pathetic lines come around her mouth, as she tried bravely to conceal her sorrow. But the world was observant and [illegible] not hesitate to criticize, sometimes [illegible]ibly.

All this passed through Lawrence's mind as he walked on rapidly and blinded him to the beauty round him. He stopped, [illegible] he came to the gate of the Thomas [illegible], [illegible] on a few steps, hesitated, then turned and ran up the steps. There was a light shining through one of the drawing-room windows that opened on the veranda.

"I'll not ring the bell," he thought. "I'll go in the window. I won't disturb any one. Jack (bitterly) will not be here."

He reached the window and stepped in, but stopped short.

Under the chandelier, looking very fair and fragile in her soft, white gown with a look of unutterable agony on her face, stood Vera. Before her, calm, cruelly self-possessed, stood Jack. He was speaking as Lawrence entered.

"Yes, Lawrence told me what you had said, and it was deuced hard on me, you must admit. Well, I couldn't bear to have a young lady hate me, so I did my best to change your mind, and I think," with a mocking laugh, "I have succeeded. You said several other unkind things, you remember. I really care a great deal for you—as a friend—but as for anything nearer or dearer——" shrugging his shoulders carelessly. "I never meant anything by our little comedy. I said I would have revenge, and, by heaven, I think I have had it!"

Vera had made no sound while he was speaking, but as he finished something fell from her trembling hands to his feet. He stooped and picked it up. It was their engagement ring. The diamond sparkled brilliantly as he turned it over in his hand.

"Ah, thank you," he said slowly. "I shall keep this as a fond memento of ——"

He never finished, for, with a cry of "You scoundrel," Lawrence sprung upon him. There was a short, sharp struggle, a crash of broken glass, and Jack found himself lying on the grass in front of the house.

Lawrence re-entered the room. There was no one there, and as he turned to leave he stepped on something and crushed it with his foot. He stooped and found a broken ring.

SMART MAN DRESSED DOWN.

The Sir Oracle Who Knows Everything Except How to Behave.

"I can tolerate a girl who occasionally says snappish things, and can get along pretty well with a conceited woman, but when it comes to one of those men 'who knows it all' and shows his superior wisdom by petty sarcasm, I just gather up my skirts and get out of his way as fast as I can," declared a spirited little maiden in the hearing of a Chicago Record writer a few days ago.

"His very presence makes me boil, and I want to scream and kick and grind my teeth," she proclaimed with frantic gestures. "A sight of him has the same effect on me that a red handkerchief has on a bull. Thank goodness, I don't find one of them very often. If I did, I'd promptly send in my orders for a quiet little funeral.

"You mention a new book or a popular opera and this smart man will immediately correct you with: 'Ah, yes; but that's not the way to pronounce the name.' He will hum some old air that you've heard since your babyhood and stop suddenly to ask you what it is, any way, and when you have told him all you know about it and more that you've guessed at, he'll say: 'That man didn't write it at all. Most persons think he did, but he really didn't. It was that old chap called——' And then he lights up your ignorance most beautifully. He is always ready to jump at a chance to make you feel small, and although he wouldn't own it, he knows in his own heart that he is rude to the last degree. You can never get the best of him—he must stay awake nights to conjure up mean things to say, and should you greet his remarks with contemptuous silence he would immediately sit down and begin a lecture on good manners, with: 'A lady is a lady always. She is ever courteous and gracious.' That's the moment when you grip your fists together until the nails pierce your palms, and you feel your heart thump like a sledge hammer. And that's also the time when you wish you were a man, so you could take something big and hard and heavy and argue with that sarcastic person until he would be glad to crawl away to the Cannibal islands and be eaten up by the savages."

SEVEN WONDERS OF COREA.

Among Them Are a Hovering Stone and an Indestructible Forest.

A Chinese paper describes the seven wonders which Corea, like unto other Oriental countries, possesses, and which played a conspicuous role in antiquity. The Corean "wonders" consist, first, of a hot mineral spring near Kin Saantao, which is capable of curing sickness and diseases of all sorts. The second wonder is the two wells, one at each end of the peninsula, which have the peculiar characteristic that when one is full the other is empty. The water of the one is intensely bitter, that of the other has a pleasant and sweet taste. The third wonder is a cold cave from which there issues constantly an ice-cold wind, with such force that a strong man is not able to stand up against it. A pine forest which cannot be eradicated constitutes the fourth wonder.

No matter what injury may be done to the roots the young trees spring up again like the phoenix from its ashes. The most remarkable, however, is the fifth wonder—the famous hovering stone—which stands, or rather appears to stand, in front of a palace erected to its honor. This is a massive rectangular block, free on all sides. Two men standing, one on each end, can draw a cord underneath the stone, from side to side, without encountering any obstacle. The sixth wonder is a hot stone which has been lying from time immemorial on the summit of a hill, and evolving a glowing heat. The seventh Corean wonder is a sweating Buddha. This is guarded in a great temple, in whose court for thirty yards on all sides not a single blade of grass grows. No tree, no flower will flourish on the sacred spot, and even wild creatures are careful not to profane it.

Civic Pride in Kentucky.

Things are a little dull in this town just now, but show us the town that isn't dull. The same state of things exists in other towns. Hawesville, Cannelton and Owensboro are all suffering, or at least they complain just like people do here. It's a habit people have fallen into more than anything else. It has become chronic with a great many. Get out of this, get to doing something, let your money go, especially where you owe it, and times will get better. If you have a dollar in your pocket and owe it let it go and hustle for another dollar and you'll feel better, and make times better. But Cloverport will be all right in the spring. She is the best town yet to her size and inches in the state. And if she is a little dull now she won't be so long, and we are going to stand by her.—Breckinridge News.

A YOUNG LAWYER'S STRATAGEM.

It Might Have Worked but for an Unexpected Incident.

The following story is told of Timothy Coffin, who was for a long time judge of the New Bedford district: When a very young man he was retained in a case of sufficient importance to bring out almost every resident of the town; so that the little New Bedford court house was packed when court was opened that morning. Coffin had been secured as counsel for the defendant. Although it was his first attempt in open court, he had made little or no preparation, thinking that he could get through somehow or other when the time came. Thus, when the counsel for the defendant came into court that morning he was greatly surprised, and no less agitated, to see the big crowd and realized the wide public interest in the trial at hand. He saw that he had looked upon the case too lightly. The prosecution was strong, and he had made not even a slight preparation. To lose the case meant the loss of a hoped-for reputation. Could he afford to commit this blunder by displaying his ignorance of the case? How could he get out of it? These were a few of the questions that are known to have flashed through the young lawyer's head, for afterward he himself told of the awful perplexity of the hour. Being a shrewd inventor, he devised a plan. As soon as the court had been called to order and the crier had said his little say, he arose and asked for a postponement of the trial, on the ground that he had just received a telegram announcing the sudden and fatal illness of his mother, who resided at Nantucket.

Scarcely had the words of this appeal proceeded from the lips of young Coffin, when an elderly woman quietly rose in the balcony of the court room and gave utterance to the words: "Timothy, Timothy, how many times have I chastised thee for lying?"

Timothy recognized the sound of that voice only too well. It was that of his mother. This being Timothy's first public case, the old lady had secretly come up to New Bedford to see how well her son would do. Her presence was, of course, totally unknown to him. The further developments need not be recorded here. Suffice it to say that Timothy Coffin in after years made sure that his excuses would not be thrown back at him by any member of his own family.—Boston Herald.

PUT AN END TO THE STRIKE.

How the Master of Balliol Dealt With University Washerwomen.

A sympathetic biographer, and one who is evidently acquainted with his subject, contributes to the December number of Cornhill some racy "Memories of the Master of Balliol." The master was a keen judge of human nature, and in the anecdotes comprised in this paper there are evidences of his keen insight into character. One trivial, though characteristic narrated, is quoted as follows in the Toronto Empire: Jowett's brevity of speech and dispatch of business never shone more than on the great occasion of his dealing with the refractory washerwomen of Balliol. These worthy dames struck for higher wages in one department. Twelve collars for a shilling was, I believe, the statutory price. They came to interview the master.

"The washerwomen have come to see you," said the butler.

"Show the ladies up," said the master. They clumped into the room to find him fiddling with the poker at the ashes in the grate. He turned round.

"Will you wash twelve collars for a shilling?"

They began to expostulate. He touched the bell. In came the butler.

"Show the ladies down."

Presently the butler appeared again. "They seem very sorry, sir—would like to see you again."

"Show them up."

"Will you wash twelve collars for a shilling?" piped his cheery little voice. A stalwart speaker began to make explanations. He touched the bell.

"Show the ladies down," said he, and down they went. Again the butler expressed a hope that he would see them.

"Certainly; show them up." They entered the room.

"Will you wash twelve collars for a shilling?"

"We will," they cried.

"Thank you—good day, good day," said the master; and touching the bell, he said: "Knight; show these ladies down"—and the strike was over.

Putting Down a French Bravo.

Several men in an uptown hotel recently were telling of duelling experiences they had had, when it came William H. Scovill's turn. He is a fine looking, modest man, with mild gray eyes, and resides in Hudson, N. Y. He spends much of his time here and is quite popular. His duel was thrust on him. Traveling from Paris to Nice in a car an insolent young fellow made himself objectionable to a lady. Colonel Scovill told the young fellow that he had to stop it or be ejected from the car on the end of a boot. He then sat near the lady and saw that she was not molested. At Nice he was waited upon by the seconds of the young man. He intimated that he did not care to fight, but remarked that if he saw the young man insulting any lady he would kick him. The next day the seconds called again, and said their principal wanted satisfaction and gore. The colonel had them bring him around. "Now, young fellow, put up your hands, for I am going to thrash you, if I can," said the colonel. The young fellow was knocked out, and the colonel remarked: "That will teach you not to be insolent to ladies.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Drawing Water From the Well.

The cheapest and easiest method of drawing water from a well one hundred feet deep is by a force pump and a windmill. To convey the water to a house on an elevation, a pipe may be attached to a pump, and to keep up a constant supply there should be a cistern near the house which would hold a stock for use in case of failure of the wind at any time. Where the cold is intense in the winter the pump may be placed in the cellar well protected by a bank over it and a double door, and the discharge pipe should be laid in the ground below the reach of the frost. It will be a help to fill the ditch in which the pipe is laid with sawdust or chaff, and to lay the pipe in a wooden box, so as to have air around it.—Rural World.

Wherever there is friction there is heat. Hammering a nail rod until it is red hot or forging a nail without fire are feats of the blacksmith.

Politeness.

Mrs. Murphy was known as a very sociable woman. She made it a point never to pass an acquaintance without speaking. One day she met Mrs. Casey on the street. "Good marnin', Mrs. Casey," said she. "How do yez feel this marnin'? Not thot Oi care a dom, Mrs. Casey, but Oi jist wanted t' open th' convoorsation."—Boston Budget.

Unique Show in Russia.

An international exhibition of machines, appliances and apparatus for the cleaning, screening, dressing and drying of grain and other seed will be held at St. Petersburg from March 2 to 16, 1894. The exhibition is organized by the Imperial Free Economic Society of Russia in St. Petersburg for the purpose of acquainting farmers, agricultural implement makers and agents, merchants, etc., with the best and newest machines, appliances, etc., for cleaning, screening, dressing and drying grain and other seed. The exhibition is being organized in consequence of the government's decision to enforce stringent laws with a view to stop the general low and often fraudulent grading of Russian export grain.—American Elevator.

KNOWLEDGE
Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.
Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.
Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

ANNUAL CONVENTION HELD AT MINNEAPOLIS.

Donnelly and Fish Lock Horns and a Lively Scene Ensues—Donnelly Unanimously Re-Elected President—Resolutions Adopted.

Minneapolis, Jan. 10.—The fourth annual convention of the Minnesota State Farmers' Alliance is in session here, with a good attendance. After the executive committee's session, which was held in the Hotel Brunswick, an adjournment was taken to the Lumber Exchange hall and the meeting called to order, Donnelly presiding, and almost every seat in the room being taken. Mr. Donnelly introduced Mayor Eustis, who made a brief speech of welcome, which was warmly applauded. President Donnelly thanked the mayor, in the name of the alliance, for the hospitality of the city, and then proceeded to make a few preliminary remarks, to the effect that the country was in the midst of abundance and yet in the midst of poverty. He admitted that the poverty came the closes home, but thought it was the result of bad legislation, and that it was the duty of the farmers of the country to stand up for their rights in the matter of good and intelligent laws.

The first business of the morning was the appointment of the following committee on credentials: Louis Hanson, Kittle Halvorson, D. P. Lister, C. F. Bokel, L. C. Long, C. P. Aldrich, A. Kruger, Senator Loomen and J. D. Vertailya.

As one of the most important pieces of business which the convention is to carry out this year is the revision of the constitution of the organization, a motion carried to suspend the rules and appoint a committee of one from each congressional district to look the matter up immediately. It was decided to leave the yearly fees of 20 cents as they were, but the admission fee of 50 cents was reduced to 25 cents. A committee was named on resolutions, consisting of a member from each congressional district in the state, as follows: J. G. Monson, Seventh; Thomas J. Meighen, First; Joseph Hanna, Third; Andrew Richardson, Fourth; Jonas H. Hose, Fifth; William Shenton, Sixth.

A resolution was adopted denouncing the placing of Editor Hoskins in an insane asylum. J. H. Burke of St. Paul made a lengthy speech denouncing what he called a conspiracy on the part of the Fergus Falls banks to place Hoskins in an asylum, and was especially severe upon Bank Examiner Kenyon.

Ignatius Donnelly and Mr. Fish locked horns, and the result was the liveliest session ever held by an Alliance convention. The doctor, in a long speech, arraigned Donnelly's political record, his personal character and his loyalty to the Alliance, and Donnelly replied, giving blow for blow. Fish rushed out of the hall and quickly returned with a bulky record of congressional doings, and demanded to be heard in reply to some things that Donnelly had said, claiming the privilege of rebuttal evidence. While he stood in the center of the main aisle of the hall vociferously demanding recognition from J. J. Vermilya, who had been called to the chair when the sage began his tirade, a motion to adjourn was made, put and carried amid a long and lingering chorus of ayes and a few straggling noes. Holding high in the air a copy of the Congressional Record, and demanding to be heard, the doughty doctor continued to talk, while the tired delegates shouted "Put him out!" "Put Fish out!" Fish was thoroughly aroused and not to be lightly put down. He strode to the platform from which Donnelly was preparing to retire. "Let all who believe in fair play and free speech remain!" he shouted. A little knot of about twenty or twenty-five delegates remained around the doctor, and he renewed his assault upon the Nininger statesman. As he talked Donnelly walked down the aisle and out of the door, and his followers did likewise. The Fish men were greatly excited, and were so busily engaged denouncing the whole proceedings that they heard but little of what their leaders said. He did not have long to talk, however. Some one turned the electric lights off and left the hall in complete darkness. The fight has not ended, and there is no telling what the outcome will be. The choice for president lies between President Donnelly and L. C. Long of Magnolia, with the chances in favor of Mr. Donnelly.

Second Day's Proceedings.

Minneapolis, Jan. 11.—Election of officers occupied all of the morning session of the Farmers' Alliance to-day, and the noon recess was not taken until 12:30. The only other business that came before the Alliance were the reports of several minor committees, an a request from the committee on resolutions for further time. Derreny vacated the chair when the election of officers was called, and J. I. Vermilya took his place. Nominations were called for for president, and half-a dozen of the best speakers in the hall arose, one after another, and put up the name of Donnelly, which was received with enthusiasm. So far as outward indications went there was no opposition to the sage. Mr. Long did not want the place, and the man who nominated him did not make any unpleasant reference to Donnelly. The election was by acclamation, there being no opposing candidate. Donnelly again took the chair and then made his speech accepting the office. There were three ballots for secretary, the place going nally to Afi. H. Hendrickson, who got 105 votes to 54 for C. H. Johnson. H. V. Poor dropped out after the first ballot. State Senator R. M. Probstfield was unanimously elected treasurer. These are the vice presidents, by congressional districts: First, J. I. Vermilya; Second, C. H. Johnson; Third, C. N. Perkins; Fourth, C. F. Stark; Fifth, George W. Day; Sixth, C. F. Boball; Seventh, R. J. Hall. L. C. Long was elected state lecturer by acclamation.

The Fish episode was not referred to this morning, and the convention got down to business as if nothing unusual had happened. Fish was not in the hall, although it is said that he could have passed the sargeants-at-arms had he desired to do so. He contented himself with looking in on the proceedings through the glass doors and passing occasional comments on what was supposed to be going on. An affidavit, bringing up some of his charges against Donnelly, was circulated in printed form among some of the antis, but it created little interest, for the subject was admitted to be worn rather threadbare. A number of members expressed a regret that there had been any trouble, but did not seem inclined to blame Donnelly.

The resolutions adopted were in part as follows:

Whereas, The people of our state and nation have recently had presented to them in a forcible manner the means used by the ruling powers to defeat the will of the people in more than one instance; and

Whereas, The various corporate and so-called financial leaders have for years ruled the masses—rich and poor alike—with a rod of iron and effectually prevented a fair expression of the sentiment prevailing among all classes; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we demand the immediate and unconditional taxation of all railroad lands for current as well as back taxes.

Resolved, That we call upon the governor of this state and the president of the United States to remove the present incompetent bank examiners, to the end that competent examiners may be appointed, and the public and private funds be deposited in solvent and safe concerns.

Resolved, That the course pursued by a part, if not all, of the so-called daily press of the Twin Cities in shielding and defending the criminal acts of the official, political and financial leaders of this state is a disgrace to them, the said cities and the State of Minnesota, and calculated to endanger the lives, liberty and property of her citizens, and foster and encourage the commission of crime.

Resolved, That in the recent decision of the supreme court of this state destroying the elevator law we feel that the said court has usurped the legislative function and set aside the will of the people, thus destroying their sovereignty.

Resolved, That we condemn the measure known as the state capitol bill, as well as the alleged means by which its passage was secured, and invite that new legislative body—the supreme court—to apply to it the same rule as was applied to the elevator bill.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the twine plant established at Stillwater, and we ask the farmers of the state to give the same their support, by using the twine there manufactured, and we also ask that suitable agencies for the sale of the product thereof may be established in each county.

Resolved, That we favor universal suffrage, without regard to sex.

Resolved, That we favor the election of president, vice president and United States senators by a direct vote of the people.

Resolved, That we favor the regulation by law of railroad and express charges, to make them conform to the present impoverished conditions of the people, and declare that the government ownership of railroads, express and telegraph companies is the only just and final solution of the problem.

Resolved, That last, but not least, we favor the adoption of the system of initiative and referendum, since all laws should emanate from and be approved by the people.

Resolved, That we condemn the act demonetizing silver and the methods and means used to secure the same, believing it impolitic and unjust to so contract the circulating medium.

Resolved, That we believe the selection of J. Sterling Morton as secretary of agriculture to be a deliberate and direct insult to the farmers and producing classes of this country.

Resolved, That we condemn the issuing of any more United States bonds, but we demand that there be an increase of the money of the country by the issuance of full legal tender notes, direct, without the intervention of banks of issue.

The convention adjourned sine die.

De Smet and Vicinity.

De Smet, S. D., Jan. 11.—County Attorney C. S. Whiting has just been prosecuting a case in the county court against a man named Hetland for illegally selling liquor at Oldham, this county. On the first count Hetland was convicted and sentenced to sixty days in jail and to pay a fine of $250. This case he appealed to the supreme court. On the second count he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to go to jail for sixty days and pay a fine of $100. He is now in jail. De Smet city a year ago put two steel cages in the city hall. Kingsbury county has already paid nearly enough to the city in rent to pay for them, besides having them to use for city purposes. Farmers report more snow in the country than for years. And they consider this a sign of good crops this year.

Valliant to Die.

Paris, Jan. 11.—The trial of Auguste Vaillant, the anarchist who, on Dec. 9 last, threw the bomb which exploded in the chamber of deputies, occurred to-day. Just previous to the trial a report was circulated that a bomb with a burned fuse was found outside the court. The place of justice in which the trial took place was surrounded by guards, and nobody was allowed to pass through their ranks unless presenting a pass and not until their identity had been fully established. The court was thronged with people when Valliant was brought in at noon closely guarded by policemen. At the conclusion of the proceedings Valliant was sentenced to death.

May Back Out.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Jan. 11.—John and Thomas McKinley, of the Mesaba range, Duluth, are here to-day and have visited the Moon mine. In an interview after they returned they stated that there were obstacles in the way of their going to work. The terms of Moon and others in the neighborhood make it doubtful somewhat for them to consider. A story was circulated in town yesterday about another coal mine being found north of town, but it turned out to be a canard.

Receiver Appointed.

Middlesboro, Ky., Jan. 11.—C. M. Woodbury has been appointed receiver for the Mingo Mining company, the largest coal and coke company in the South. The cause was a failure to meet dead rents to the American association. Assets are about $300,000; liabilities unknown.

Berlin's Unemployed Riotous.

Berlin, Jan. 11.—There was an attempted riot yesterday evening at one of the warming shelters. A crowd collected and became riotous, but the disorderly persons were speedily dispersed by the police and a number of them were arrested.

Ski Tournament.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 11.—At a largely attended meeting last night of the local Ski club the offer to hold the annual tournament here of the Central Ski association of America was accepted and Jan. 31 fixed as the date. Two hundred dollars will be offered in prizes.

Captured a Doctor.

Eau Claire, Wis., Jan. 11.—Dr. John M. Boswick of Rice Lake and Miss Margaret McCarthy of Eau Claire were married yesterday.

THE WORK OF CONGRESS.

RESUME OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Jan. 9.—The Democrats have secured their quorum and the Wilson bill is now before the house. The demand for the previous question in the house was carried 189 to 0—ten more than a quorum. Thirty minutes was allowed under the rules. The roll call developed the presence of a quorum, 179 members voting on the first roll call. The house adopted a special order fixing the 29th for a vote on the Wilson bill by a vote of 175 to 1. Mr. Wilson then presented the bill and made an address in its advocacy, after which the house adjourned.

The Hawaiian controversy waxes warmer from day to day in the United States senate. Nearly a score of resolutions have already been introduced on the subject, but the end is not yet in sight, and after more than an hour's sharp discussion the senate adjourned with the promise of prolonged discussion of the Frye resolution to-morrow, and a possibility of Mr. Turpie's resolution being called up to-day. Senator Hoar succeeded in accentuating with practical certainty the fact that Commissioner Blount was paid from the secret fund of the state department; this being substantially admitted by the Democrats. Senator Frye made an ineffectual effort to secure a vote on his resolution declaring for non-intervention by this government in Hawaiian affairs, but there was strong objection, and it went over until later this week, when Mr. Davis of Minnesota will speak on the subject. Senator Turpie of Indiana, presented a resolution alleging the inexpediency of annexing Hawaii to the United States, but declaring that the interference of foreign governments with that country should be regarded as hostile to this country, and he will probably submit some remarks on the matter in a few days.

Washington, Jan. 10.—This was a field day in the house for the tariff. The galleries were thronged all day and the floors were crowded. Each side put forth its most brilliant orators for the day's session. Mr. Wilson, the chairman of the ways and means committee, completed his speech begun Monday, and Mr. Burrows opened the debate for the Republicans with a three-hours' reply. Gen. Black of Illinois and Mr. Hopkins of Illinois followed. The good points of all the speakers were liberally applauded by the respective partisans. Mr. Haines, a Democrat from New York, in the name of the collar and cuff industry, fired the first shot into the Wilson bill. He displayed a gigantic petition, signed by 27,000 people, protesting against the collar and cuff schedule, declaring that if it became a law it would ruin this great industry. Mr. Wilson resumed his speech of Monday in favor of the bill. The session of the senate did not develop that interest members had anticipated. The consideration of the federal election bill was not begun according to the programme of Senator Gray, as no one seemed prepared to speak, and after some colloquy between Senators Chandler, Gray and Gorman over the method of procedure, the measure finally went over until next week. At that time, however, it comes up as unfinished business, and Senator Gray gave notice that he would press its consideration "reasonably and continuously until a vote was reached." Even the Hawaii situation failed to elicit the debate that was promised.

Washington, Jan. 11.—At the conclusion of routine business in the senate Senator Davis took the floor and began his speech on the Hawaiian question. Soon after he commenced speaking nearly every senator on both sides of the chamber was in his seat. Congressmen Keifer, Fletcher, Tawney and Boen were on the floor of the senate. Senator Davis' speech is the first that has been heard from the committee on foreign affairs since the passage of the resolution of inquiry on Dec. 14. The resolution on Senator Davis' motion was taken from the table. "Until the accession of the present administration to power," the senator said, "the present provisional government of Hawaii has been recognized by every civilized nation on the globe. A treaty has been consummated and concluded between the United States and Hawaii with all the dignity and solemnity that characterizes such action between civilized governments and nations. During all the history of our country the distinguished men who have occupied the position of secretary of state have manifested no uncertain attitude toward the acquisition of Hawaii by annexation." Secretary Marcy advocated it and it may be due to financial difficulties that negotiations were not completed. The Island of Hawaii has been for many years subject to internal unrest, which finally culminated in January, 1893, by the exercise of the most sacred right of revolution. American influences, American wealth, enterprise, civilization and Christianity had worked social and industrial revolution in Hawaii long before Commissioner Blount was sent on his mission of investigation." Senator Davis said he would not impugn the motives of any man, but he maintained that, taking the testimony which formed the basis of Blount's report, that peculiar document cannot be sustained. On the contrary, the action of Minister Stevens and the acts of the last administration, in view of all surrounding circumstances, had been fully justified. His presentation of the case was a strong argument in maintenance of the annexation treaty negotiated by Harrison's administration.

In the house Mr. Johnson of Ohio, the well-known free trader, denounced the Wilson bill, as also did Mr. Dalzell, a Republican.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The Hawaiian controversy consumed almost the whole time in the senate. Senator Davis of Minnesota concluded his speech in opposition to the policy of the present administration, and was particularly emphatic in his opposition to the act of the president in commissioning Mr. Blount to Hawaii and clothing him with plenary powers, even to the extent of control of the naval forces, without such an appointment having been confirmed by the senate. The defense with which he paraded to the senate the spectacle of the opera bouffe queen clamoring for her lost throne was too much for the grave and venerable senate and the galleries gave expression to its appreciation by applause so hearty that it required the usual threat of the presiding officer to clear the galleries to still the enthusiasm. Mr. Davis inquired by what authority the president of the United States derived the power to arbitrate this question. Who conferred such authority upon him? Who made him the conservator, the protector, the defender of the kingdom? Senator Davis in concluding, said:

"This is a great question, great in its facts, great in its importance and great in its constitutional aspect. The American people will judge this question, they are adjudicating it now in the midst of distress, which the panacea of legislative action has not cured; with the mills shut, the wheels idle; the factory sending up neither pillar of cloud by day, nor pillar of fire by night; with hunger and cold in thousands of homes, and over all the fear of the relentless of policy in fiscal administration tending to deepen all the distress with deeper ebony. The American people have cause to decide this question, and they will decide it in the sublime tribunal of the national judgment."

Save for a recess of two hours there was an uninterrupted flow of tariff oratory in the house. Interest in the debate is beginning to flag a little. The principal speeches were those of Mr. Breckinridge of Kentucky, Mr. Springer of Illinois, Mr. Dingley of Maine and Mr. Harter of Ohio.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The advocates of the income tax and the internal revenue features of the tariff suffered an unexpected reverse at the meeting of the Democratic members of the ways and means committee. Instead of indorsing the bill as drawn by the subcommittee it was voted—6 to 5—to reconsider, the entire determination reached at the treasury department some time ago. Mr. Bynum of Indiana made the motion to reconsider, and it was his vote which was decisive in securing the change. Mr. Tarsney followed with a motion to refer the entire subject to a Democratic caucus of the house, and this also carried by a vote of 6 to 5.

The opposition to repealing the tax on state banks scored a victory in the committee on banking and currency. The friends of the bill have been confident that the protracted committee struggle would end by a favorable report, but Representative Johnson (Rep. Ind.) executed a flank movement by moving to consider the previous question. Mr. Johnson's motion carried on a viva voce vote. He at once followed this up by moving that the entire question be put aside until after the tariff debate closed. This also carried, and the meeting summarily ended with the state bank men in the minority.

The bill of Representative Bland directing the secretary of the treasury to coin the silver seignorage now in the treasury was favorably acted upon by the committee on coinage. The vote on reporting the bill was 9 to 8. The affirmative vote was all Democratic, with the exception of Representative Sweet. The negative vote was Republican with the exception of Messrs. Tracey, Harter and Raynor. The Bland seignorage bill, as agreed on, directs the secretary of the treasury to immediately issue silver certificates of current denominations, up to the amount of the seignorage now in the treasury, viz. $55,156,681. These certificates are to be at once available to pay current government expenses. The seignorage is to be coined as fast as possible to redeem the certificates.

The tariff discussion was continued in the house to-day. Mr. Simpson made the principal speech.

The senate transacted no important business.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The real work on the tariff bill commenced to-day, when the bill was read by sections and is now open to amendment under the five-minute rule. From now on the bill will be in constant danger of amendment and the house Democratic leaders have urged upon all their colleagues the absolute necessity of their continued presence until the final vote is taken. The committee amendments necessary to correct imperfections discovered in the bill will, according to the rule of parliamentary procedure, have the right of way. The amendments which the committee offer are considered pending and take precedence over amendments offered by individual members. The bill was first read by sections under the special order and is now open to amendment in any part. The Democratic members of the ways and means committee had a meeting yesterday afternoon to decide upon the amendments to be offered. It will probably happen, as in the case of the McKinley bill, that the special order will expire with many individual amendments pending but not voted upon. The decision of the Democratic members of the committee to report the income tax and other internal revenue features of the committee's revenue plan as a separate measure removes one of the main dangers to the bill, as the opposition to the income tax feature was formidable, especially in the East, and some of it was of such a character that had the proposition been placed in the bill it would have arrayed many Democratic members against the whole measure. The fact that the proposition is not included in the bill will, it is thought, strengthen the attempt to remove the sugar bounty and substitute in its stead a duty of 1 cent on sugar. Should this be done, it would raise $35,000,000 of revenue and save $10,000,000 of sugar bounty and remove the necessity for and probably kill the income tax proposition which it is now the purpose of the committee to present later with the internal revenue bill. It is not believed that the attempts to restore a portion of the duty on coal, iron ore, lumber and other raw materials placed on the free list in the bill will be successful.

Two Children Burned to Death.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 15.—Two children aged four and six, named Hobson, burned to death while their mother was absent on an errand. The house also is badly damaged. The mother is frantic with grief.

E. R. Payne Has Assigned.

Milwaukee, Jan. 15.—E. R. Paine, president of the defunct Commercial bank, assigned to-day. The assignee gave a bond for $50,000.

Mrs. Kocena's Death.

Montgomery, Minn., Jan. 15.—The coroner has decided that Mrs. Kocena was frozen to death. She was an old lady, and probably fell sick and was unable to carry in wood to keep the house warm. She was living alone in the house. Foul play was suspected at first.

Ipswich, Mass., Jan. 15.—The larger part of the business portion of this place was burned. Loss $125,000; well insured.

THREE MEN ARE LYNCHED

TRIPLE HANGING AT A SMALL TOWN IN KANSAS.

Three Men, Two of Them Father and Son, Suspected of Murder, Are by a Mob and Hanged to a Small Bridge.

Russell, Kan., Jan. 15.—A mob of about twenty men entered the jail last night, took out J. G. Burton, William Guy and his son, John Guy, and hung the trio to a small railroad bridge a short distance east of the depot in this city, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock. About midnight the residents of the northern part of town heard a party of fifteen or twenty horsemen come in from the north and left their horses at the stock yards, where plans were arranged and then proceeded to the jail. A few citizens, who happened to be out late, noticed the suspicious actions of the mob, but were powerless to thwart the purpose of such a determined band of armed men, and watched the proceedings from a safe distance. No officers were around or even aware of what was going on until early this morning, so quiet were the actions of the mob. Orders were given by signs and obeyed without a word being spoken. The jail is a small wooden building surrounded by an eight foot board fence. In the jail were two steel cells in which the prisoners were confined. Guards were placed about the jail and it was but the work of a moment for the balance of the mob to gain an entrance to the jail building. About this time Burton gave a few loud yells and asked what they wanted with him. The masked mob began to break off the locks of the jail with sledge hammers. Burton was the first one taken out and proceeded to the spot selected for the lynching and left under guard, the balance of the party returning and joining the guards, who were watching the jail. The two Guys were then taken and marched to the bridge where Burton had been left. Ropes were placed around their necks. The leader then clapped his hands three times and quick as a flash all three were pushed off the bridge. The Guys evidently died from strangulation, but the noose on Burton's neck slipped around up over his chin and he was heard to breathe heavily several times when several shots were fired into his body. Each of the others also had a bullet sent into him. The mob then left as quietly as it came, going north. The presumption is that they were persons from the north part of the county, the home of the criminals, and the scene of the murder of Frank Dicing in July last.

Bad for Rebels.

(Copyrighted by the Associated Press.)

Rio de Janiero, Jan. 15.—News was received here to-day from the South of a character most encouraging to the Brazilian government and disheartening to the insurgent admiral. It was to the effect that the long expected and much relied upon reinforcements from Santa Catharina are unlikely to give anything like prompt assistance to their fellow insurgents who are now in Rioharbor. In fact it now looks as if the revolutionary leaders at Santa Catharina would be unable to lend any aid to Admiral Da Gama. The serious illness of Admiral De Mello on board the Republica has had an apparent disastrous effect upon the insurgent forces in the southern part of the republic. In Rio Grande Do Sul the insurgents have raised the siege of Bage and have left that city in triumphant possession of the government garrison. In a number of other engagements the revolutionists have suffered defeat and many of De Mello's men have been wounded or killed.

Holocaust in China.

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—The steamship City of Pekin brought details from Nanking of one of the most terrible fires on record, which occurred in the big temple in that city on Dec. 8 and caused the death of nearly 300 women and children. The annual theatrical performance in honor of the gods was being given in the temple. A boy threw a lighted cigarette into a heap of straw which blazed up, and the burning staircase prevented the people from getting out. There was a general rush to escape; some were trampled to death, others jumped out of the windows and were either killed or so badly injured that they were unable to escape the flames and so perished, while others passively awaited their fate, which was not long in overtaking them, and they were roasted alive or suffocated by the smoke.

Robbed, Murdered and Burned.

Livingston, Mont., Jan. 15.—Pat Connolly, employed by the Northern Pacific railway, watching the bridge that crosses the Yellowstone river at this point, was burned to death at an early hour this morning. It is rumored that he was robbed, murdered and the watch house fired to hide the crime. It was known that he kept a large amount of money in the watch house, where he lived alone. The authorities are investigating.

Rebels Attack Rio.

Rio de Janiero, Jan. 15.—An early engagement has taken place between the rebels on board ship and the government forts. The encounter was hot while it lasted, but the artillerymen manning the guns of the government forts did good execution and caused the rebel warships to retire.

Killed by a Spirited Team.

Hales Corners, Wis., Jan. 15.—Robert Horn was found dead in his father's mill yard here last evening. The young man had hitched a spirited team to a buggy, and it is supposed the horses ran away and severely injured him. Internal hemorrhage took place and when found he was dead. He was the son of Willard Horn, the proprietor of the flouring mill here.

Didn't Wait for the Law.

Cincinnati, Jan. 15.—Roscoe Parker, the colored boy who four weeks ago last Sunday night brutally murdered the aged Mr. Rhine and his wife, was hanged by a mob of the best citizens of Winchester and adjacent points in Adams county, at 1 o'clock this morning, about four miles from Winchester.

Says the Missionary Herald: "The so-called royal house of Hawaii has been its curse for years. The queen secured the passage of the bill for the infamous Louisiana lottery; restrictions upon the opium traffic were removed; a faithful cabinet was displaced and men of no character was placed in power. The final act was her attempt to abrogate the constitution and establish one of her own making. It was then that the better classes united and deposed her. Never was a revolution more warranted by facts."

Those who believe that thirteen is an unlucky number should fight shy of American 25 cent pieces. It has thirteen stars, thirteen letters in the scroll held in the eagles beak, thirteen marginal feathers, thirteen parallel lines in the shield, thirteen horizontal bars, thirteen arrow heads and thirteen letters in the "quarter dollar." But most of us are mighty glad to get them, thirteen or no thirteen.

Emil Frey, the recently elected president of Switzerland, was at one time working as a farm hand in the state of Illinois. When the war broke out he enlisted as a private in the Union army and served through the war, participating in many of the principle battles and experiencing the sufferings of prison life in the south. After the war he returned to his native land and became prominent in public affairs reaching at last the most exalted position in the republic.—Ex!

The supreme court decides the grain elevator law is unconstitutional. Although the constitution does not seem to permit it the state can, or at least does furnish its money to bolster up and carry on banks, it makes binding twine, appropriates money to build roads and bridges, to maintain local academies called normal schools, and it builds great hospitals to take care of the people's insane and deaf and blind and poor children. But to protect people from the public robbers composing the elevator and railroad combine is unconstitutional! The truth is the constitution was long ago abrogated, the monopolies have no use for it except to play hide and seek under its wings, and the supreme court simply keeps tally."—Albert Lea Standard.

A careful perusal of the Crookston Tribune would lead one to believe that there was only one honest man in that city, and he was the editor of the Tribune. Mr. Holston is assailing everybody in sight because he did not get a share in the county printing evidently thinking that by slandering the business men of his own city, he will curry favor with the farmers of the county. It is such papers as the Tribune and such men as Holston who are doing inestimable damage to the People's Party in to arraign the farmers against the business men of the villages and towns. It needs no argument to prove that the interest of the farmers and the business men of the Red River Valley are identical and they should be found working hand in hand to correct the political evils which exist and are keeping our country from being prosperous. If the object of the People's Party is to make war on the country store keeper its mission is indeed small. This, however is far from being the case. The platform is broad enough for all classes of people who desire a change in existing affairs and a reform in the present system of politics.

A bill has been introduced into congress providing that the secretary of the interior shall sell the Red Lake reservation pine lands in 40 acre tracts at his discretion after survey and inspection. If the bill passes it is intimated that the survey and inspection forces will be increased in order that these lands may be placed on the market. We have so repeatedly expressed our disgust at the management of this matter that we ask to be excused from attempting to properly characterize the course of the department in the management of this estate. Some five years have gone by and many many thousands of dollars have been thrown away without making any preceptible progress beyond the maintainance of a small army of [illegible] washing on [illegible]. At the present rate the government had better pay some one a bonus to take the [illegible] off its hands.—Lumberman.

Washington Jan. 5.—Robert A. Secretary Smith seems to have determined to commence selling pine on the Red Lake reservation with unnecessary delay. The appointment of Reed is the next step in the programme following the report of Special Examiner Park. Reed will go to the ground and personally inspect the work of the examiners, submit weekly reports as to the character and habits of the examiners and the reliability of their work. He is also instructed to report as to the feasibility of sales of any portion of the land, what portion is needed to be marketed etc. He will leave for Minnesota immediately.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

Board of County Commissioners of Polk County.

The board of county commissioners of Polk county met in regular session on the second day of January, 1894, at ten o'clock a. m.

All members present. The clerk called the board to order and stated as first business the selection of a chairman.

Commissioner Demers nominated M. E. Kirsch, who declined with thanks to be considered for the chairmanship, and in turn nominated A. C. Rhinehart. Oppegaard nominated C. P. Demers. The ayes and nays being called upon Kirsch's motion, the vote stood as follows: In favor of Rhinehart for chairman, voted Kirsch, Demers and Rhinehart; against, voted Lindem and Oppegaard. The clerk thereupon declared Rhinehart duly elected chairman for the ensuing year. Board thereupon adjourned until two o'clock p. m.

Board convened at two o'clock.

The bids submitted for doing the county printing were opened. Tenders were presented from Crookston TIMES, East Grand Forks Courier and St. Hilaire Spectator, in one bid; from The Tribune, Fertile Journal and Red Lake Falls Gazette, one bid, and from Polk County Journal and Red River Dalen, one bid.

The following resolutions relating to the county printing were offered:

Resolution offered by M. E. Kirsch: Resolved, that the contract for the county printing and stationery be awarded to W. E. McKenzie, publisher of the Crookston TIMES, under his bid on file with the county auditor.

Resolution offered by Oppegaard as follows: Be it

Resolved, that the bid of A. R. Holston, publisher of The Tribune, wherein he agrees to publish according to law, in The Tribune, the Fertile Journal and the Red Lake Falls Gazette, the financial statement, the delinquent tax list, commissioners' proceedings, and all other notices ordered published by the commissioners, be accepted—except that part relating to the job work—and The Tribune, a weekly newspaper, printed and published in the city of Crookston, county of Polk and state of Minnesota, be and the same is hereby designated as the official paper, wherein shall be published the delinquent tax list, financial statement, commissioners' proceedings, and other official notices ordered published by the commissioners.

The ayes and nays being called upon the resolution offered by Kirsch, the vote stood as follows: In favor of the resolution voted Demers, Rhinehart and Kirsch; against said resolution voted Lindem and Oppegaard. The chairman thereupon declared the resolution offered by Kirsch carried, whereby W. E. McKenzie is awarded the contract for doing the job work and county printing during the ensuing year.

M. E. Kirsch as hospital committee presented his report of the receipts and disbursements in the county hospital, which shows the disbursements to amount to the aggregate of $3,401.38. Total amount deposited by private patients, $370. Total amount due the hospital from townships and cities, $3,030.98.

Number of charity patients admitted during the year, male 31; female 8. Number of private patients admitted, male 7; female 5. Total 51. Number of deaths during the year, male 5; female 2. Number of visitors, 1,025. The report was adopted and ordered filed with the county auditor.

On finance—Oppegaard, Demers and Lindem.

On claims—Demers, Lindem and Kirsch.

On bonds—Lindem, Oppegaard and Demers.

On road and bridges—Kirsch, Demers and Lindem.

On taxes—Oppegaard, Lindem and Kirsch.

On hospital—Kirsch, Demers and Oppegaard.

On purchasing—Kirsch, Demers and Lindem.

On Co. jail—Lindem, Oppegaard and Kirsch.

Sections 24, 25 and 36, township 150, range 49, and sections 30 and 31, and s½ of section 19, township 150, range 48, was detached from school district No. 161 and the same organized into a new district to be known as No. 212. The cash on hand to be divided and the bonded indebtedness to be assumed by each of the respective districts to be established on the basis of the valuation as the same appears on the tax books for the year 1893, and the school house to be disposed of to the party offering the most therefore.

Sections 13, 14, 15, (tp 152 range 44) was detached from school district No. 108 and the e½ and s½ of sw¼, section 11, (tp 152 range 44) was detached from school district No. 102, and all of said territory was attached to district No. 24.

Sections 1, 2, 3, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 township 152 range 48 was detached from school district No. 98 and organized into a new district to be known as No. 215.

The present janitor, E. O. Estenson, was re-appointed janitor for the present year and his salary fixed at fifty dollars per month.

The assessment of $1,070 as credits to J. A. Duffy of Red Lake Falls for 1893 was ordered stricken off the tax book.

Tax application of Rasmus Sylvester for a correction in his assessment was granted.

The application of Peter Callahan for the refunding of $4.36 as excess paid on taxes was granted.

The clerk of court was authorized to transcribe the judgements found unsatisfied in dockets A and B to libra C and to receive as compensation therefore a fee of 5 cents for each judgement, the amount however not to exceed 75 dollars in the aggregate.

The following resolution was offered by Kirsch "Be it resolved by this board that the Crookston TIMES a weekly and daily newspaper published by W. E. McKenzie, be and the same is hereby designated the official paper of Polk county for the current year and in which shall be published the delinquent tax list, financial statement and all other official notices in compliance with his bid and for the prices mentioned therein said bid being on file with the county auditor.

Oppegaard moved, and Lindem seconded that the resolution be laid on the table.

Ays—Oppegaard and Lindem; nays, Kirsch, Demers and Rhinehart.

Motion lost; whereupon Kirsch moved the adoption of the above and foregoing resolution.

Ayes—Demers, Kirsch and Rhinehart; nays, Oppegaard and Lindem.

The chairman thereupon declared the resolution as offered by Kirsch adopted.

The bond accompanied the bid of W. E. McKenzie as county printer was duly approved by the board.

The penalty and interest accrued in the e½ ne¼ and e½ se¼, section 12, township 150, range 42, for year 1891 was abated.

Oppegaard offered the following resolution which was duly adopted.

"Resolved that hereafter no bid for printing or stationery furnished the county will be allowed or considered unless there is attached to or accompanies such bill a copy of the publications or a sample of the stationery therein charged."

The board having under consideration the delinquent seed grain matter it was agreed that the chairman appoint a committee who was to be charged with the duty of employing such methods as in their judgement shall produce the speediest collection thereof. The chairman appointed as such committee J. E. Oppegaard, M. E. Kirsch and M. Cornelius and in cases where any one shall be found delinquent on his seed grain loan on or after the 15th day of January, 1894, county auditor shall mail a notice to each of such parties wherein he or they shall be informed of the date and the place where they shall meet either one of the committee above named, and then and there pay over such delinquent amount, or on their failure to do so, they shall be required to furnish such additional securities as will in any event secure the county for the loans so advanced.

If any one shall refuse to pay or furnish acceptable securities, such parties shall be informed that they make themselves subject to criminal prosecution in disposing or having disposed of the grain on which the county held the first lien.

AN ARTIST'S LOVE.

He loved her passionately, hopelessly; just as some golden-rayed star, lost amid the opal trail of the Milky Way, might love a dazzling, glowing meteor that flashed brilliantly but transiently across its path.

Victor de Laney was an artist, with more than the usual share of an artist's poverty; albeit, genius did dwell in the liquid depths of his dreamy, southern eyes and in the white swell of his noble forehead.

True, people sometimes found their way to his shabby little studio, and sat for portraits; but they were invariably displeased and disappointed, for Victor lacked that one talismanic quality that had gained for many an inferior artist, wealth and fame, namely—the magic art of flattering with the brush.

But one day (a day Victor de Laney was ever afterward wont to associate with the fondest memories) she fluttered into the studio, accompanied by a grave-faced English maid, and in her brisk, business-like manner, made arrangements with him to paint a full-length portrait of her own dainty self.

"And, mind," she had added, a smile dimpling the corners of her scarlet lips: "I want a faithful portrait, not a flattered one!"

The artist wondered in a vague way, what flattery, however intense, could enhance the Dresden-like exquisiteness of the girl's beautiful face; the brilliancy of her violet-blue eyes, outrivaling in depth and hue the most limpid of Venetian skies, or the color of the golden hair that clung in such delicious gleaming ringlets about her broad, blue-veined brow.

He assured her the portrait would be all she desired, and silently resolved it would be just as clever a one as the skillful manipulation of his brush could make it.

And so the sittings began, and the days slipped swiftly by, as days will when one has an especial desire that they might stay, as Victor de Laney did; for while the beautiful face and form of Helen Rives grew life-like upon the canvas, under his magic touches, an imperishable image of her fair self was being delineated indelibly upon his heart, and he looked forward with no small amount of anxiety and regret to the day when her visits to his studio must necessarily cease.

Helen, with a woman's quick intuition, had noticed how the artist's handsome face brightened, and how his fine dark eyes grew widely brilliant whenever she entered his studio.

Soon Victor de Laney began to occupy her thoughts with a persistency that absolutely annoyed and chagrined her; for what had she in common—a wealthy heiress, the petted queen of the very smart set in which she moved—with a poor, struggling artist, whose probable genius was handicapped by an adverse fate?

But all things have an ending, and so to Victor's unspeakable grief, and a pang of regret upon Helen's part, that she vainly strove to suppress, the day of her last visit to the studio at length arrived.

She was standing gracefully against a heavy velvet drapery; the white gown that clung in shimmering folds to her softly rounded figure, the perfect curves of her slender white throat, and the delicate oval of her beautiful face, all artistically outlined against the soft darkness of the velvet background.

The portrait was well-nigh completed; so, with a couple of clever strokes of his brush upon the face he loved so devotedly, so hopelessly, and a few artistic touches to the diaphanous folds of the robe that clung to Helen's softly rounded form, it was finished, and Victor de Laney threw down his brushes and palette, with a bitter sigh that found an echo in his heart.

The portrait was a sucess.

Such a success that within a month Victor had more orders than he could possibly attend to.

Indeed, at a single leap he had gained the utmost pinnacle of fame, and he soon abandoned his shabby little studio, and opened one in the most aristocratic quarter of Paris.

In a corner of his new studio an easel always stood, upon which was a canvas that was invariably kept heavily draped.

One day an exquisite little countess, during the artist's momentary absence, managed to remove the hangings, to behold the lovely face of Helen Rives.

"That pretty American heiress!" her ladyship commented.

And then she suddenly bethought herself that it was Helen's portrait that had mainly contributed to the artist's success, so she comfortably concluded that that was the cause of its presence in the studio.

But the countess was never so mistaken.

Often when the studio was deserted, and Victor was cleverly bringing into existance the face and form of one of his many patrons, he would undrape Helen's portrait, and placing the easel in such a position that whenever he looked up he would meet the witching glance of her sapphire-hued eyes, he would then patiently resume his painting.

Weakness, one might say, in a man of presumed genius, but there is a simplicity to genius as well as there is a simplicity to childhood, and to what extremes will not a man go to, who is desperately and hopelessly in love?

The Grand Opera was crowded.

Mademoiselle F——, a distracting, charming artist, was to sing "Marguerite" in "Faust," and all the aristocracy, beauty and wealth of Paris was there to greet her.

In a box upon the left, sitting in a fauteuil a little apart from the gay and irrepressible company of gilded youth that occupied the box with him, Victor de Laney sat, his dark, stag-like eyes looking dreamier and moodier than usual as his gaze swept the rapidly-filling tiers of boxes, crowded with well dressed, handsome men and beautiful women, whose shimmering gowns and flashing jewels take on an added brilliancy in the soft, silvery sheen emanating from the huge crystals.

But all the personages of this gay assemblage are to Victor as so many melting, shadowy phantoms of a dream.

There is only one fair face in all the world for him—a face that ever remains silhouetted indelibly upon his memory—and for that face he looks eagerly, hopefully, to-night.

Of course Helen will arrive, he assures himself.

Every one who is any one is here to-night; and also a great many pretentious ones, who—in the eyes of the smart set—can lay claim to being nobody in particular.

One of the occupants of the box with Victor is a fashionably attired youth, whose handsome face is a trifle marred by a long and livid sword wound, extending the length of his cheek.

He is Gerald Aubrey, a crack swordsman, who, although comparatively young, has the reputation of having fought more duels than any other man in Paris, and that, in the gayest of cities is decidedly an enviable reputation.

He is sitting well to the front, and somewhat impertinently inspecting through his gold-mounted glasses each new arrival of any importance:

"There, that tall and striking-looking blonde with the languid eyes," he is saying, "taking her seat in one of the boxes yonder, with the aristocratic and stately gentleman—her husband. That is Lady de Rivescourt, and she has quite an affaire d'amour going on with an ugly little Italian count.

"All society is aware of the existing state of things. The sterner sex smile indulgently, and being Parisians, mind their own business; the women pick her handsome ladyship's character to pieces in their dainty boudoirs, and then send her invitations to their next dinner-party, or ball, as the case may be.

"Of course, Lord de Rivescourt is blissfully unaware of the whole state of affairs; but some day, a malicious woman's pointed hint, an angry man's retort will lay bare to the unsuspecting husband, the whole scandal. Then there will be a duel to the death, and, of course, that little rat of a count, will get his just deserts, for Lord de Rivescourt is a capital shot.

"Then, that smartly gotten-up young person occupying the box next to Lady de Rivescourt; the girl with the sweetly intelligent face, and the great flashing eyes, that glimmer dark as midnight 'neath the glowing lights. To a close observer those orbs are a deep sea-green in color, with shifting suggestions of violet and amber in their humid depths, and the owner of them is quite the pet of the swell set, just now.

"She has written some awfully queer novels, and has the art of making every man she comes in contact with her willing slave. Consequence is, half the women hate her with an energy worthy of a better cause, and are perforce obliged to be smilingly civil and mask their hate; for she can write such awfully scathing things, you know, and can say such sarcastically smart things, that it is a decided advantage to be upon the best of terms with her!"

And so the talk goes on, until suddenly both the speaker and listener's attentions are attracted to the box opposite, whose occupants are about to take their places.

A refined-looking matron, richly attired, first comes forward; and then looking radiantly beautiful, in a shimmering gown of Nile green silk, with a rope of milky pearls strung about her slender throat, and gleaming like frozen tears amidst the golden meshes of her fluffy hair, Helen Rives gracefully takes her seat.

Perhaps the intentness of his gaze, or it may be some occult magnetism lying in the depths of his fine, dark eyes, attracted Helen, for she suddenly glanced over to where he sat, and instantly a pink flush dyed her rounded cheek and she smiled in a way that caused his heart to throb madly, and a gladness that is born of hope to spring within his breast.

But suddenly his attention was attracted by a remark Gerald Aubrey had uttered—a remark that caused an ugly look to creep into Victor's usually dreamy eyes, and the hot, passionate blood he had inherited from his southern mother to boil madly through his veins.

Gerald Aubrey had leaned forward when Helen took her seat, and in sneering, malicious tones made an observation that reflected upon the honor of woman in general, and was seemingly pointed at Helen Rives in particular.

His bitter words were only the outcome of nursed-up wrath and resentment, and his companions laughingly treated them as such, for it was a well-known fact that Helen Rives had utterly refused to look upon Gerald Aubrey as a possible suitor for her fair hand.

Therefore his comrades treated his words lightly, as only the expression of the pent-up wrath that Gerald naturally felt toward the charming American.

But not so with Victor.

He hurriedly arose, his handsome face white with rage, and caught Gerald Aubrey anything but gently by the shoulder.

"Unsay those words," he demanded hoarsely, "or, by Heaven! you shall fight me!"

Gerald's debonair face grew a trifle pale, for the man gazing at him with such fiercely angry eyes, looked decidedly a dangerous opponent.

But he was brave to the core—was Gerald—and so with a slight upliftment of his dark brows, and a shrug of his broad shoulders, he calmly refused to retract his words, and accepted Victor's challenge!

The next day all Paris was talking about the duel; for next to an affaire de coeur, an affaire d'honeur is about one of the most interesting subjects the inhabitants of that gay city care to discuss.

Although Gerald Aubrey had the reputation of being the finest swordsman in Paris, nevertheless Victor de Laney drew first blood at the onset, and as the duel was not one to the death, he was of course declared victor.

As soon as the occurence become noised abroad, Victor found himself lionized to an extraordinary degree, and the most talked of man in Paris.

"He had fought in such a worthy cause, you know, and had wrested the laurels from such an expert swordsman!"

Invitations to the swellest events showered upon him; violet-scented and pink-tinted missives to the countess of this' dinner, and the duchess of that's reception, until Victor grew mighty tired of the honors showered upon him, and thrust all the dainty notes hastily aside, and resumed his painting.

There was a tap on his studio door one sunny afternoon, and to his "enter" Helen Rives entered, unaccompanied by her maid.

Victor arose hurriedly, and went forward to greet her.

Helen held out a daintily gloved hand, and with a few well-chosen words thanked him warmly for his chivalrous defense of herself, against Gerald Aubrey's vile insinuations.

"I was so frightened when I heard of the duel," she murmured, a startled look creeping into her blue eyes; "so afraid that perhaps you had been wounded."

A strange light leaped into Victor's eyes.

"Would you have cared?" he asked, bending eagerly forward.

Helen looked up reproachfully.

"Of course I would have cared. It would have been horrible had you been wounded. And then——"

She never finished, for Victor suddenly grasped her small hands in his own, and in another instant was passionately pouring out the story of his love into her startled ears.

"Perhaps I am presumptious," he concluded; "but oh, darling, if you would but give me one word of encouragement—give me but one vestige of hope?"

He paused, regarding Helen with an expression that was curiously composed of hope and despair.

That young lady after the first surprise over the artist's confession had died away, was complacently smoothing her dainty kid gloves, that Victor had well-nigh pulled off her hands in his excitement.

Then she looked up into the handsome, anxious face bent so near her own, and with a bright roguish smile, whispered three words that produced a wondrous transformation in Victor's expression, and caused him to clasp her tightly, despite her vain endeavors to extricate herself, and shower passionate kisses upon her smiling happy face, and the violet eyes that were gleaming bright with new-found love and happiness.

SPENT GINGER.

It Is Used to Adulterate the Unexhausted Root.

At a recent meeting of public analysts in England the subject of spent ginger was discussed. It was declared that ginger which had been exhausted or extracted by mineral water manufacturers finds a ready market as an adulterant of genuine ground ginger, and that the detection of such adulteration is infrequent, although dealers in honest spices have long groaned under the unfair competition to which such adulteration subjects them. The word adulteration is used advisedly, because the case is precisely analagous to the admixture of skim milk with whole milk. One of the analysts present said that in the case of ginger wine, made from raisin wine, etc., the ginger was bought in the condition of root, roughly crushed and then "steeped," as it was termed in the trade, for a long time in a liquor containing 25 per cent. of the proof spirit. Only the more delicate flavored matter was abstracted by that means, and the extracted or "spent" ginger was then sold for the purpose of adulterating ginger and spices, and a certain proportion of it found its way to the lower classes of ginger beer makers. It had a distinct value as a flavoring material. Probably the whole of the volatile oil had been extracted, but all the pungent resinous matters were left behind. He believed he was right in stating that the most valued flavoring matters of ginger were really capable of being extracted by water, and that the method which was adopted by the manufacturing chemist, who specially prepared ginger for the manufacture of aerated beverages, was first of all to extract the ginger fully with very strong alcohol, and subsequently to precipitate the whole of the resinous matter. After evaporation in vacuo, a residuum was obtained which was practically soluble in water, without any further precipitation of resinous matters. In support of the view that the real flavoring principle of the ginger root was soluble in water, it might also be stated that considerable ginger comes into the market which has been deprived of a small percentage only of its flavor by boiling with water. Subsequent drying leaves this product very much in the condition of an inferior genuine ginger, but if it be not sold as "spent" ginger" the fraud is obvious. Another analyst said he knew of an actual case where ginger, which had been thoroughly extracted with strong spirit, and which was merely a mass of cellulose, fibre and starchy matter, with no resin left, and practically tasteless, was used for adulterating purposes, to his certain knowledge.—Merchants' Review.

NOT SPOKEN AS THEY ARE SPELLED.

Some English Words That Are Likely to Puzzle the Uninitiated.

New York Sun: A certain magazine has been printing a series of articles on etiquette, and, after disposing of the treacherous knife, fork, and spoon, elevating and lowering the hats of mankind for all possible occasions, and providing rules for every possible emergency, from tipping over your neighbor's coffee to coming to life at your own funeral, this accommodating journal gives one really interesting paragraph on the proper pronunciation of English names. Of course every one knows the old catch names of Cholmondely (Chumley), Beauchamp (Beecham), Derby (Darby), and Majoribanks (Marchbanks). But it may not have occurred to this benighted people to call Lord Ruthven "Lord Riven" or to speak of the St. Maurs as the "Semurs." Berkeley must be called Barklay. Drogheda drops the hard "g" sound the Seymours are like the St. Maurs, "Semurs"; DeMoleyns is Domolins; Beauclerc is Anglicized; the letter "t" in Johnstone might better have never been born for all the attention it receives; Cowper might be written "Cooper" and be less delusive; Montgomery is called Munguanry; Blount, of course is Blunt; equally, of course, Brougham is Broome; Trafalgar has the accent on the last syllable; Villiers is called Villers by all but the uninitiated; St. John and St. Clair are pronounced Singin and Sinclair; the two surnames Knollys and Knowles are alike; Dalziel is Deel; Glamis is Glarms; and Leveson Gower (the Southerland name) is called Lewson Gor.

A GOLD COAST DUDE.

That's the Funniest Thing Capt. Brockelbank Ever Saw.

J. Brockelbank, now in business upon Tenth avenue, between 22d and 23d streets, is a retired sea captain with a rich fund of reminiscence regarding his adventurous life on the ocean wave.

"What is the queerest thing I ever saw?" he said, in response to an inquiry the other day. "Well, about the queerest thing, in a small way, is a Gold Coast dude. The Africans of that district would swap their immortal souls for a chance to put on style. Palm oil, tusks of ivory, gold dust, menagerie specimens—anything, in fact, that can be won only by toil and danger, goes for a bit of finery. The women like gaudy cloth and glass beads, but the dudes! Say, they're sights! The ultra-fashionable dress is a plug hat, a white shirt and tall boots. Not another stitch of clothing is worn.

What those fool negroes want with heavy boots and shoes in that hot climate is more than I can tell. Nevertheless, the footwear trade to the Gold Coast is quite an item. The customers have large feet, and a special line of goods has to be made for them. Nothing under No. 10 for a man would answer. The shoes for women have red and green stamping on the insteps, and from the tops of the men's boots hang red silk tassels. For a hat, shirt and boots—with a bottle of gin thrown in—the negro trades goods that easily bring $50 at New York or London.—Boots and Shoes Weekly.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

An Effective Plea.

A legal decision has been rendered in Philadelphia which illustrates the transitional nature of the progress now being made in electrical science. An electric light consumer disputed his bill on the ground that the meter did not measure correctly. There is no surer way of throwing the average electrician into the wildest excitement than by mentioning casually the fact that "electricity is in its infancy," but this truism was turned to profitable account when the case was brought into court. The complainant pleaded that notwithstanding the apparent progress of recent years in electricity, the science is still in the infantile stage; that the company had adopted a meter, which, in their judgment, was the best that could be found; that the affidavit of the defense did not indicate in what respect, manner or particular the meter was incorrect, and that it gave no standard by which such incorrectness or correctness could be tested. The court sustained this view, and entered judgment accordingly.

When They Meet and Part.

An Englishman salutes his friend with "How do you do? Good-by. Farewell." Similarly the Dutchman, "Vaar wel" and the Swede "Farval." A Frenchman says, "Bon jour! Au plaiser" (i. e. "De vous revoir"). An Italian, "Buon giorno! Addio! A rivi-derci!" A Spaniard, "Buenos dias! Adois! Hasta la vista!" (French, "Au revoir.") The Turk folds his arms across his breast and bows his head toward the person whom he salutes. The common Arab says, "Salem aleikum" ("Peace be with you.") He then lays his hands on his breast in order to show that the wish proceeds from his heart.—Lander und Volkerkunde.

Not Encouraging.

"Is the editor-in-chief in?" asked a stranger, as he sauntered into the city reporter's room at 8 o'clock in the morning.

"No, sir," replied the janitor kindly, "he does not come down so early. Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Perhaps so. Are you connected with the poetical department of the paper?"

"I am sir."

"Oh, what do you do?"

"empty the waste baskets, sir."

AN EMPEROR AT THE PLOW.

Curious Rites Performed by the Ruler of China at Certain Intervals.

In order to emphasize the importance of the cultivation of the soil and to encourage his subjects to follow agricultural pursuits, the Emperor of China sometimes performs certain rites at the "emperor's field," and goes through the form of plowing and other work of the husbandman. One day recently, says the N. A. U. Cable, the emperor set out at daybreak from his place, with a numerous and magnificent train of courtiers and others. Before breakfast the emperor arrived at the shrines of the diety presiding over agriculture and his majesty stopped to offer up his thanksgiving and sacrifices. After changing his dress the morning repast was served at the end of which the emperor proceeded to the field, at the four corners of which were erected four pavilions where the seeds of wheat and other cereals were placed. In the center were numbers of magnificently attired courtiers, each holding aloft a many colored flag, while on the side of the passage were scores of aged and white haired farmers, each having in his hand some agricultural implement. Placing his left hand on the plow and holding the whip in his right hand, the emperor began the ceremony of the occasion. By prearrangement the officers did their allotted share, some wielding the agricultural implements, while others scattered seeds out of the baskets as if sowing, while the emperor was busied with the plow which was hitched to a richly caparisoned bullock, draped in yellow and led by two of the emperor's bodyguards. On the emperor finishing his round at the plow the three princes were ordered to go through the performance, and after them nine high courtiers had their turn, after which the performance closed. Having received the greeting of his officers the emperor returned to his palace.

TO KEEP HER YOUTH, a woman must keep her health. All the "beautifiers" in the world won't do as much for you as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. With that, you can see the good that's done, as well as feel it. That regulates all the womanly functions, improves your digestion, enriches your blood, brings refreshing sleep, and builds up, strengthens, and repairs every part of your system.

In every one of the "female complaints" and weaknesses that make women old and miserable, the "Prescription" will certainly cure. It's the only guaranteed remedy. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in the case of every weak or suffering woman, she'll have her money back.

There's the very best evidence that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure your Catarrh. It's this promise, made by the makers of the medicine: "If your Catarrh can't be cured, no matter what your case is, we'll pay you $500."

Fog Signaling by Electricity.

A method of fog signaling has been introduced on several branches of the North London system of the Great Northern railway of England, which obviates much of the unreliability and complexity of the systems hitherto used. A wire is laid in a pipe, from the signal box to the various signals, at which brushes of copper project some four or five inches above the sipe of the rail nearest the signal. A similar brush, which connects with an indicator and bell on the engine, is fixed to the engine foot-plate. When the signal points to danger the two brushes come into contact, and the ringing of the bell and the warning of the driver by a miniature signal on the engine that the line is not clear is the result. The arrangement can be readily switched off, in fine weather, so as to become inoperative. This electrical device seems to be the most simple as well as the most efficient means yet resorted to for fog signaling, and the Great Northern railway intends to adopt it over the whole of its lines.

An English Luncheon.

On one occasion I see a company of poets, philosophers, and fanatics at a table presided over by a young lady the daughter of the house. I sat there wiping my forehead (they do the eating. I the perspiring) as I saw slices of beef disappearing with vegetables, mustard, etc. The host then asks me what I think of the food and the mode of eating. I reply instinctively: "It is horrible!" This reply sets the gentlemen roaring and my hostess blushing. How can a little stomach hold such an enormous lunch? Even women and children take large quantities. What vitality these people have, to be sure! The waste of vitality in their climate and under their conditions of life must be enormous; it has, of course, to be replaced.—By a Hindoo in London.

Winter Roses.

There is an unwritten code in the giving of flowers which directs that it is better in the eyes of a New York up-to-date girl to receive a single perfect long-stemmed rose from the smartest shop in town than a whole roomful of ordinary roses sent in from an unknown florist. The present fashion in the wearing of flowers restricts them to a large and fragrant American beauty rose or a bunch of violets. The chrysanthemum has had its day and is going out of season now, but the rage for violets increases, and the fickle fancy of woman is true to the modest little purple flower all the year around. She tucks them in the belt of her summer gown or pins them on her sealskin coat, and at one of the recent swell balls a belle had a gown all trimmed with violets, which looked very pretty until the flowers began to fade.—New York Sun.

SILVER IN WASTE PAPER.

How the Clippings of Sensitized Photograph Papers Are Utilized.

"Refiners of nitrate of silver for the use of photographers," said one of the profession to the Minneapolis Tribune, "have agents traveling constantly about the country collecting the waste clippings of sensitized paper that accumulate in every photograph gallery. They buy all they can find, and pay for it in new nitrate, allowing the photographer a good round price for his waste. The waste is shipped to the refiners, where the nitrate in the paper is separated from it by chemical process, and prepared for market again. This re-refined nitrate is as good as it was originally, and is sold for just as much. The refiners, of course, make a big profit out of the waste, and the photographer is able to get a good supply of material for the scraps that would otherwise be of no use to him.

"When one thinks of the great number of photograph galleries and the studios in the country, and the fact that the waste paper of them all is closely gathered by the refiners at a price that will average $1 a pound, he may get some idea of the proportions of a business that is utterly unknown outside of the persons directly interested. Not only the scraps of silver sensitized paper, but those of the paper treated with solutions of gold, are eagerly sought by the refiners, and the photographer is always very glad to exchange his accumulation of, to him, worthless waste for a neat stock of valuable nitrate."

THE WORK OF CONGRESS.

RESUME OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Jan. 16. — Congressman Boen delivered his maiden effort in the house last evening, occupying an hour of the time allotted for general debate on the tariff. Mr. Boen, however, did not debate the tariff question, prefacing his remarks by the statement that he did not intend to try to convince any one that protection or free trade was the proper governmental policy. His speech was for the farmer, pure and simple, for some sort of legislation which would give him an equal show with the manufacturer under any scheme of revenue or taxation that might be in force. Commencing with the axiom about "soil and toil" being the ultimate sources of all wealth, Mr. Boen led his audience along to the point where he could introduce a bill of his own as the proper remedy for the discriminations under which the producing classes are laboring. Mr. Boen's bill recognizes the ancient system of barter which he contends must be reversed to meet the continued contraction of the currency. It provides very briefly that manufactured articles coming to this country in exchange for farm products shall be admitted free of all charge for duty save such as will create a revenue large enough to meet the actual expenses caused by his system of exchange. If this law were enacted, he argued, the farmers of his section could combine and fill their little warehouse at Wall Lake with wheat. This they would ship to Liverpool in exchange for an equal value in manufactured articles, and since under the law, wheat could be exchanged for steel rails duty free, he thinks the railroads might take wheat for their freight charges, so that the only money of account which would be necessary would be enough to pay the insurance. With such a law as this the Minnesota Populist would not care how high or how thick the Chinese wall of protection might be, for the farmers would have this convenient breach.

The consideration of the tariff bill under the five-minute rule was begun to-day. Only three amendments were disposed of, none of material moment. The attempt of Messrs. De Forest and Sperry (Dems. Conn.) to secure the adoption of an amendment increasing the duty on Sumatra cigar wrappers to the present rates was defeated. The debate concluded with a brilliant tilt between Mr. Cockran and Mr. Reed.

In the executive session of the senate Senator Hill opened the fight against the confirmation of Hornblower for associate judge of the supreme court, and Senator Vilas of Wisconsin, the only Democratic member of the judiciary committee who supported Mr. Hornblower in the committee room, made a strong appeal for confirmation. After a lengthy discussion Hornblower's nomination was rejected by a majority of 6.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Very little progress was made with the amendment to the tariff bill. The Republicans under the leadership of Mr. Burrows made another struggle to secure the right to offer amendments alternately with Mr. Wilson, but, as yesterday, the chairman held, in view of the precedent of procedure when the McKinley bill was under consideration, that Mr. Wilson, on behalf of the majority of the committee, was entitled to perfect the bill before it was thrown open to miscellaneous amendment. Several minor amendments were agreed to, the most important being that to increase the duty on condensed milk to 2 cents a pound. Almost the entire time was spent in discussing the date upon which free wool and the corresponding reduction on wool should go into effect. No conclusion was reached.

The Hawaiian controversy was again brought to the attention of the senate and the president's message communicating the recent diplomatic correspondence afforded Senator Hoar an opportunity to speak on the matter, and he showed by quoting from the Hawaiian constitution, that the queen, in her recent protest that she could not promise amnesty to the members of the provisional government was only confining herself to the limitations of the constitution, which does not confer on the crown such absolute right of granting amnesty, but requires that pardon can be granted only by the concurrence of the cabinet and other constitutional officers.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Some routine business preceded the resumption of the tariff debate. The day set apart for eulogies on the late Senator Stanford of California, was, at the request of Mr. Loud, postponed until Feb. 10. The speaker announced the following committee appointments: Foreign affairs, Mr. Money, Mississippi; judiciary, Mr. Dearmond, Missouri; naval affairs and expenditures in the interior department, Mr. Griffin, Michigan; library, Messrs. Compton, Maryland; Bartlett, New York, and Adams, Pennsylvania. The house then went into committee of the whole for the consideration of the tariff bill. The pending amendments were those fixing the date on which the free wool schedules should go into effect. Mr. Morse (Rep. Mass.) maintained that the country had been carried by the tariff reform party by false pretenses, as shown by the result of the elections last fall, and contended that the tariff should not be tampered with until the people had another chance to express their opinion at a general election. When a blow was struck at great corporations, he said, it was a blow as well to the laboring men employed by those corporations. Mr. Payne's amendment to make free wool go into effect Oct. 1, 1898, was lost by 68 to 154. The Johnson amendment to have the free wool clause of the tariff bill go into effect immediately on the passage of the bill was carried, 112 to 102. This was the first defeat for the committee.

The civil service law and the way it is administered was discussed in the senate. Senator Berry took exception to the policy of allowing fourth-class postmasters to remain in office in order to carry out the spirit of the law. Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire criticized the law and said it ought to be repealed. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts defended the law, and Senator Cockrell of Missouri said that it was a good law if carried out according to its intent and purposes. The federal elections bill consumed a couple of hours, and Senator Chandler (Rep. N. H.) tried to secure an amendment recognizing the right of federal supervision over elections so far as to permit every candidate for congress the privilege of appointing a watcher in each precinct to guard his interests and the registration, but a vote was not reached.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The most significent event in the senate was the announcement of the resignation of Senator Walthall of Mississippi. It was totally unexpected, and when laid before the senate, the letter of the senator announcing that he had forwarded his resignation to the governor of Mississippi, the greatest surprise was expressed on all sides. Senator Walthall is sixty-three years old and succeeded the late L. Q. C. Lamar in the senate. His retirement causes general regret among his colleagues as he is very popular. The legislative session of the day was very short, but it gave opportunity for the introduction of two resolutions from Populist senators condemning the bond policy of the administration, and later in the day in the discussion of the Stark mileage appropriation. The latter, after a brief debate, was passed by a vote of 32 to 16.

The president's veto of the bill "for the relief of purchasers of timber and stone lands under the act of June 3, 1878," was read at the opening of the session of the house. Mr. Snodgrass of Tennessee asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a senate bill authorizing the Chattanooga & Western Railroad company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee river near Chattanooga, and it was passed. Consideration of the tariff bill was then resumed.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The house is making slow progress with the amendments to the tariff bill. Only one week more remains and less than twenty amendments to about 1,000 paragraphs have been disposed of. The argument between Mr. Johnson and Mr. Dalzell over the proposition to put steel rails on the free list was continued. When the vote came the amendment was defeated, but only about forty Democrats voted with their colleagues of the committee, while seventy-nine voted with Johnson and the radicals. Messrs. Cannon (Rep. Ill.), Wagner (Rep. Pa.) and Adams (Rep. Pa.) argued against the Johnson amendment. Mr. Dunn (Dem. Pa.) said Mr. Johnson was a mighty good fellow personally, but an unsafe and erratic leader to follow. He was opposed emphatically to his free trade doctrines. He did not want the tail of the Democratic party to wag the dog. Mr. Henderson (Rep. Iowa) was then recognized to offer the agricultural schedule of the McKinley law as a substitute for that of the Wilson bill. No action was taken.

During the debate on the agricultural schedule Mr. Tawney got the floor and presented the facts and figures relative to the production of barley, particularly in Minnesota. His statements produced a scene as exciting as any witnessed during the debate on the Wilson bill. Mr. Lockwood of Buffalo, the representative of the Eastern brewing interests, tried to question the accuracy of the figures, but was driven from the field. Mr. Tawney's time was twice extended until he had occupied nearly half an hour making an eloquent defense of the McKinley duty on this cereal.

$149 Against $55,000,000.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—Reports from Chicago, where the Guarantee Investment company has been undergoing an investigation at the hands of the receiver, T. J. Hurley, shows a condition of affairs that speaks volumes, without the addition of any explanations. The liabilities, as shown by the receiver's report, are $55,000,000, the total assets being $149. It was at first expected that the furniture in the office would amount to more than the amount given above, but half an hour after the receiver made his report he was informed that by virtue of a chattel mortgage on the property it could not be included as an asset. Many prominent persons in Chicago hold bonds against the concern, but they are worthless, and within a few days even the office will be closed in order that the entire assets may not be eaten up in office rents. The company, however, owns $100,000 in good bonds deposited in Missouri, and an effort will be made to get a receiver appointed at the latter point in order to make these assets available in wiping out the indebtedness. It is claimed that there are at the present time $55,000 bonds outstanding.

Passed as Pharmacists.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—The state board of pharmacy, which has been in session in Minneapolis during the past week, completed their work Saturday night and adjourned. They have been conducting their first practical examinations at the laboratory of the college of pharmacy, state university. The class numbered forty-five, and the following passed a successful examination:

Harry H. Hazeltine, Edward H. Houghton, Ernest F. Haglund, William F. Michel, Fred W. Schmidt, Martin Nelson, Minneapolis; C. Prescott Wyman, Duluth; John Frisch, St. Charles; James Henderson, Paynesville; Adolph G. Laack, Rochester; Lars L. Urheim, Eau Claire, Wis.

The following passed as assistants: Arthur Archibald, Louis P. Haish, Patrick Dube, Henry F. Kersten, Minneapolis; Peter R. Sorenson, Nels Nelson, St. Paul; Herman M. Tollefson, Kasson; John McGraw, Winona; Eugene Pfefferle, New Ulm; James H. Tyrrell, Grand Meadow; Thomas J. Griffith, Mankato.

Convicted of Hog Hooking.

Stevensville, Mont., Jan. 22.—Matthew Whaley, one of the most prominent citizens in Ravillie county, was found guilty of grand larceny in the theft of fifty hogs from a neighbor Saturday. Prominent lawyers from all over the state were in attendance on the trial.

A Wreck and Three Corpses.

Steubenville, Ohio, Jan. 22.—Two sections of a freight train were wrecked by a collision here. The corpses of two unknown men, supposed to have been beating their way, have been taken out of the wreckage, and at least one more is said to be still in the debris.

Must Care for the Child.

Mitchell, S. D., Jan. 22.—The trial of Newton Hughes of Mount Vernon for being the father of a child born to Kate Earl resulted in a verdict of guilty. Hughes will be compelled to support the child. Other suits will follow against him. Both parties are well connected.

An Ex-Treasurer in the Pen.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 22.—Dan Flood, the embezzling ex-treasurer of Meade county, has been convicted after a week's trial and sentenced to two and one-half years in the penitentiary here. John H. King of Piedmont was sentenced to twenty-one months in the penitentiary for stealing cattle.

KILLED BY AN EA[illegible]

DETAILS OF THE REC[illegible] QUAKE IN THIB[illegible]

Eight Hundred and Fifty Houses Demolished—The Total Deaths Will Probably Reach Into the Thousands, While Many Are Missing.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 22.—Private advices received by the Empress of Japan give fuller particulars of the earthquake devastations in the mysterious territory north of the Himalayas, where Skoolhak, the Buddhist "God Incarnate," reigns supreme over the hearts of the Thibetans.

"Owing to the extreme remoteness of the country, information of the tremendous disaster had only just reached the coast when the Empress of Japan sailed for America. The viceroy of Szechuan, Lon Ping Chang, who represents the civil authority of China in the distressed territory, has made a public appeal for succor, and in his memorial says that the grand monasteries of Hueyuan and Kemis, the home of Buddhism, are in ruins, and seven small lamasaries are buried in the wreck of the former. Eight hundred and fifty houses belonging to native Thibetan soldiers, and occupied by them and their families, met the same fate. Seventy-four Lama priests and 130 Chinese and Thibetans made up the roll of those whose bodies had been found and identified. There were also many scores of unidentified corpses, while the missing are legion.

"The total of fatalities will probably reach into the thousands, upward of 400 men were mortally wounded, but were still alive when the memorial left the viceroy, and the distress caused throughout Thibet by the shock is beyond exaggeration. Famine threatens the land and the cry for bread is to all creeds and to all people. The greatest misfortune of all, however, is, to the mind of all devout Buddhists, that which has befallen their sacred head—the holy Skoolhak. He is among the missing from Lhassa, where the monastery of Kemis was, and the circumstance, although zealously guarded by the faithful for fear that knowledge of it might rend asunder the entire fabric of the ancient faith, is rapidly spreading through all the Eastern lands where Buddhism is the religion of the masses. The outcome is beyond calculation, the shrine a heap of ruins and the holy one missing from the earth. The Lama monasteries of Huelyuan and Kemis are situated in the heart of the civilized portion of Thibet, and for ages the latter has been the seat of Buddhism proper.

Timber Thieves.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 22.—For a number of weeks special agents of the government have been at work in this territory investigating timber stealing, which has been going on for years. As a result, deputy marshals to-day brought and lodged in the United States jail six men who have been cutting walnut timber in the Osage reservation. They had already had 50,000 feet sawed, and had over 400 fine walnut logs cut and trimmed ready for market, all of which were confiscated. These were but day laborers in the employ of a combination of prominent men who have been cutting and marketing government timber for years, the amount stolen will aggregate millions of feet. Some startling arrests will follow.

After Some One's Life.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 22.—A dynamite bomb, charged with enough dynamite to blow up a block of buildings, was found in the office of the townsite board yesterday. It was a piece of lead pipe three feet long. A party of newspaper men took the deadly instrument to the suburbs of the town and built a fire over it. It exploded, tearing a hole in the ground big enough to bury a horse and the shock was felt for miles. It is believed the bomb was intended for Gov. Renfro and School Land Commissioner Blakesee, as it was found in close proximity to the executive building.

Memorial Window.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 22.—The memory of the American naval heroes who lost their lives in the great storm at Apia in March, 1889, was honored by the unveiling of a beautiful memorial window at the naval academy yesterday. This is tribute of the United States naval association. Dr. Clark, chaplain of the naval academy, delivered a special sermon. Several officers who witnessed the terrible scene involving the loss of many American and German seamen were present.

Lillian Russell Weds.

New York, Jan. 22.—For the third time in her life, the erstwhile Lillian Russell, before whose shrine have worshiped the "Johnnies" of Gotham for the last decade, stood at the altar of Hymen yesterday and promised to "love, honor and obey" her future "lord and master" in the person of John Chatterton, whose nom de theater is Signor Perugini.

Why He Wanted Money.

Parker, S. D., Jan. 22.—Neils Madsen, the young Dane who tried to murder his employer a few weeks ago and who was captured in New York city just as he was about to sail for Denmark, was brought back by the sheriff yesterday and had his preliminary hearing to-day. He admits the deed and says he wanted money to study for the ministry. His victim is still alive, but may die. Madsen is desperate, and will, it is believed, commit suicide or escape if possible.

Sailors Saved.

New York, Jan. 22.—The French steamer La Bretagne, Capt. Rupe, which arrived here to-day from Havre, reports heavy gales and rough seas during the passage. On Jan. 19, at 10:30 p. m., in lat. 43.29, long. 60.24, fell in with the fishing schooner Susan L. Hodge of Gloucester, Mass., dismasted and in a sinking condition. A boat was launched and the crew of fifteen men were rescued and brought into this port.

Iron Ore Shipments.

Ishpeming, Mich., Jan. 22.—A statement of the total shipments of iron ore from the entire Lake Superior region for 1893 places the amount at 6,046,208 tons, or 3,023,649 less than shipped in 1892.

Mr. Childs Recovering.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—George W. Childs is reported as improving. He is still confined to his bed, but his physicians say that there is nothing in his condition to create alarm, and his speedy recovery is confidently expected.

[illegible], Conn., Jan. 22.—Yesterday was the most exciting in the history of [illegible] of Bridgeport. [illegible] 1861, [illegible] volunteers on the way to the front filled the streets [illegible] the residents been so aroused. All day crowds thronged the streets [illegible] mob [illegible] The police were at defiance and a crowd of angry [illegible] ruled the town. The rioting was one of the results of the discharge of five employes of the Bridgeport Traction company yesterday and the strike which followed. Yesterday morning fifty men came up from Jersey City to take the places of the strikers, and it was announced that the company intended to run its cars to-day. The men then held a long consultation and decided that they would not allow the company to run the cars. The yards of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad were raided and railroad iron, ties, coupling pins, boxes and barns were taken and piled on the tracks at various points. Some of the cars were moved out of the sheds, but were unable to proceed but a short distance. They were surrounded by the strikers and their friends and the crews were compelled to leave them in the streets. Police were summoned from headquarters and several cars were started with three railroad employes and a guard of three policemen. The crowds quickly drove the police from the cars, together with the conductors and drivers. Sticks and stones were thrown and the windows of the cars broken. Several policemen and railroad employes were slightly injured. At 2 o'clock a car in charge of five policemen and several railroad employes was attacked at the corner of Congress and Main streets. Here a mob of about 2,000 men and boys were gathered. They bombarded the cars with stones, breaking all of the windows and injuring several of those in charge.

At 6 o'clock a patrol wagon filled with police and three wagons with railroad employes left the stables to bring back a wrecked car at the corner of Congress and Main streets. On arriving there they were surrounded by a mob and a lively row ensued, in which a hostler employed by the company had his nose broken and another employe was badly bruised about the body. The police and railroad men retreated and abandoned the car. Meanwhile the mayor summoned the police commissioners, sheriff and city officials and a conference lasting three hours was held with the owners of the road. At the conclusion of the meeting it was announced that the company had agreed to re-employ the strikers with the exception of nine men.

Connolley's Case.

Duluth, Jan. 22.—James E. Connolley, the Catholic priest who was convicted two months ago of raping Nellie Hannon, a seventeen-year-old member of his parish at Two Harbors, was sentenced by Judge Lewis to twenty years and three months in the Stillwater penitentiary. Connolley took his sentence quietly and philosophically. He says he has many staunch friends who will spend money freely to carry the case to the court of last resort to secure for him a new trial. Since Connolley's conviction Miss Hannon has given birth to a boy, the father of which she alleges is Connolley. It is said she will place or has placed the boy in a home at St. Paul, and that she is soon to be married to a railroad man named George Smith.

Prior Arrested.

Huron, S. D., Jan. 22.—C. F. Prior, the absconding American Express messenger, and his companion were arrested near Rock Island. Both Prior and the woman will be brought here to-day unless they decline to come without requisition papers. Supt. Daniels left for St. Paul for a conference with the express company officials there. The woman who went with Prior was Millie Zigler. She came from Minneapolis several months ago, remained here a short time and then went to Pierre, where Prior cared for her quite lavishly. She is young in years, but old in sin, and Prior's downfall is attributed directly to her. Those acquainted with her say she had him completely under her control, and continually dogged his steps.

Labor Parade.

Denver, Jan. 22.—The parade which was held to-day under a call to labor organizations to protest against adjournment of the legislature without enacting laws for the relief of distress by affording employment, numbered fewer than 2,000 men. It was reviewed by Gov. Waite and Populist members of the legislature from the St. James hotel. Very little enthusiasm was manifested. One marcher proposed three cheers for Gov. Waite, but there was no response. After the parade a meeting was held at which resolutions were adopted demanding abatement of the attachment laws and the enactment of laws for the building of a state canal and for other public improvements.

Silver Crisis in China.

London, Jan. 22.—A dispatch to the Times from Hong Kong says: The silver crisis is increasing in acuteness, and in the East the situation is further complicated by the scarcity of currency at Shanghai, Hong Kong and Singapore owing to the decreasing supply of Mexican dollars, Mexican change not having adapted itself to the heavy fall in silver.

A Nebraska Militia Blowout.

Norfolk, Neb., Jan. 22.—The recently organized militia company was duly mustered into service last night at the Hotel Oxnard. The impressive ceremonies were conducted by Gov. Crounse and his staff, and were witnessed by a large company of invited guests. The name of Moore Rifles was conferred upon the company in honor of Auditor Moore. At the conclusion of the muster a grand ball was given.

King Killed.

London, Jan. 22.—A Daily News dispatch from Vienna says it is rumored there that the king of Servia has been murdered. The rumor as yet lacks confirmation and is not believed here.

Missing Youth Traced.

A Mysterious Shooting.

Creston, Iowa, Jan. 22.—Mrs. J. H. Benton of Greenfield was accidentally shot by a 22-caliber rifle yesterday. The wound is not a fatal one. It is not known who did the shooting.

BOMBERGER IS EXECUTED.

THE NORTH DAKOTA MURDERER DROPS THROUGH THE TRAP.

He Goes to His Death Without Flinching—His Neck Broken by the Fall—History of the Crime for Which He Was Hanged.

Cando, N. D., Jan. 20.—At exactly 1:40 yesterday afternoon the trap fell and Alfred F. Bomberger, the murderer of six members of the Kreider family, was strangled to death.

Sheriff McCabe with two deputies drove to the door of the court house a little after noon and a few minutes later he, with his prisoner and deputies, were speeding away toward the scaffold, a short mile away. Bomberger looked with interest at the crowd gathered and also gazed at the scaffold.

As they drew near a hush fell over the crowd, which numbered fully 2,000 people. As the solemn party drove down the incline and stopped at the door of the enclosure Bomberger did not lose his self-control. The party ascended the steps to the platform above, the prisoner walking up the steps. His knees smote together and for an instant his wonderful nerve, which, till then, has stood by him, seemed to waver. The trap had already been put in position and everything was ready for the final act. Sheriff McCabe asked the prisoner if he wished to make any remarks.

Bomberger then made the following statement on the gallows: "Gentlemen, I have a few words to say to you before I leave you. I am sorry for the crime which I have committed, and I hope none of you will follow in my footsteps. Furthermore, I wish that no preacher be allowed on the scaffold. Good by, gentlemen."

The deputy then put on the black cap and the sheriff adjusted the noose and stepped back to the lever and pulled it and Bomberger, the murderer, was launched into eternity.

The body was turned over to a couple of his cousins, the only relatives present. As soon as the body was cut down the souvenir fiends went to work at the rope and enclosure. The day was calm and everything moved off without a hitch.

The body will be interred within a quarter of a mile of the scene of his crime, in fact, the little girl who rode into town to give the alarm passed over the ground in which he will lie.

The crime was committed on the 7th day of July, 1893, at the family residence of the Kreiders, one mile east of Cando. About 7 o'clock in the morning the citizens of Cando were startled by the sudden appearance of Anna Kreider in their midst, very much excited, conveying the more startling news that Albert Bomberger, the hired man, had killed her father, mother, three sisters and a brother, and then started off on horseback. Scarcely believing the girl's story, the citizens at once began flocking to the house, some in buggies, others in wagons and some on foot. There they found the girl's story was true in every particular, the father having been shot, apparently while asleep, the mother while preparing the morning meal and the four children up stairs in their bed room, which presented a sight never to be forgotten by any one of the horrified spectators. The wound of each one of the six, which produced death, was instantly fatal, although some of the children had more than one wound. Daniel S. Kreider, the father, was shot in the left corner of the mouth, the shot penetrating the brain; the mother was shot in the throat, the shot tearing away the whole front of the throat, and destroying all of the important structures of the neck; Beatrice was shot in the left side of the head, every particle of the brain matter being blown out; Mary received a slight flesh wound in the left arm, but the fatal wound was a stab in the throat, as she lay wounded upon the floor; Morley was killed by a gun shot wound in the back part of the head, crushing the skull; while David was shot in the jaw, the shot dividing, a part passing over and a part under the jaw bone penetrating the brain.

At the inquest it developed that the father was the first one killed, the mother next, and then the fiend started up stairs, and meeting Anna upon the landing at the head of the stairway, ordered her into his room, which was just across the landing from the room occupied by the younger children. He then stepped to the door of the children's room and fired three shots in quick succession into the room, killing Morley and David and wounding Mary, while Beatrice escaped through the window, jumping to the ground, without at first being missed by the murderer, who, upon finding that Mary was not fatally wounded, went down stairs, got the butcher knife, and, coming back, stabbed the poor girl in the throat. By that time he discovered that Beatrice was missing, and immediately began search for her, and found her at the barn in the act of getting a pony to give the alarm. Bomberger stopped her, and taking her into the house allowed her to look at her parents who lay dead there; he then marched her up stairs, and upon her refusing to go into the room where Anna was he pushed her into the room and fired upon her, being in such close proximity that the fire from the gun burned her dress sleeve on her left arm with which she was apparently trying to ward off the death blow. The murderer, turning to Anna, remarked "she dropped like a cat, didn't she?" After the killing of Beatrice he went into the room where Anna was and outraged her, then made her go down stairs and get breakfast for him, which he ate in the kitchen standing over the dead body of Mrs. Kreider, or only a few steps from it at most. After eating the breakfast he compelled Anna to put the remainder of the food into a packet for his lunch, then ordered her to get the "old man's money and watch." He also got from her the little money that she had of her own, amounting to $1.15. After saddling the pony and getting ready for his start he took the girl into the barn and again outraged her.

Leased 1,000 Acres of Land.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Jan. 20.—The most important business transaction in the history of Redwood county was consummated in the Citizens' bank yesterday, when McKinley Bros., of the Mesaba iron mine, leased over a thousand acres of land adjoining Moon's coal mine for a term of thirty years. The owners of the land will require 10 cents a ton for all coal mined. One of the stipulations was that no saloons should be allowed on the property. The McKinleys will expend $10,000 in prospecting for coal.

A large tract of pine land East of Red Lake, which was estimate about two years ago, was badly damaged by fire last summer. The sap on this timber has turned black rendering the estimate worthless as two niches must be deducted from every tree. This will make a vast difference in twenty million feet and this render the old estimate worthless, this is the best argument why the timber shall be sold.

The latest from Washington is to the effect that the secretary of the interior for the purpose of hastening Red Lake pine lands into the market has, determined to increase the force of surveyors and timber estimators. In accordance with this determination Commissioner Lamoreaux on the recommendation of Mr. Baldwin has recomended Mr. Pettingall, of Staples, Mark Rankin, Anoka and B. F. Carr. The U. S. postoffice department has issued an order that hereafter mail will not be received on the mail cars unless it first goes through the post office. This order was made necessary because so many business men in the neighborhood of railway depots in all localities mailed their letters on the train to save the trouble of going to the post-office, and it made a large amount of extra work for the railway clerks. Time was taken up in stamping letter that was taken in sorting out mail between the stations.— Ferile Journal.

A duel was once fought by two men named respectively Shott and Nott Nott was shot and Shott was not. In this case it is better to be Shott than Nott, There was rumor that Nott was shot and Shott avows that he shot Nott which proves that the shot Shott shot at Nott was not shot or that Nott was shot notwithstanding circumstantial evidence is not always good. It may be made to appear on trial that the shot Shot shot, shot Nott or as accidents with firearms are frequent it may be possible that the shot Shott shot shot, shott himself, when the whole affair would resolve itself into its original elements, and Shott would be shot shot and Nott would be shot, shot not shot but Nott; anyway it is hard to tell who was not shot —Ex.

WINNING LINDA.

How a Bashful Lover Was Made to Do the Right Thing.

The mountaineer and his wife had to go down the valley about a mile to see a sick neighbor, and I was left at the cabin with their daughter, a girl of 18. As soon as she had cleared off the supper table and while I sat on the doorstep smoking she put on a clean apron, arranged her hair a bit and blushed very red as she said to me:

"Him's coming to see me tonight, and him's very skeery and—and"——

"Do you mean that your young man is coming?" I asked.

"Reckon him is."

"And he's bashful?"

"Him can't skeercely abide dad and mam."

"I see. He'd be scared off if he found me here. Well, I'll take a walk and get out of the way."

"No, no! You's perfectly proper. I'll go out and sit down on the log, and you's stay here."

"Oh, that's it! Well, don't you mind me in the least. Just tell the young man I've been there myself and know how one feels about it."

The log was only 30 feet away, and she hadn't been sitting there over five minutes when "him" appeared. He had probably been in hiding somewhere near. All that I could see was that he was a young man and very bashful and awkward. He sat down about 10 feet away from her, and it was five minutes before either spoke. Then he remarked:

"Powerful sight of rain long back, Linda."

"Why, Jim, it hain't showered in two weeks!"

"Hain't it?"

"Why, no. You dun got mixed up with last year."

"Reckon so," he replied, and somehow the distance between them suddenly diminished one-half. It was bright moonlight, but owing to a haze in the atmosphere I couldn't exactly tell whether she moved, he hitched or the log suddenly shrunk five feet endways.

"Who's him?" inquired Jim as he nodded his head in my direction.

"Stranger gwine further up," she answered. "Yo' hain't no call to be skeered of him nor nobody."

"Who's skeered?"

"Reckon you is."

"Shoo! Never was skeered in my life. Linda, does yo'r old dad like me?"

"Reckon he do."

"And yo'r mam?"

"Reckon she do."

"And, Linda"——

He stopped there for a long, long time, and Linda coughed and giggled over his embarrassment. By and by she said:

"Dad says you's come powerful nigh killin a b'ar last week."

No reply.

"Mam says you's took up them 10 acres of land above Parker's."

No reply.

"Dad says you's gwine to build a cabin up there—te! he! he!"

No reply.

"Has you's lost yo'r tongue, Jim?" she asked after a long pause.

"Co'se not. I was thinkin," he replied as he heaved a deep sigh.

"Reckon I know what 'twas—te! he! he!"

"Reckon you don't!"

"Co'se I do! Dad likes yo', mam likes yo', and I"——

That log suddenly contracted again and brought them close together, and Jim's arm stole around Linda's waist as he finished the sentence for her with:

"And we's gwine ter be jined in the fall and live on them 10 acres. Linda, if him wasn't back thar in that doah I'd shorely hug yo'—I would."

I got out of "that doah" and took a long walk, and if Jim didn't take advantage of the occasion Linda's looks belied her when I returned.—Detroit Free Press.

Their Pets.

They were seated at a table in a prominent restaurant—four fond parents and two youngsters, each about old enough to lisp a few words.

"Our Charley can walk so nice, can't oo, oo nice 'ittle fellow?" said one mother.

"And our Clara walks clear across the room without falling, don't oo, sweet?"

"Charley's so good. He will play by himself by the hour, and I can tend to my work."

"And Clara never kept us up a night since we have had her."

So the conversation went on, each parent trying to out do the other in bragging. Finally the family to which Clara belonged finished the meal. The mother picked up the girl and said, "Now give Charley a nice kiss before you go." Charley was in the act of slaughtering an orange and had already reduced it to a mushy mass. As Clara's face came close to his he raised his arm on high, and bringing it down forcibly planted the mushy orange very artistically upon Clara's pug nose. Such a howl as went up startled all the guests, and when Clara slapped him the noise was doubled. Clara's ma and pa hardly speak to Charley's ma and pa, and each family thinks that the younger member of the other family is just horrid.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Antony and Cleopatra.

The golden barge of the mighty queen floated softly down the beautiful and mysterious river, and Cleopatra turned her glorious eyes from the entrancing scene to Antony.

"O king," she murmured, "is there in all this world a sight so beautiful?"

"Thou art more beautiful, queen of my heart," he whispered, touching her hand with his lips.

Those wondrous eyes of hers closed languidly, and the long lashes lay at rest upon the rich red olive of her cheeks.

And the golden barge floated on.—Detroit Free Press.

She Wandered.

"Make your complaints here," read a lady with what is known as a hatchet face as she stood in front of a wicket at the gas company's office. A strange light entered her black eyes as she accosted the clerk:

"This is where you make complaints, is it?" she asked.

"It is, madam," the polite clerk answered.

"And do you provide the remedy?"

"That is what we are here for," said the clerk, taking on the air of one having the entire English navy at his back. The woman appeared to hesitate.

"I never was a complainer," she said, "but things have been on my mind for a long time. My husband, George William Turner, has a red haired typewriter in his private office, and an awful amount of business detains him down town nights. That's one thing I want remembered."

The young man behind the wicket was seized with a bad fit of coughing. He got very red in the face but the lady kept on.

"Our preacher," she said, "is giving a great deal of attention to choir practice. He developed a remarkable ear for music a week after we hired a new soprano. The way he attends choir meetings now is a caution. I think his congregation is entitled to anything you can do toward getting up a rumpus in that choir and forcing the soprano to resign. We want to keep the pastor. He has such soulful eyes."

The young man behind the wicket made some sort of an inarticulate utterance, and the lady proceeded:

"I live next door to a woman who keeps a carriage. I know she can't afford it, but she does without some of the necessities of life just to have that carriage stand in front of the door. There isn't a woman on the block who doesn't think her a mean, spiteful thing. Blow up that carriage with dynamite and become a popular young man."

"I don't think, madam, you quite grasp the powers of this department," the young man said, blushing as he said it.

"The fact is, we only attend to complaints relative to gas. Perhaps, if you'd relate those things to a sewing society"——

He Thought He Found Out.

A certain Philadelphia gentleman of more name than fame was ordered by his physician to travel for the benefit of his health.

He went to England, and after tiring of humping through London he decided to hire a trap and see the beauties of interior England in dignified ease and luxury.

Just then he fell in with a hearty, good natured Englishman, and as they soon became fast friends the American invited the other to attend him on his coaching trip.

The son of John Bull accepted, and during the days of pleasure that followed each frequently and in a joking manner improved every occasion to laud his own country and express his contempt of the other.

On the evening of the fourth day, as they were driving along a dusty road, the American pulled the horses up suddenly and proceeded to read a sign, "To Manchester 20 miles," and underneath were the words, "If you cannot read this sign, apply for information at the blacksmith shop."

"Well, I'll be darned," said the American, "if that isn't the most ridiculous sign I ever saw!"

"Jove, old man," replied the Englishman, "that sign is all right, isn't it? I don't see anything the matter."

"You don't, eh? Well, then, you just sleep over it and see what you think in the morning."

The next morning the Englishman came down beaming.

"I say, old man," he said wisely, "that was a funny sign to put up, for don't you see the blacksmith might not be in after all, you know."—Boston Budget.

Borrowed the Stockings for a Purpose.

The story is told that a citizen of East Greenwich, who is well provided with the wherewithal for purchasing this world's goods, went into a dry goods store the other day and asked to see some men's stockings. Selecting a pair, he placed them in his overcoat pocket and walked out with never a syllable to the proprietor about payment. As he was well known to the dealer, the latter said nothing, feeling sure that the temporary absent-mindedness of his customer would soon vanish and he would have a good laugh on him when he received the money. About half an hour later the customer walked in, took the stockings from his pocket, laid them on the counter and again walked off without leaving behind so much as a fragment of an explanation. An investigation brought to light the fact that the man wanted to buy a new pair of shoes, and as his own stockings were a little shabby he took this method of borrowing a pair to wear while he went to the shoe store for the article.—Providence Journal.

German Process of Drying Wood.

A German process for drying woods has been tried and with some success by a firm of Canadian lumbermen. It consists briefly in placing the timber for twelve days in chambers heated by steam and then in another room to dry. The plan, it is said, entirely gets rid of sap, and has been found more efficacious with juicy woods like beech and birch. It is certainly the case that timber prepared by this means is largely used in Germany, and particularly in Bavaria. At the same time it is stated that this artificial seasoning is not nearly so efficacious as that produced by natural means. Woods thus forced into maturity are apt later on both to warp and to rot. The constructors of the German navy have altogether declined to use wood so prepared, though it has been found useful for fencing and other kinds of cheap carpentry.—Manchester Courier.

FLEEING FROM FOREST FIRE.

The Experience of a Visitor to a Lumber Camp in Northern Michigan.

"The most exciting experience I ever had," said T. E. Spencer to a writer for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "was in a forest fire near Manistee, Mich. I had visited a small lumber camp and retired to rest in one of the bunks provided for the choppers. I was awakened by a strong light from the north, and going outside of the wooden shanty it seemed to me that the entire world was on fire. It cracked and snapped, danced and jumped as if the demon of fire was holding a high carnival and celebrating the end of the world. From every side could be heard sounds like the firing of cannon and the shrieks of dying human beings. It was the falling of the boughs and the sighing of the wind, but I never heard so horrible a sound, nor witnessed so weird and terrible a sight. Hastily awakening the other men in the camp I mounted a horse and fled from the flames. But the horse could not keep pace with the progress of the fire. The lurid heavens looked as though they were at molten heat; the air was stifling; the smoke almost suffocated me, while falling leaves and boughs burned my horse, and the sickening odor of burning flesh added to the horror. Within two or three hours I was in an opening, where I was no longer in danger, but my horse was badly injured, while my clothing was full of holes where embers had struck me. I will take my chances with cyclones or earthquakes, but not with a burning forest again."

A Different Application.

THE HEIR OF DELMAR HALL

Poor, pretty child, for Enid Clyde was little more, whose eyes had lighted with gladness when first her footsteps had crossed Delmar Hall how little she dreamed of all that would come to her beneath its stately roof—the love and hate, the passion and the pain, as well as the bitter sweetness that the future held for her tender, loving heart.

Standing on the western veranda, her eyes resting on the green fields, daisy-decked meadows and verdure-crowned hills that lay before her, wrapped in the hazy softness, the wondrous charm of the waning summer, a faint smile curved her tender mouth, her soft eyes glowed with a happy light.

Love had come to her at Delmar Hall, a love loyal as generous, for only the evening before Roy Delmar had held her in his arms, kissed her sweet, red lips and called her his darling.

He was not the heir of Delmar Hall—this handsome lover who loved her so.

Once he had been looked upon as its future master, before his uncle, a man of fifty, had married a gentle, dark eyed girl who, dying a year later, left him with a dark-eyed babe to bear his name and inherit his lands.

People had been somewhat surprised when Vernon Delmar had married so late in life, but their surprise was doubled when, two years after her death, he yielded to the spell of red-gold hair and pansy eyes, and brought a second mistress to Delmar Hall.

It was as governess to little Vernie that Enid Clyde had come to Delmar Hall, and he was playing on the grass before her now a sturdy boy of five.

While Enid stood there, one of the bay windows was pushed open, and Leonie Delmar stepped out and went over to where Enid stood.

A woman of perhaps twenty-four, with hair like burnished copper and skin like the creamy petals of the magnolia blossom, whose lips were red as the rose carnation and every movement instinct with subtile grace, whose smile was as alluring as that of the fabled Circe.

People had been more than surprised at Vernon Delmar's second marriage, but when they saw Leonie, they ceased to wonder at his infatuation, and when he died two years later, the neighboring families were not ill-pleased that a beautiful young chatelaine reigned in the Delmar homestead.

But even beside this brilliant beauty, Enid Clyde's fair, young loveliness shone undimmed, as the dainty sweetness of the violet is not lost near the bloom of the rose, and Leonie noticed with darkening eyes the soft dark silken hair that clustered in tiny rings over Enid's low broad brow and round her dainty neck, as well as the dainty fairness of the said brow and neck, the faint rose flush on the rounded cheeks, the almost Grecian outline of her face.

People in general knew nothing of Leonie Delmar before her marriage, and one thing in particular they did not know, and that was, that she and Roy Delmar had been lovers before she became his uncle's wife.

Standing there now, she thought of the day his passionate kiss had burned upon her lips, while her head had rested, for one moment of exquisite bliss, upon his breast while his arms encircled her.

Her lover. Yes, by that kiss that still burned upon her lips, by the power its memory still had to thrill her.

Well, that was her way of it, and his——

Well, charmed by her beauty, enthralled by her witcheries and with his senses tangled in the meshes of her yellow hair, he had yielded to the coaxing lips of alluring redness, and so, with pulses leaping and blood running warmly in his veins, but a heart untouched by love, he had laid his lips to hers in a passionate caress, never dreaming, however, he was kissing his uncle's promised wife.

One day he called upon her, a look of quiet scorn in his eyes.

She was seated at the piano, running her fingers idly over the keys, when he entered, but she realized at once that he knew of her engagement—understood her treachery, but, secure in the power of her beauty she laughed lightly and broke into a stanza of the old Scotch song "Roy's Wife of Aldevallack."

"She vowed and swore she would be mine,
For that she lo'ed me best of ony.
But, ah, the fickle, faithless quean,
Has ta'en the Carl and left her Johnny;
But Robin's aulder thrice than I,
Perhaps his days may not be mony,
And when the auld fule's in his grave
Perhaps she'll turn her thought on Johnny."

Roy looked at her, a faint smile curving his lips, his eyes gravely stern.

"Perhaps his thoughts would not turn on her," he said, "except to be thankful 'Auld Robin' won her instead of himself."

Afterward when he met her either as his uncle's wife or widow, he gave no sign he even remembered that moment's folly—the moment that to her, was a passionate memory, with power to thrill her still.

If ever the "Prince of Darkness" entered a woman's heart, he entered Leonie Delmar's when she realized Enid and Roy were lovers.

"I will part them," she cried, her face white with jealous rage. "How I will manage it I know not, but I will do it. Only to part them and a fair chance to win him again, and I would have no fear of failure. Her presence is the one power that could thwart me."

Darker and more bitter grew her hatred as she watched the lovers; and, unconscious of the clouds above her head, Enid reveled in her bright young love dream.

And then, in the midst of it all, the cloud broke—broke the day the sturdy young heir of Delmar Hall was lost—lost in the morn nor found in the evening, nor for many a morn nor evening after.

Leonie's grief was pitiable. Had he been her own child her face could not have been whiter, her eyes more anxious.

Then, in the midst of it all she shot her arrow—the arrow that wounded Enid Clyde to the heart's core.

"He will be found yet, Enid Clyde—found dead, when you are Roy Delmar's wife—Roy Delmar, who will then be master of Delmar Hall, and your ambition will then be gratified."

Enid's sweet young face grew pale, though for a moment she scarcely realized the full meaning of Leonie's words.

"You—you think some accident happened him?" she said.

"I think you know better than any one else what happened him," Leonie answered.

Roy looked at her in a haughty, questioning surprise, and then Enid's voice rang out in a pitiful cry, as Leonie turned away.

"Oh, Roy! Roy! Do you know what she means? Oh! Roy, you could never think that!"

"My darling," was all he said, as he folded her close in his arms and kissed her pallid lips; "as my wife, no one would dare to even hint such a preposterous story."

She looked at him with wide, pain-filled eyes.

"Your wife I will never be, Roy, till this mystery is cleared up," she said.

All his prayers and pleading were vain; she simply shook her head.

"And if it is never cleared up?" he said.

"Then, I will never be your wife," she answered.

So pretty, dark-eyed Enid went back to her old home, with a shadow in her eyes and a deeper shadow on her life.

Summer passed and winter snow lay on the ground; then once again came the season of lilies and roses; but the mystery of little Vernie's disappearance was a mystery still.

More than once Roy pleaded with Enid, but her answer was still the same and though a coldness fell between them, Roy still refused the freedom she offered him.

Then a strange, vague feeling rose in Roy's mind that Leonie herself knew more than she professed of the matter.

"I will watch her closely," he said, "never letting her dream of my suspicions."

He sought her side and was met with welcoming smiles and tender glances.

But the siren power of woman's beauty can never be told since the Queen of Sheba bewitched Solomon, and Cleopatra conquered Marc Antony; so while Enid was wearing her heart away in bitter pain, Roy was unconsciously drifting into the siren's spell.

Yet he loved Enid as woman is seldom loved, and would have scoffed at the idea that the yellow hair and violet eyes of Leonie Delmar were luring him to folly again with the power of her wondrous beauty.

Curving eyes and violet eyes look strangely winning and sweet in the mystic light of the gloaming, and that evening he almost forgot his mission when a tress of her hair had swept his cheek and her eyes smiled into his.

Her perfumed breath just swept his cheek as she bent forward, and her tempting lips were near his own. Another moment and perhaps—Well, we will give him the benefit of the doubt.

A voice, soft and musical, fell on his ears, the interlacing branches were pushed aside, and Enid Clyde stood before them—Enid Clyde! and at her side the lost heir of Delmar.

Leonie leaped to her feet, her perfect face, pallid as death, her violet eyes dark as midnight, her breath coming and going in short gasps, while her slender form trembled.

"How—how did you——"

"How did she find him?" another voice said. "She did not find him. I brought him to her."

And a man, young and handsome, but with a general air of recklessness about him, came out of the shadow of the trees.

"You—you turned traitor?"

He laughed mockingly.

"Did you think," he said, "that I did not see through your plot? My dear Leonie, I know of the will that makes Roy Delmar heir of this stately home instead of this child—the will that left Delmar Hall to Roy Delmar's father instead of his brother Vernon. Not only that will, but Vernon Delmar's confession is in my possession, while you dream you have them under lock and key.

"You had this child abducted for the purpose of shadowing Enid Clyde's life and parting her from her lover. In the insolence of your beauty, you meant to win him yourself, produce the will that made him heir. What if it proved the villainy of one husband when it enriched the other? Then little Vernie would be found, for you had no heart to hurt the boy, and all would go merry as a marriage-bell.

"One thing, however, you were foolish to count on, the credulity of your dupe—myself. Did you think I ever forgot or forgave the mocking laugh with which you received the story of my love, long years ago? You laughed and scoffed at it, and I swore revenge. To-day I have it in full. With your plans almost perfect, your success almost assured, I step in and thwart you. This girl will be mistress of Delmar Hall, and you will be—nobody—a penniless nobody."

Enid laid her hand on Roy's arm.

"Am I welcome, Roy?" she said.

He bent his head and kissed her low, white brow.

"I am not worthy of you, my darling," he said.

Leonie laughed.

"Whatever I did was done for love of you, Roy, whatever you may think," she said, "but I must try and take my defeat gracefully."

She turned away and they never looked on her beautiful face again.

So Enid came out of the shadow into the sunlight again, and with her lover's arms around her, let the past with its bitter pain slip from her like a dream

HE FED AN ELEPHANT.

Was Too Exciting to Desire Any More of It.

"No, I wasn't born this way," replied the man, as he backed up to a chair, got his crutches from under his arms and fell into the seat. "This came on me suddenly one day, about fifteen years ago," quotes the Detroit Free Press.

"What do the doctors call it?"

"Damphoolism, I believe. That's what it is, anyway."

"Got a fall from a balloon?"

"Rather worse. I don't mind saying that about fifteen years ago I used to think I knew it all. You've heard of the town of Chillicothe, Ohio, maybe?"

"Yes."

"Well, I ornamented that town with my presence and I flattered myself that the people couldn't possibly spare me over a day at a time. I was at the apex of my conceit when a circus came along. There was a drove of eight elephants in the menagerie, and as I stood before them I wanted to do something awfully smart. One of the beasts was reaching for cakes, and I determined to give him a lighted cigar. An old gray-haired farmer who stood by twigged my game and uttered a word of caution, but I wasn't taking advice from hayseeds at that epoch.

And you carried out your plans, eh?"

"I did. I puffed on the weed until it had lots of fire, hid it behind me for a minute, and when the elephant reached again I let him have it fire end first. Something happened, of course. I had just commenced to grin and look around for applause when that proboscis suddenly picked me up, whirled me high in the air, and then I was flung clean across the tent and landed under the cage of serpents. I knew when the fun began, but I couldn't see the end of it. I was unconscious for two days, and when I came to I was knocked so out of my plumb that the doctors could not do any better than this for me. I shall be a cripple to the end of my days."

"But——"

"Oh, certainly! I know more than I did, and I shall never have the swell head again. It seems that the elephant's trainer had his eye on me all the time and I've often felt that it was too bad he didn't feel inclined to kick me all over town and thus enable me to learn wisdom and keep my shape at the same time."

BOX CAR MERCHANTS.

Arrested for Selling Fraudulent Groceries.

Several box car merchants, whose headquarters are said to be at Chicago, have been arrested at West Salem, Wis., for selling a cheap mixture of alum and soda under the pretense that it was Royal Baking Powder. Similar operations have been heard of in other sections of the country, and two men recently arrested at Canton, N. Y., for the same offense have been convicted and sentenced to the full penalty provided by the law.

The usual method of parties engaged in this business is to obtain orders from farmers for all kinds of groceries at prices considerably below those charged for the same goods by local dealers, and then to deliver bogus articles. Tempted by the prices, the farmers order largely various articles, perhaps a whole winter's supply. These orders are put up at Chicago, and delivered at different towns by the car load. Almost every person orders Royal Baking Powder, but when the packages are examined, it is found that the baking powder is not in the genuine Royal cans. This is evidence of fraud, as the Royal is never sold otherwise than in its own red-labeled tin cans. A subsequent examination proves the powder to be a mixture made from alum.

Consumers should be on their guard against deceptions of this kind. While these purchasers thought they were saving ten cents a pound on Royal they were paying thirty-five cents for a mixture that can be bought anywhere for ten cents and which is dear at that.

So well is it understood that the Royal Baking Powder is never sold in bulk, or otherwise than in its own sealed cans, that any prosecuting attorney will, upon his attention being called to the matter, prosecute any one who pretends to make such sales.

Reputable grocers have an equal interest with consumers in breaking up these frauds. The goods sold by these traveling agents are of an inferior character. It is in this way the country is filled with adulterated goods which the farmer is buying at a rate far beyond their value, while the trade of the legitimate local dealer is being destroyed. We are glad to know that the Royal Baking Powder Co. will prosecute all cases of fraud of this kind of which it is advised.

CARRY OIL AND MOLASSES

The Same Tanks Used by Vessels Trading Between This Country and Cuba.

Almost all the molasses which comes from Cuba to the United States is, according to the New York Tribune, brought in the same tanks in steamships that are used to carry petroleum as a return cargo. The ship's tanks are about sixteen feet deep. They are pumped full of oil at Brooklyn or Philadelphia, then taken to Havana and the oil is pumped out into the tanks of the refining plants there. Molasses is brought from the interior of the island in huge hogsheads, which are emptied into the storage tanks. A suction pump drawing about 10,000 gallons an hour fills each ship's tanks to within about two feet of the top, that amount of space being required for the expansion of the molasses. It might be supposed that the petroleum would have a bad effect upon the molasses, but it has been shown that the contrary is the case, and as nearly one-half the importation is made into rum and the balance refined into sugar a little oil is not of much account. The tanks are cleaned after the molasses has been pumped out by turning in a powerful steam jet, which washes down the sides and liquifies whatever molasses may be left in the bottom of the tank, and the suction pump finishes the work. A cargo of molasses, which formerly required ten or twelve days, can now be unloaded in forty-eight hours, while the difference in cost of handling, to say nothing of the saving of time, amounts to a large sum. The first attempt at handling molasses in bulk was made by the brig Novelty in 1877. She was fitted with a lining, and her whole hold was used without partitions. She made several trips between Matanzas and Boston, but was not successful as a dividend earner. Since the present system of dividing a vessel's hold into tanks was devised and put into practice on steamers the profits of the trade and the steamship companies have largely increased.

Modest Request of Joe Jefferson.

Several weeks ago, when Mr. Jefferson was playing "Rip Van Winkle" at the Walnut Street theater, he found among his mail one morning a letter from a furniture man. The epistle, which was written on a letter head adorned with a large cut of a folding bed, "closed" and "opened," read as follows: "Mr. Jefferson—Sir: I saw you play 'Rip Van Winkle' last night, and I have a proposition to make to you. When the curtain goes up on the third act, and you rise all stiff and sore after your long sleep, you might say a few words something like this: 'Oh, how stiff I am! If I had only slept last night on one of Blank's patent folding beds, warranted safe, durable and comfortable, how much better I would feel this morning!' I think it would bring down the house. Now, I am willing to pay you well for this, of course. Let me know what you think of it." The owner of Blank's folding bed has not yet heard from Mr. Jefferson.—Philadelphia Record.

Tears at the Theater.

A physiologist has been studying the problem of tears at the theater. He asks why it is that the people whom you see crying over a pathetic situation that they see acted before them are generally incapable of feeling the least emotion in real life, and he attributes this special flood of tears to the excitement caused by the heat, the lights and the magnetism of their neighbors at the show. He adds that nine in ten of the people who cry at the theater are hard and selfish at home. The phenomenon is similar to that often witnessed at a melodrama when the villain or the wicked woman is roundly hissed by the gallery the moment he or she appears on the stage, while the gallant hero and the virtuous heroine come in for a round or two in their every scene, and the home life of so many of these stern applicants of Draconian morals is something too terrible to contemplate with serenity.—Boston Traveller.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs or powders, because they are all irritating, do not reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as failures. THE WORK OF CONGRESS

RESUME OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The house today determined the abolition of the duty upon refined sugar which was passed upon just before the house adjourned last night, as an amendment to an amendment offered by Mr. Robertson, one of the Louisiana sugar men. A way out of the confusion which existed upon the effect of the amendment adopted last night was found after a two hours' discussion of the parliamentary situation by submitting the question to the house as to whether the Warner amendment placing refined sugar on the free list should be considered as a substitute for the Robertson amendment. This was decided affirmatively, and then by an overwhelming vote in which the Republicans joined with the radical Democrats against the sugar men and several members of the ways and means committee, the substitute was adopted. With regard to the sugar schedule, therefore, the committee of the whole has abolished the bounty, and placed all sugar, both raw and refined, upon the free list. When it came to consider the coal schedule, however, the committee fared much better and all four of the amendments designed to place a duty of from 40 to 75 cents per ton upon coal were beaten. The debate upon the coal schedule developed a great deal of feeling among the Southern members, especially those from Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, and Alabama, whose states are interested either in coal or iron ore. The general impression is that the defeat of the sugar men and of those who are interested in retaining a duty upon coal will result in strengthening the movement developed on the Democratic side to recommit the bill. If the iron men are defeated, and especially if the income tax should be placed upon the bill as a rider later in the week, another strong faction on the Democratic side will be added to this movement. The Republicans will all vote for the motion to recommit; and, with the Democrats who do not care to vote against the bill outright and who are not satisfied with it in its present form, they may be able to muster a majority to send it back to the committee. This is now admitted on all hands to be the chief danger to the bill. If it could be brought to a direct vote there is no question about it passing. Mr. Haugen (Rep. Wis.) said he desired on the part of the iron men of the Lake Superior district to enter a protest against the proposed abolition of the duty on iron ore. Mr. Blair (Rep. N. H.) took the floor and was speaking when the time arrived for a recess.

The feature of the day in the senate was a speech by Senator Cullom. He arraigned the administration for its Hawaiian policy, and declared that, Commissioner Blount, had he been in any other country, would have been shot as a spy and traitor, as was Maj. Andre in America a hundred years ago.

Washington, Jan. 25. — The amendments to the iron schedule to-day shared the same fate as those to the coal schedule yesterday. They were overwhelmingly defeated, and iron ore remains on the free list. The remainder of the day was spent in the discussion of amendments looking to the free admission of machinery used in the manufacture of cotton goods.

Mr. Tawney (Rep. Minn.) denounced the proposition to place iron ore on the free list.

Mr. Baldwin (Dem. Minn.), who represents the Duluth district, in reply to Mr. Tawney, said that he represented the largest iron ore district in the world, and few men in Minnesota anticipated the ruin and distress predicted on the other side. With free ore, he said, we could compete with the world. If ore were made free Duluth and West Superior would become a greater ore center than Pittsburg. In demanding free iron ore he represented the 1,500,000 people of Minnesota. His colleague represented the two mine owners.

The votes were taken upon the pending amendments, first upon the amendment of Mr. Taylor, to that of Mr. Oates, to restore the rates of existing laws on iron ore—75 cents per ton. Only one Democrat, Mr. Swanson of Virginia, voted with the Republicans in favor of this proposition and it was lost—137 to 67. The other vote was upon Mr. Oates' amendment to fix the duty at 40 cents per ton. This shared the fate of its predecessor.

The ways and means committee voted—9 to 7—to refer the internal revenue bill, with the income tax provision, to the house. Just before the house adjourned the advocates and opponents of the income tax upon the Democratic side were arrayed against each other, the latter attempting to prevent Mr. McMillin from reading the internal revenue bill to the house. The Republicans, however, joined hands with the income taxers and defeated the small band of Democrats who have pledged themselves to use every effort to prevent the internal revenue bill, containing the income tax, from being placed upon the Wilson bill as a rider. Mr. Wilson, chairman of the committee, who is in sympathy with them, allowed the debate upon the Robbins amendment to run on without interruption to-day, it was said, for the express purpose of consuming time, so that the committee amendments which he has to offer will, when he again takes the floor, exhaust the debate until Saturday night and thus shut off the possibility of the internal revenue bill being offered as an amendment to the Wilson bill. A great deal of bitter feeling exists, however, and should such a programme be followed it would unquestionably lead to charges of bad faith.

The Hawaiian question came prominently before the senate again to-day, and after an hour's brisk discussion went over for a day. The result of the debate was to show that there is division both in the Democratic and Republican ranks as to the wisdom of adopting the resolution reported by the foreign relations committee. Senator Vest objected to it on the ground that it indicated the project for annexation might be more favorably received in the future, and Senator Allison and other Republicans objected to it on the ground that according to their interpretation the resolution pledged the senate as altogether opposing the principle of annexation and was approving the policy of the president in this respect. A half-dozen amendments are now pending to modify its phraseology, and it is likely to be subjected to material changes before final adoption.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Only one amendment to the tariff bill of importance was adopted by the house to-day, that repealing the reciprocity clause of the McKinley tariff law. The entire day was consumed by the New York Democrats who were filibustering against the income tax proposition, which they feared would be offered along with other features of the internal revenue bill as an amendment to the Wilson bill. As on yesterday, several Democratic speeches severely criticising the bill were delivered. The Democratic advocates of the income tax became so impatient over the course pursued by the New York members that they concluded that the best way of settling the question would be by holding a caucus. This Mr. Wilson finally agreed to, and on his motion the house recessed and the fight was transferred from the open house to a secret caucus.

The session of the senate to-day was uneventful. The Hawaiian resolution went over until to-morrow, and Senator Allen of Nebraska made an extended argument in favor of his resolution declaring the contemplated issue of bonds by Secretary Carlisle to be unlawful and the bonds, if issued, illegal. A desultory discussion on the federal election bill followed until 3 o'clock, when addresses of eulogy were delivered upon the late J. Logan Chipman, formerly a representative from Michigan, and as a further mark of respect at 3:50 p. m. the senate adjourned.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The only amendment to the tariff bill adopted in the house was one increasing the duty on cut stones unset to 30 per cent ad valorem and taking uncut rough stones from the free list and placing them on the dutiable list at 15 per cent ad valorem. The ways and means committee which decided to reduce the duty on cut stones from 15 to 10 per cent, was overruled in this matter. An attempt to place tin plate on the free list was unsuccessful. There was, as on the two preceding days, considerable open plain spoken opposition to the bill on the Democratic side. The consideration of the internal revenue features of the bill, including the income tax, goes over until Monday.

The session of the senate was devoted to a discussion of Senator Call's public land resolution and a general colloquy over the federal election bill. A strong appeal was made by Senator Call in favor of the homesteaders of Florida who, he alleged, were being deprived of their rights by land grant railroads without authority of law, and he finally succeeded in having his resolution referred the the judiciary committee for a careful inquiry into the legal rights of the question. Senator Chandler made an effort to have the bill repealing the federal election laws postponed until next December, but the motion was, of course, promptly defeated by the Democrats on a roll call.

The State's Schools.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The superintendent of public instruction has completed his report, which shows the attendance of the pupils of the state public schools, the length of the school year in the various districts, and the number of pupils entitled to the apportionment made out of the money accruing from the interest on money received from the sale of state lands. The report states that the average daily attendance in the independent and special districts for the year was 1,090; number of pupils entitled to the apportionment, 98,816; number not entitled to apportionment, 13,920. The average length of the school year in these districts last year was 8.9 months, and the average voted for 1894 is nine months. In the common school districts the average daily attendance for the year was 795; number of pupils entitled to the apportionment, 145,443; not entitled to the apportionment, 53,906. The average length of the school year was 6.4 months, and the average voted for 1894 is 6.6.

Kelly Is Guilty.

Hillsboro, N. D., Jan. 29.—After deliberating all night the jury found James Kelly guilty of the murder of Evan Paulson. The law of this state allows the jury to fix the penalty. They say imprisonment for life. The evidence is all circumstantial, but public sentiment says guilty. The court has adjourned till next Tuesday, when the trial of Lowe, Kelly's accomplice, will begin. All other business of the court is postponed.

Sympathy With Radicals.

Belgrade, Jan. 29.—A large meeting, chiefly composed of workmen, was held here to-day. Resolutions of sympathy with the Radicals were adopted. Afterward a procession was formed which marched through the principal streets cheering heartily for the king and the constitution. There was no disturbance.

BISHOP UNDER ARREST

Right Rev. Thomas Bonacum, Bishop of the Diocese, Is Arrested on a Charge of Criminal Libel Preferred by One of His Priests.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 29.—All day yesterday this city was in a fever of excitement, especially among the Catholic population. This was caused by the arrest late Saturday night of Rt. Rev. Thomas Bonacum. The arrest was made on a charge of criminal libel preferred against the episcopal prelate by one of his priests, Father Corbett of Palmyra, by whom, with other priests, charges against the bishop were some time ago preferred to Mgr. Satolli. Father Corbett said that he had got tired of the slowness of the ecclesiastical judicial procedure and had determined to put a stop to the persecution of himself by his ordinary. This particular charge on which the arrest was made was based on a letter sent to the parishioners of Father Corbett at Palmyra by Bishop Bonacum while the priest was in St. Louis. This letter, it is said, was a notification to the parishioners of Father Corbett that the ecclesiastic was under the ban (suspended), and warning them not to hold spiritual communion with him in any way whatsoever in any religious exercises or celebrations that the priest might choose to hold or conduct. Appropriate penalties for actions contrary to the course indicated in the notification are said to have been threatened. This letter, Father Corbett alleges in his complaint, is a direct breach of the order of Mgr. Satolli, in which that dignitary, by authority of Rome, had restored the priest to his charge after his first suspension by the bishop, which occurred in the early part of last summer. That restoration, he avers, was to last pending the trial of the cause by Archbishop Hennessy, and the present suspension, while being a breach of Mgr. Satolli's orders, is positively without any cause, and the priest further sets up his belief that this last suspension was made to villify, scandalize and defame him, and to gratify the bishop's vicious dislike for him. He winds up by saying that he believes the bishop must be crazy.

Neither Father Corbett nor Bishop Bonacum would talk, but the laity and clergy in general talked freely, animatedly and excitedly. They took sides, and among the laity several fistiuffs took place. Feeling ran high, and the conduct of both priest and bishop was applauded and condemned. Bishop Bonacum, after being arrested, was immediately released to appears for preliminary hearing Feb. 6.

Ashton Convicted.

Janesville, Wis., Jan. 29.—Matthew R. Ashton was found guilty of murder in the first degree. The crime charged was the murder of Mrs. Daniel Stone. Mrs. Stone, the wife of an aged uncle, was the one person who stood between him and the complete possession of a big estate. The crime was fixed upon Ashton almost entirely by circumstantial evidence. There had been trouble between Ashton and Mrs. Stone because Ashton was brought from Canada and given charge of the $200,000 Stone property. Mrs. Stone wanted her son-in-law to have the management. The morning of her death she was seen in her kitchen at 5 o'clock and Ashton was just outside pumping water. At 6 o'clock Mrs. Stone was missing, and her body was found in the sistern under the kitchen sink five hours later. The defense has been that she committed suicide.

Eight Lost.

Milwaukee, Jan. 29. — Mrs. Robert Lunde of this city received a letter to-day saying the schooner Florence of Holland, Mich., had capsized above New Orleans, La., in the Mississippi, and eight persons on board had drowned. The party was on a pleasure trip to Florida, and left Holland in September. The reported dead are George Henry Brooks, aged about 65 years; George Brooks, aged 19; Eddie Brooks, aged 17; Bertie Brooks, aged 11, and John Howard and Mrs. John Howard, aged about 65 each, and their son James Howard, 35 years old. Capt. Brooks is Mrs. Lunde's father. The younger Brooks boys are sons of Mrs. T. J. Morrissey, of 230 Walker street, Milwaukee.

Cut His Throat.

Columbus, Jan. 29.—There was a sensation in the big dining room at the Ohio penitentiary when John Conroy rose in the presence of the 1,900 prisoners seated at breakfast and announced his intention of taking his own life. He slashed the side of his neck with the knife with which he had been eating, and after he sat down the blood poured in a stream over his shoulder. He was taken to the hospital where it was found that the wound would not be fatal. The fellow had a mania for killing himself in public. Once he deliberately sawed a finger off in the prison shops in order that he might not be compelled to work. Conroy is serving a five-year sentence from Muskingum county for having burglars' tools in his possession.

Fireman Hurt.

Mauston, Wis., Jan. 29.—The Anderson hotel took fire yesterday afternoon. On the way to the fire the engine was overturned and completely wrecked. William Balentine, the engineer, was crushed beneath the engine, and it is feared was fatally injured. The damage to the hotel is not great.

Alb Vrits Dead.

New Prague, Minn., Jan. 29. — Alb Vrits, an old settler of this city, died of old age at an early hour yesterday. He was born in Bohemia.

Many Buildings Burn.

Bath, Me., Jan. 29.—One of the most disastrous fires in the history of the city broke out to-day in the Sagadahock stables. A large part of the business portion of the city was gutted, about twenty buildings being destroyed. The fire spread so rapidly that the department was wholly unable to cope with it. Calls for assistance sent to Portland and Lewiston brought steamers and two hand engines were sent from Brunswick. The water pipes were frozen or broken, and but few of the hydrants could be used, and it was some time before effective work could be done. The fire communicated to the hotel from the stables, and the house, which is the leading hostelry of the city, was quickly gutted. The adjoining buildings were soon in flames and before the fire could be controlled $500,000 worth of property was destroyed. The following were burned out and are the heaviest losers: Sagadahock house, Lincoln National bank, A. Hallett & Co., druggists; J. O. Shaw, bookseller and stationer; J. S. Douglass; clothing; Marine National bank; D. T. Perry & Sons, dry goods, also their crockery store; A. M. Frank, cigar dealer; W. H. Stearns, bookbinder; J. W. Gilmore, confectionery; Central House; W S. Shorey, bookbinder; W. J. Jack, barber; F. J. Parks & Co., cigar manufacturers; Twenty-Five-Cent institution; Charles H. Norton, cigar dealer; W. G. Webber, druggist. Several society halls, insurance and lawyers and doctors' offices and dwellings were also burned, while the Times Printing company and a number of stores were considerably damaged by water.

Three Heroic Men.

Pittsburg, Jan. 29.—A wave of anarchy in whose train followed bloodshed, arson and the destruction of property passed over the Mansfield coal region Saturday. It began at dawn and at dusk it was estimated that $100,000 worth of property had been destroyed. Made wild by fancied grievances and liquor, a mob of several hundred foreigners, Hungarians, Slavs, Italians and Frenchmen, swept over the country surrounding Mansfield and through the valleys of Tom's and Painter's runs. They attacked mine owners, miners and the few scattered deputy sheriffs, burned tipples, wrecked cars and destroyed railroad property. Until noon the mob met hardly any resistance. At that time it reached the mines of the Beadling Bros., near Federal, on the Pittsburg, Chartiers & Youghiogheny railroad. Here the rioters met determined resistance and were checked. With repeating Winchester rifles in their hands, Thomas, William and Harry Beadling stood their ground and opened fire upon the mob as it advanced. They fired four volleys in quick succession, fatally wounding one and injuring a half-dozen others. Soldiers arrived and the mob dispersed.

Banks Are Bilked.

Kansas City, Jan. 29.—The grand jury, now in session here, has for several days been investigating a deliberate scheme to defraud the National Bank of Commerce out of $60,000, and it is known that two indictments have been returned and that capiases for the arrest of the offenders are in the hands of Marshal Stewart. The fraud, which has caught the banks in several commercial centers of the United States, was brought to light by its Kansas City ramifications. Its extent, as far as traced, is between $150,000 and $200,000, with all the details not yet ascertained. The persons against whom indictments were found are J. H. Bemis and one of his sons, both of the lumber firm of J. H. Bemis & Co. of Jefferson, Tex. Banks in Connecticut, Missouri, Tennessee, Kansas, Nebraska and Illinois are known to have been defrauded, and the full extent of the fraud is not yet known.

Big Capital Stock.

Boston, Jan. 29.—The American Bell Telephone company will this week petition the legislature for permission to increase its capital stock about $5,000,000. The present stock represents $20,000,000, and the company desires to make it $50,000,000, ostensibly for the purpose of extending and improving the service, and in order to place it beyond the reach of any competing company that may be organized. It is stated by those on the inside that the increase of the stock is for a triple purpose—the extension of the long-distance service, the absorption of a number of subordinate companies and for extension, improvements and general changes.

Jealous and Buckshot.

Grand Haven, Mich., Jan. 29.—A man named Hawkins in the village of Robinson, ten miles from here, shot his wife, fatally wounding her. A constable and two citizens went to arrest Hawkins, and as they approached the house he opened fire on them with a shotgun, but his shot failed to take effect. The constable returned the fire, filling Hawkins with buckshot, and it is expected he will die. Jealousy was the cause, as Hawkins was suspicious that a mail carrier was going to his house to visit his wife.

Opera House Burned.

Palmer, Mass., Jan. 29.—Fire cleared away the opera house last night and with it destroyed all the machinery and stocks in trade of the most prosperous business firms. The fire caught in the lower story of the three-story block known as Holden's opera house, and when discovered was burning the partition between the drug store of R. J. Allen and the shoe store of R. J. Henry. At midnight the fire was under control. The total loss was about $50,000; insurance, $30,000.

Fatal Free-for-All Fight.

St. Louis, Jan. 29.—In a free-for-all fight at 1038 Morgan street this morning, in which a dozen or more negroes engaged, the result of too much drink at a birthday party, Joseph Henry was very seriously cut and Bud Dixon fatally injured, a piece of bone two inches square being hacked out of his skull and a crack four inches long being made in the remaining portion. Three arrests have been made.

Paul Schlick's Threats.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Jan. 29.—Paul Schlick, living at Sanborn, is in the custody of the deputy sheriff on a warrant sworn out by his wife charging him with making threats against her life. Schlick was placed under bonds to keep the peace. It will lead to a divorce, as Mrs. Schlick is afraid to live with him.

Dr. Murphy's Condition.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The condition of Dr. J. H. Murphy is practically unchanged. He is still unconscious and unable to take nourishment of any kind.

MITCHELL IS KNOCKED OUT

THE BRITISH PUGILIST LASTS BUT THREE ROUNDS.

Corbett Again Proves Himself the Champion Fighter of the World by Easily Defeating Mitchell — Both Men Are Arrested.

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 26.—For the first time since he has been acknowledged head of the pugilistic fraternity of the world, James J. Corbett has defended with success the title which he won by defeating his predecessor, John L. Sullivan. Pitted against the boasted exponent of the manly art in England, America's brawny representative has proven his fitness for the place of honor which his sinews and muscles won for him, and the tail of the British lion has been severely stepped upon by the foot of the mighty bruiser from the West.

There is exultation in the land and Charles Mitchell is grovelling in the dust of defeat, heaping imprecations on his ill luck and mingling with them, vain regrets of his inability to whip the victor.

The British pugilist has attended his pugilistic funeral and henceforth he will remember with poignant grief the time and place of his first defeat.

It was hard to see a man suffer defeat, and Mitchell's defeat was rendered all the more hard because he was a stranger in a land comparatively strange to him, and without the large following of friends, like his opponent, to cheer him on to victory.

As the fight went on the American showed himself the master of the Englishman, and the feeling which had buoyed up the doughty boxer from across the water gave way to something like despair. Coached by his seconds and guided by his own keen ring generalship, Mitchell tried to stave off the inevitable and endeavored to snatch success from the very jaws of defeat. The blows of his opponent, however, were too well aimed and were backed by too much science and muscle to give him much time for reflection.

As he sank to the ground a defeated man there was a depicted look on his face, such a look of sorrowful regret, mingled with hatred, fierce and malignant, as seldom has been seen upon the face of man. With the full knowledge that the defeat at the hands of a sworn enemy was to be his reward, Mitchell again tried to stand before his opponent. His battered and bruised form was forced into a half standing position; but not for long, as he toppled over and fell headlong into the arena, there arose a shout of exultation from the throats of Corbett's friends such as has never been heard in the quiet and quaint town of Jacksonville. Spurred on by the shout, the Englishman made another attempt to rise, but again he failed, and as shout after shout was sent up by the crowd, Mitchell heard in those cries the announcement of his downfall as England's glory, and at the hands of the one whose skill he had feigned to despise.

About two thousand men were in the arena when Corbett and Mitchell entered the ring. Both were given ovations.

At 2:50 p. m. the men were called to center and instructed by the referee as they faced each other. Mitchell looked diminutive beside the champion.

Second Round—A wild exchange and a clinch; Corbett uppercuts his man as they come together. Mitchell lands hard on ribs and as Mitchell came in Jim caught him on the head, staggering him, Corbett uppercuts him again and lands with right on Charley's ribs, Mitchell reaching Jim's chin. A sharp rally follows, with Corbett having all the best of it. They are going at it. Mitchell got in twice on Corbett's neck; Corbett knocks him down twice in succession. Jim floored his man cleverly and knocked him down again as he essayed to arise. The gong saved Mitchell.

Third Round—Mitchell rather groggy. Corbett rushed at him, swung right and left heavily on Mitchell's neck. Charley went down. He took the full time to arise, and then Corbett rushed at him like a tiger. Mitchell clinched. Corbett threw him off and floored him with a stiff facer. Again he took all the time to rise, and when he advanced toward Corbett the latter swung his right with deadly effect on Charles' nose. Mitchell reeled and fell on his face helpless. Corbett wins easy.

The referee counted 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. Mitchell is knocked out. The referee declared Corbett winner of the match and champion of the world.

Mitchell's face was covered with blood. He was carried to his corner in a helpless condition. Time of fight 9 minutes. It was all Corbett's battle, though Mitchell made a show in the first round.

The men did not shake hands at the beginning of the fight. The referee called upon the men to do so, but neither responded.

Never was man so completely, so signally and, for a fighter, so disgracefully beaten as was Mitchell in this, probably the last time the Britisher will ever respond to the call of "Center, gentlemen."

As Mitchell and Corbett left the grounds they were arrested, charged with breach of the peace. Both gave bail. The arrest was caused by Attorney General Lamar on the charge of fighting by previous appointment.

The fighters were in the court room together, and through the efforts of Joe Vendig the long cherished animosity of the two men toward each other was buried. Though they had not exchanged the usual handshakes in the ring, either before or after the battle, they cordially shook hands in the court room.

Prize Fighting Mania Dying Out.

London, Jan. 26.—The Standard, speaking of the Corbett-Mitchell fight, declares that it is an absurd farce, and that it is glad the prize fighting mania is dying out, and that common sense appears to be regaining sway in the United States.

Grand Forks has been suffering for some time past from a typhoid fever epidemic as high as 1760 cases have been reported and a large number of deaths have occured. The causes have been traced to the water used by the city and which is taken from the Red Lake River. Upon being analized this water was found to be full of typhoid fever germs. As quite a number of our citizens and people in this vicinity use this water it would be well for them to thoroughly boil it before they use it for drinking water and thus avoid the danger as boiling destroys the typhoid germ.

The freight and commission will average about 12 cents a bushel.

India has exported nearly 18 million bushels of wheat since the first of last April, yet it is stated on good authority that in India fifty million people are on the verge of starvation. They needed that wheat, but they had nothing to pay for it with. A terrible condition of things. Yet in the United States we see a fainter reflection of the same condition. Wheat is a drug on the market, selling at from 40 to 50 cents a bushel. Thousands of workingmen are in need of this wheat, but are out of employment, and have not the means to pay for it with. Something is out of order in the arrangement of things. The workmen need the farmers wheat and the farmers need the clothing, the hardware, etc. products of the workman's ranks, yet they are powerless to make the exchange. And both are sufferers. Surely here is a problem for statesmen.—Fertile Journal.

The gold discoveries on an island in Rainy Lake, in the extreme northern part of Minnesota must wait for spring before their value can be proved or disproved. A Government agent has been up to the field and reports that there is considerable gold there. This report will be sufficient to set in motion a throng of prospectors and adventurers as soon as the snow leaves the ground so that work can be done with pick and shovel. I do not anticipate any great result in the way of important finds of workable veins of quartz. But the search will make widely known the fact that Minnesota has a big rich valley along the Rainy River that is a perfect [illegible] at all seasons [illegible] and other game. That valley contains a great deal of alluvial land and its climate is much milder than that of the plains west of it. When a railroad reaches the shores of the Rainy River, thousands of industrious people will make good homes for themselves along its banks and around the big lakes that it drains.—The Northwestern Magazine.

NEAR THE EXPLODING POINT.

A good many people in Europe think that the long predicted continental war is in sight. They have been saying that for a good many years, but they have a little more reason to be nervous just now than they have had since the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-78.

The tremendous pressure of high taxes for the maintenance of big standing armies can be endured for some time by such powers as Germany, Russia, France and Austria-Hungary, but even they cannot go on forever increasing their armaments. There will come an end of the strain, either in bankruptcy, which Italy is approaching rapidly, or an explosion and war or revolution by overtaxed people.

A dispute over a boundary in equatorial Africa, where the powers are striving to gobble up African territory, may provoke a European war. The renewal by Russia of her attempt to carry out the ambition of her Peter the Great and Catherine and get a Mediterranean water front at the expense of Turkey, would start the conflagration in Europe. England's line of defenses from Gibraltar to Cyprus and Alexandria keeps Russia out of the Mediterranean. Russia will try to get there when she thinks she is navally stronger than England.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Financier, a bankers paper published in New York, does not agree with the statements so frequently made by statisticians that the amount of money in circulation in the United States is $25 per capita. The Financier says that after we deduct for that which has been lost, coins used in the arts, sent home by Chinamen, and vast amount carried to Europe by American travelers, the per capita circulation, instead of being $25, is less than $14. As that is not a Populist sheet, perhaps our local readers will give the statement degree of credence. Notwithstanding the issue of $50,000,000 additional national bank notes, our volume of money was contracted more than $50,000,000 during the fiscal year ending June 30. Our population and our need for money at the same time was rapidly increasing. The cause came this from contracting the currency, and then was intensified by threatened tariff legislation. The country is all right if Congress will only leave the currency and the tariff severely alone.—New Britain Com. Record.

$3,000.00 A YEAR FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS.

If you want work that is pleasant and profitable, send us your address immediately. We teach men and women how to earn from $5.00 per day to $3,000 per year without having had previous experience, and furnish the employment at which they can make that amount. Nothing difficult to learn or that requires much time. The work is easy, healthy, and honorable, and can be done during daytime or evenings, right in your own locality, wherever you live. The result of a few hours' work often equals a week's wages. We have taught thousands of both sexes and all ages, and many have laid foundations that will surely bring them riches. Some of the smartest men in this country owe their success in life to the start given them while in our employ years ago. You, reader, may do as well; try it. You cannot fail. No capital necessary. We fit you out with something that is new, solid, and sure. A book brimful of advice is free to all. Help yourself by writing for it to-day—not to-morrow. Delays are costly.

He grinned helplessly.

"Well, colonel," he said slowly, "you know 'Mandy Collins, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, I axed her three months ago, an the critter wouldn't have me."

"Why didn't you try somebody else?"

"I did, colonel—a likely gal down the crick. I sot right up to her, like a sick kitten to a hot brick, for a whole week, when one day 'long come 'Mandy, an I axed her ag'in."

"What did she say?"

"She wouldn't have me."

"Try another," I said encouragingly.

"I did, colonel. 'Nother fine gal across the mountain. I sot up to her three weeks hard runnin, an one night, when I was 'bout ready to pop, I seen 'Mandy at spellin school, an axed her ag'in."

"What did she say that time?"

"Purty much the same thing."

"Why didn't you let her alone, then, and devote yourself to one you could get?" I asked half provoked at his persistence.

"You bet I did, colonel! I went right after old man Hankins' gal, Mary, an Mary seemed mighty willin an obligin till one mornin I seen 'Mandy comin down the road, an I up an axed her ag'in."

"What did she say?" I asked.

"Wouldn't have me no more'n t'other times," and his face fell.

"As I said before, Jim," I very emphatically remarked, "why in thunder don't you try another girl?"

"That's what I'm doin now, colonel," he responded, with more spirit than he had previously shown. "Fer a month an upwards I've put 'Mandy clar outen my mind, an I'm settin up to Hester Jones seven nights a week, an ther ain't no use talkin, colonel, Hester likes me!"

"That's right, old fellow!" I exclaimed, slapping him on the shoulder. "Keep at it and you'll get her sure."

Stories About Pat.

A man in Limerick went to the undertaker to order a coffin for Pat Connell. "Dear me," said the undertaker, "is poor Pat dead?" "No, he's not dead yet," answered the other, "but he'll die tonight, for the doctor says he can't live till morning, and he knows what he gave him."

Tom Moore used to tell a story about stopping, as a boy, with an uncle at Sandymount, near Dublin, and finding a gentleman lying on the road. There was a small bullet hole in his right temple. An old woman was looking at him. "Gentlemen," she said, "isn't it the blessing of God it didn't hit him in the eye."

Some people were laughing at an Irishman, who won a race, for saying, "Well, I'm first at last!" "You weren't last," [illegible] "Sure, wasn't I behind before?"

Some young fellows of the navy shaved the head of a brother officer, an Irishman, when he was drunk and put him to bed. He had previously given orders that he was to be called at 5 in the morning, and he was accordingly called at that hour. When he looked in the glass and saw an appearance so unlike what he expected, "Dang me," said he, "if they haven't called the wrong man!"

An Irish gentleman had a splendid looking cow, but she kicked so much that it took a very long time, and it was a daily [illegible], to milk her. So he took her to a fair to be sold, and told his herd man to be sure not to sell her without letting the buyer know her faults. He brought home a large price, which he had got for it. His master was surprised and said, "Are you sure you told all about her?" "Indeed, I did, sir," said the herdsman. "He asked me whether she was a good milker. 'Begorra, sir,' says I, 'it's what you'd be tired milking her!'"—Seventy Years of Irish Life.

The Best References.

A man who looked suspicious applied at a boarding house on Adams avenue for a home and was received by the landlady.

"I presume," she said, after inspecting him critically and hearing what he had to say, "that you can give references."

"What kind do you wish, madam?" he inquired.

"Well," she hesitated, "I don't know who you are, and I would like something in the nature of a recommendation."

"All I can give, madam," he said, pulling out some papers, "are here. They are receipted bills from every hotel I boarded with up to date, as you will observe."

Her face brightened.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "that will do. You can have anything in the house you want."—Detroit Free Press.

Old and New.

The "sturdy oak" and clinging vine" are out of fashion now;
The modern maiden stands alone with triumph on her brow.
She buffets bravely with the world, she fares as best she can
And proudly makes her way through life without the help of man.
Her broken yoke of servitude she tramples 'neath her feet;
Her ancient tyrant she defies and finds her freedom sweet.

The independent woman's thoughts insist on harking back.
The sheltered life seems very fair amid earth's crowding ills,

1,110 BUS. POTATOES PER ACRE.

This astonishing yield was reported by Abr. Hahn of Wisconsin, but Salzer's potatoes always get there. The editor of the Rural New Yorker reports a yield of 736 bushels and 8 pounds per acre from one of Salzer's early potatoes. Above 2,410 bushels are from Salzer's new seedling, Hundredfold. His new early potato, Lightning Express, has a record of 603 bushels per acre. He offers potatoes as low as $2.50 a barrel, and the best potato planter in the world for but $2.

If you will cut this out and send it with 6c postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive free his mammoth potato catalogue and a package of sixteen-day "Get There, Eli" radish. w

MOLECULAR LIFE IN DIAMONDS.

Gems Declared to be Masses of Enormously Active Atoms.

If you think your polished diamond is a mere aggregation of inanimate crystals you are away wrong: If you imagine that its components are devoid of orderly, coherent motion, you are equally mistaken. It has come to pass that we are given to understand that diamonds are masses of active molecules. Inasmuch as every compact body is composed of multitudes of exceedingly small yet not indistinguishable molecules, it might be concluded that in a solid, at least, these particles would be clustered together in an indivisible mass. This theory as applied to diamonds is incorrect, and has been completely overthrown by the researches and experimentations of Sir Robert Ball of Liverpool. The facts set forth by Mr. Ball with reference to the structure of the diamond are fascinating. He asserts that were the sensibility of our eyes increased, so as to make them a few million times more powerful it would be seen that the diamond atoms, which form the perfect gem when aggregated in sufficient myriads, are each in a condition of rapid movement of the most complex description.

Each molecule would be seen swinging to and fro with the utmost violence among the neighboring molecules and quivering from the shocks it receives from encounters with other molecules. The hardness and impenetrability so characteristic would at first sight seem to refute the supposition that it is no more than a cluster of rapidly moving particles; but the well known impenetrability of the gem arises from the fact that, when attempt is made to press a steel point into a stone, it fails, because the rapidly moving molecules of the stone batter the metal with such extraordinary vehemence that they refuse to allow it to penetrate or even to mark the crystallized surface.

When glass is cut with a diamond the edge which seems so hard is really composed of rapidly moving atoms. The glass which is cut is also a mass of moving molecules, and what seems to happen is that as the diamond is pressed forward its several particles, by their superior vigor, drive the little particles of glass out of the way.

THE SHORTEST.

An Operator Who Wanted "Baccy," But Wouldn't Break the Rules.

Up on the top floor of the Phoenix building 200 men and women are employed, day and night, as telegraph operators by one of the great telegraph companies.

To hear the constant din of the clicking instruments one would hardly suppose that the operators have much time for recreation. Nevertheless, when the chief operator is not near, many an amusing incident occurs almost daily.

One of the strictest rules of the office, which as been recently enforced, is the one which prohibits operators to converse during work hours. To leave their desk while on duty is also forbidden, says the Chicago Tribune.

Only a few days ago two young men were sitting at one desk opposite each others. One of them was sending "press" to New Orleans, while the other, was receiving messages from the same point. The sender was addicted to the use of tobacco. His supply had run out. Looking across the other side of the desk he spied a plug at the side of his vis-a-vis.

The young man was in a quandary. To have asked for the coveted weed would have been a breach of the rules. It was too far for him to reach, so he resolved on another plan.

Stopping in his message he asked the receiver in New Orleans to tell his partner on the other side to hand him a "chew." Click, click, click," came the response over the instrument on the other side of the glass partition. The tobacco was thrown over, and one young man was made happy.

The message had gone to New Orleans and returned to Chicago in less than one minute, and the chief clerk was no wiser.

Maternal Devotion.

In the western part of Massachusetts, says the Churchman, a fire recently destroyed a fine barn on a stock farm, and a number of blooded horses and cows perished in the flames.

Soon after the fire the owner, walking over the ruins, came upon an object which touched him more than the sight of the charred bodies of his horses and Jerseys:

There sat an old black hen. He wondered that she did not move her head to look at him as he came near her, but he thought she must be asleep. He poked her with his cane, and to his surprise the wing which he touched fell into ashes. Then he knew that she had been burned to death.

But out from under her came a faint little peep, and pushing her aside with his cane, the man found ten live yellow chickens. The hen had sacrificed her own life to save them.

It is calculated that about the time of Julius Caesar, Spain had 75,000,000 inhabitants; in 1861 her population was found to be about 16,000,000.

A FOOLISH MISTAKE.

"Fare, sir."

Into my pockets went my hands with a mechanical plunge, encountering any quantity of miscellaneous possessions. Cigar-case, pencil, penknife—pshaw! toothpick, match-box, $20 gold piece—Apollos! wasn't there such a thing as small change left within the bounds of creation? And the whole business was rendered particularly aggravating by the arch, half-averted sparkle of a pair of blue eyes opposite.

I never felt my own awkwardness so keenly as at that moment when Netty's little gloved fingers extricated her fare from a tiny silk purse with the grace of a second Venus! I had been chronically in love with Miss Blossom for about a week, but at this moment I felt as if it would be an infinite satisfaction to throw myself under the wheels of the car for her sake!

As she tripped past me with a smile and a nod which set my brain dizzy something shining slipped from the folds of her dress and rolled to the floor. Instinctively I put my boot upon it—was the souvenir of her sweet presence to be desecrated by the irreverent paws of the fat old gentleman or the covetous clasp of the sharp-featured lady in spectacles? No, by the gods! and not until the spectacles had got out and the fat man was safe behind the columns of a newspaper did I venture to possess myself of the stray waif.

It was a 3-cent piece—a bright little coin with a hole drilled in it and a bit of blue ribbon tied therein! Netty had dropped it from that silken purse!

I jumped out of the cars at the serious risk of breaking my neck and rushed home like a demented creature. In my room, with the door locked and double locked, I could view the prize at leisure!

There was an infinitesimal velvet case, lined with snowy satin, among my possessions, in which I generally kept the sole relic of my days of dandyism—a diamond ring. Out went the glittering stone and its rim of gold—any old box would do for that!

The tea-bell had jingled for the third time before I was ready to descend. My mother, good soul, fancied I must be sick. I looked flushed and nervous.

"You haven't taken cold, my boy?"

"Why what on earth has Tom got around his neck?" exclaimed my sister Mary, catching sight of the blue ribbon.

"Nothing, nothing!" growled I, burying my face in a cup of steaming tea.

"It must be a cabalistic spell to keep the witches away—our Tom has grown superstitious since he took to reading metaphysics," tittered roguish little Fanny in a whisper.

There was a true feminine giggle all around the table. I pretended not to hear the remark, and maintained a dignified silence until Mary hung out signals of truce.

"Why, don't you eat anything tonight, Harry? How strange! By the by, did you know that Ellen Percy has invited us all there to-night?"

"I didn't know it," said I, gruffly; "but it makes very little difference, as I haven't the least intention of going."

My sisters set up a simultaneous outcry of deprecation, but I sat unmoved as the Rock of Gibraltar.

"Rebecca Ashe is to be there!" cried Mary.

"Hang Rebecca Ashe!" was the ungallant response.

"And Lily Brownell—that you used to admire so much!" chirped Fanny in sentimental accents.

"I don't care for forty Lily Brownells."

"And all the young people—Charley Stone and Mark Tracey and——"

"Mark Tracey is the most conceited puppy of my acquaintance. I shan't go, that's settled!"

"And Netty Bolssom?" added Fanny. "Netty Blossom? are you certain?"

"Quite, sure—Ellen Tracey, told me so."

"Oh, that alters the case. I think I'll go."

The girls exchanged mischievous glances and ran up stairs to perform the interminable mysteries of the toilet. I remained alone by the ruddy firelight, alternately thinking about Netty Blossom's blue eyes and kissing the 3-cent piece.

It was a very unsatisfactory evening—very! Netty Blossom was there, robed like a fairy. I had brought a superb hothouse bouquet for her, but I might as well have left the flowers at home, for all the chance I got of presenting them to Netty. I couldn't even obtain an opportunity of speaking to her, and all because of that confounded blockhead, Mark Tracey!

"Well," soliloquized I to myself. "I've heard a good deal of the conceit of my amiable sex, but I never knew its full extent until now. Does that puppy suppose his company is so superlatively agreeable that Miss Blossom does not want to exchange a syllable with any other gentleman in the room! Upon—my—word! If he isn't taking her down to supper! Poor, dear little creature, how annoyed she must be! I wonder if it wouldn't be a good plan for me to knock the fellow down! Hallo! What a crowd of crinoline—and the staircase inconveniently dark besides? Here's a dark archway——"

I stopped suddenly with a sensation as if some icy hand had clutched at my heart. The dark archway was not unoccupied—I had stumbled upon Mark Tracey in the act of kissing Netty Blossom in the corner! Through all the obscurity I could discern the crimson blood mounting to Netty's cheek; but Mark, instead of manifesting the least confusion, laughed gayly, and exclaimed with the coolest effrontery:

"Now, don't be horrified, my dear fellow, it may be your turn some day to be an engaged man. Come, Netty."

An engaged man!

My sisters could not imagine why I hurried away that night in such breathless haste. "Just," as Fanny dolefully observed, "as we were beginning to have a little fun." Mary, however, was so full of the occurrences of the evening that she could scarcely wait until we were in the street to say:

"Well, Tom, we shall all dance at a wedding pretty soon. What do you think of the marriage of Netty Blossom and Mark Tracey?"

I uttered an indistinct grunt, which she interpreted as a desire for general information on the subject.

"It's the most romantic affair in the world. They have been engaged this long time, but Netty has played the coquette, and they might never have been married, if it hadn't been for a 3-cent piece."

Hereat I pricked up my ears and bit my underlip spitefully.

"You see Netty told me all about it in the dressing room when we were doing up each other's hair. Mark had given her one with a blue ribbon through it. And somehow she lost it this morning, and, of course, when he discovered it was missing, he upbraided her with purposely losing it and ceasing to care for him. And there was a delicious lovers' quarrel and reconciliation and all that sort of thing. They are to be married next month, but Netty declares she shall be miserable until her little blue-ribboned token comes to light again."

Long and late I sat before the fire in my room, revolving the singular events of the day and evening that were past and trying to conquer the dull, mortified pangs that would surge up in my breast with the trite palsams of philosophy. Of course I wasn't the first young man that had made an egregious fool of himself, through the agency of the little blind god—nor was it by any means likely that I should be the last? That was certain, but nevertheless I couldn't help feeling as if a pair of long ears sprouting up back of my shirt collar would be singularly appropriate.

There's one thing I claim extra credit for—when I tore the white velvet case from my breast as if it had been a live coal, I neither ground it under my boot heel, nor tossed it on the back of the fire, as the disappointed lovers of novel lore invariably proceed to do. No, I laid it carefully away, and to this day Mrs. Mark Tracy does not know who sent the pretty little casket which was so much dearer to her than the costly trinkets sparkling in her array of other bridal presents—dearer, just because it contained that 3-cent piece.—New York News.

VISIONS OF THE NIGHT.

Such Stuff as Dreams Are Made of—Curious Experiences.

A lawyer who had been overworked rose in his sleep, went into the hall of his house and discharged a pistol. The household hurried to the place and found him at the head of the stairway, awake but much bewildered. He had dreamed of burglars and had gone to attack them. One member of the family had slept through the noise. When he came into the dining-room—before he heard the events of the night—he complained that his sleep had been much disturbed.

He had dreamed that he had been condemned to be shot, that he had been led to the place of execution and had fallen senseless when the guns were fired. A lady dreamed that a man came into her room, poured some water into a basin, carried the splashing water to her bedside and began to sprinkle it over her. She awoke and heard a loud splashing. At first she was motionless with fear, but presently she lighted a candle and went to the basin, where she found a mouse making frantic efforts to get out of the water.

Another dreamed that she had a severe earache; that she rose, unlocked the door that separated her room from one in which two children slept and went to a shelf where there was a lotion, which she applied to her ear. When she awoke she found herself in her own bed and without pain. The door was still locked, but in a few minutes one of the children began to cry that his ear ached, and she rose and went to the shelf for the lotion.

A young man dreamed that he was in his office, busy with a troublesome estimate, when a woman came in with a screaming baby and began to walk rapidly up and down the room, so that it was impossible for the calculator to remember his figures. Presently the woman thrust the child into his arms, and he was so startled by this that he awoke. But the screams still troubled his ears, for a mother in the neighboring room was walking about, vainly trying to quiet a crying child.

Another incident appears to be a case of thought transference. Several years after the death of her husband a widow, lying awake one night, recalled vividly some scenes of her husband's last illness. Presently her daughter, who was beside her, awoke and said: "Oh, mamma, I have been going over in my dreams all the scenes of papa's illness." She then told her dream, in which the scenes were almost the counterpart of those that had been recalled by her mother.—Kate Field's Washington.

A HIGH TIDE.

As Described by a Writer in the Californian:

Swinging myself in the halliards my my companions pulled me to the masthead and I was able to see the bore coming about five miles distant. It looked like a huge wall of water and foam about twenty miles in length and about fifteen feet in height. As the bay at low tide was only about four miles in width, it came rolling in over the dry land on either side almost as far as I could see with the glasses, while behind it the rollers were fully twenty feet high.

There we were, high and dry, but not high enough to save us, and with no way to get off till it rolled over us. There was nothing else to do but place our anchor as well as possible, pack everything snugly in the boat, and retreat to a pile of driftwood half a mile away where there was some chance of our holding our own against the waves. We regretted very much to leave the boat and supplies, but we preferred to risk the 250-mile walk through desert and Indians, back to civilization, to the almost certain chance of being drowned in a deluge.

About the time we climbed upon the drift the bore struck the boat and though our distance from the low tide of the bay made the water only about four feet deep, it struck it with such force that it swung around, cutting the foam like a knife with the 80-foot chain, and began dragging the anchor directly toward us. Though the boat filled half full of water she righted, and with swimming and wading we succeeded in reaching her, and drifted into the slough that we had been trying to reach.

After this we took care to take refuge behind some island just before the coming of the tide, though we saw no more bores like this during the month. That tide was 38 feet in height, and by measuring on the drift we found that there had been others four feet higher, making the tides at the mouth of the Colorado, without doubt, the highest in the world.

WHAT HE HAD.

The Youth Found the Menu Limited, But the Waiter Ready for Business.

The New York youth was doing the west, and the first night he pulled up in rare steak, with mushrooms."

tavern, with a retired cowboy for a waiter. At the supper table the easterner was quite elaborate, says the Free Press.

"Bring me," he said to the waiter, "a a rough town and stopped at a rougher

"Aint got it," replied the waiter promptly.

"Well, bring me a mutton chop, done to a turn."

"Ain't got it," came back the answer. The easterner showed his annoyance.

"Bring me a broiled chicken on toast," he said severely.

"Aint got it," came the same old answer.

"Indeed? (Very ironically.) Suppose you bring me a bit of broiled ham."

"Aint got it," said the cowboy.

"You haven't?" And this time the New Yorker was reckless. "Well, what in thunder have you got?"

"Got a notion to punch you one in the jaw fer bein' a 'dude," replied the waiter in the same tone as before. "Have a slug uv salt pork and a skinned pertater?" And the easterner took that.

KEEPING A PRIVATE NOTE BOOK

Employes of Civil Engineers Are Not Allowed This Privilege.

"He was the best surveyor and draughtsman in my employ," said a well known civil engineer of this city a few days ago, referring to a man whom he had just discharged. "I discovered a short time ago that he was keeping a private note book, and after notifying him that he must stop it, and again learning that he was continuing the practice, I was obliged to discharge him."

I asked the gentleman to explain what he meant by "keeping a private note book."

"A surveyor," said he, "in doing a piece of work makes minutes as he goes along of the lines he runs, of the various points marking the bounds of the lands he is surveying, and all such data as is not necessary for the drawing of his plats, but also incidentally that which may aid him in the case of any other survey being made later on.

"This data, you see, really constitutes a sort of capital or stock in trade, for if the party owning the land ever wishes another survey of it for any purpose he will naturally apply to that same surveyor, who having these old memoranda, can do the work easier and more cheaply than any other surveyor. Often times, after many years have elapsed and old landmarks have passed away, those minutes become very valuable.

"Consequently a civil engineer always wishes to keep these in his own hands, and men in his employ are not allowed to make copies of minutes of surveys which they make while in his employ. Otherwise, an old employe, in leaving and setting up in business for himself, could carry away a large slice of his employer's business.

"This is the reason why I have discharged my best employe upon finding that he was persisting in the practice."

A Queer Little Island.

The Island of Grenada, one of the Windward Group of the Lesser Antilles, is a place where a merchant can establish a thriving business for thirty shillings. The shops generally consist of a barrel, upturned and spread with a board or two. Here are displayed fruits, sweet potatoes, charcoal (used for the negroes' little iron cooking pots) sugar cane, fish and other articles of trifling value. In "A Notable Island" the author describes a visit to a garden near the town of St. George.

The Ethiopian owner of the garden appeared to be a family man, and we presently worked our way into an environment of black babies and more dogs. Having expressed unbounded interest in all he showed me, I could not, of course, draw the line at his own offspring.

"Dat my youngest daughter," he remarked, pointing out an infant of tender years and ebon of blackness, who sat sunning herself among lizards and such things, and wore the same clothes as they.

I said: "And a very nice daughter, too. You are a very lucky man, John."

"Dat my youngest son' ober dare," he continued, this time referring me to a still smaller, and, if possible, blacker fragment of humanity, who was grubbing up refreshments off a rubbish heap.

"A fine boy—a remarkably fine boy," I told the father; and then he grew excited at so much unusual praise, and went into his house and brought out his wife and his other sons and daughters and an aunt for me to criticise. I scattered adulation, and even found out a good point in the aunt which the head of the family had overlooked himself. She possessed the most brilliant and wonderful set of teeth I ever saw.

In the vegetable garden grew sweet potatoes, cucumbers and christophines—this last akin to vegetable marrow. Having viewed these matters and gloated with our guide over a fat chicken-turtle in a tub, we visited the flower garden.

Here appeared mignonette trees, English roses and brilliant crotons, yellow, crimson and purple. Begonias flourished exceedingly. Beneath a tiny fountain that tinkled up into the hot air grew water lilies, while the margin of their home was fringed with angelica and trailing ferns.

That ended the exhibition, because, as our host explained, the weather kept cold and wintry, and all his choicer flora sulked in the bud, refusing to make an effort until the thermometer should ascend to a hundred and fifty, or some such reasonable temperature as that.

Bathing in Electric Light.

There are a few people who believe that electric lights possess great curative powers. It is known that the transmission of the electric current through the atmosphere converts the oxygen into ozone. A thunderstorm clears the air. On such established facts as these the electricians base their claims that the electric light has a curative property. When the rays are directed from a properly devised apparatus to any part of the body the effect is to increase the circulation and to bring on a copious perspiration where the light strikes. If it is desired to treat a particular part of the body, screens and reflectors are adjusted so that the electric light is thrown to that place alone.

If general treatment as well as local application is wanted the patient sits with his back to the apparatus. The specific rays are thrown upon the diseased spot and the general electric light is thrown upon the whole body. Different colored lights are employed for different diseases. For some cases the electric light is thrown through blue glass. For special effect on the blood red electric light is used, and for results on the nervous system the color is yellow. Sun baths are old as the hills. Electric light baths are something entirely new. The astonishing claim is made by the electricians that this treatment is more rapid in its action than drugs.

There is nothing to which the electric treatment is not applied. If the trouble is in the head a blue or violet ray is turned on. For the extremities the red light is applied to help the circulation. Dormant livers and bowels are brought to a sense of duty of the yellow or orange ray. Upon inflammations the blue is turned on.

Red Lead as a Preservative for Iron Work.

In a paper on the influences of chemical agents in producing injury to iron and steel W. Thompson referred to the effects of different paints and varnishes used for the preservation of structural iron and steel from rust. He stated that after long experimenting, he had arrived at the conclusion that red lead paint is the best preservative. He explained this by the fact that although red lead is highly oxidizing substance, it produces a skin of the unoxidizable and protective black of magnetic oxide on the iron itself under the paint.

Government Cats.

Some three hundred and odd cats are maintained by the United States government, the cost of their support being carried as a regular item on the accounts of the post office department. These cats are distributed among about fifty post offices and their duty is to keep rats and mice from eating and destroying postal matter and canvas sacks. Their work is of the utmost importance wherever large quantities of mail are collected, as, for example, at the New York post office, where from 2,000 to 3,000 bags of mail matter are commonly stored away in the basement. Formerly great damage was done by the mischievous rodents, which chewed holes in the sacks and thought nothing of boring clear through bags of letters in a night. Troubles of this sort no longer occur since the official pussies keep watch. Each of the postmasters in the larger cities is allowed from $8 to $40 a year for the keep of his feline staff, sending his estimate for "cat meat" to Washington at the beginning of each quarter.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Much Made.
Money stringency is not the only cause of hard times, and it takes very little money to make a good deal of happiness, as the following shows: Mr. R. B. Kyle, Tower Hill, Appomattox county, Va., writes that he was afflicted with rheumatism for several years, and physicians gave him no relief. Finally he was rubbed all over with St. Jacob's Oil and it cured. During his illness he had spasms and was not expected to live. This points a way to many who think times hard, but who can find an easy way out of their troubles.

Orchards.
Plant, encourage your neighbor to plant. It takes to-day a bushel of wheat to buy a peck of apples—orchards pay. Stark Bros.' share or co-operative orchards furnished without money—an investment for the well-to-do, as well as for men of limited means and providing orchards which otherwise they might never get. A great orchard system on thorough business-like plans—something never before attempted. We practice what we preach, show our faith in our orchards, in our trees—two million trees, co-operative 6 per cent plan, already planted; over two million—over 30,000 acres, share plan and adding over half million a year. Farms with orchards doubling in value annually; a sure income. Our helps enable beginners to succeed. Write us. See adv. in another column this paper.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which is usually the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure.

THE WILSON BILL PASSED.

THE TARIFF BILL PASSES THE HOUSE BY A VOTE OF 204 TO 140.

Washington, Feb. 1.—At 6 o'clock tonight, at the conclusion of one the grandest, most imposing and most impressive scenes ever witnessed in the American capitol, the Wilson tariff bill passed the house of representatives, by a vote of 204 to 140.

The tariff debate on the Wilson bill, which has occupied the attention of the house for two weeks, closed to-day with an unrivalled burst of oratory. Crisp, Reed and Wilson, the giants of the house, came forward in the closing hours to prosecute and defend the great issue—the inauguration of a new economic system in the greatest republic of the world. Attracted by anticipation of a field day and speeches of the leaders, the Washington populace turned out en masse to witness it. Long before 10 o'clock the public galleries, the "bleachers" of the American forum, were black with people. Behind the seats banked against the doors and walls were others, straining to get sight of the arena below. The reserved galleries also were thronged, and even in the president's gallery there was not a vacant seat. The crowded galleries looked down upon a sea of faces.

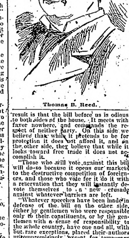
The leaders on both sides were accorded ovations as they entered the hall. As ex-Speaker Reed pushed through one of the lobby doors on his way to his seat the galleries recognized him, and the applause which greeted his appearance was prolonged for fully half a minute. Mr. Reed bowed his acknowledgements. A similar demonstration occurred when Speaker Crisp, dignified and erect, ascended the rostrum and called the house to order.

At 12 o'clock, after a preliminary skirmish of an hour in committee of the whole, over the barley schedule, the bill was reported to the house, and Mr. Reed of Maine was recognized for the opening speech.

Reed of Maine.

Mr. Reed rose from the center of the Republican side, amid the wild cheering and hand clapping of the galleries and the huzzas of his friends about him. Mr. Reed frowned and shook his head, as though the demonstrations were distasteful to him. He waited for the applause to cease. Standing in the aisle, clad in a long Prince Albert coat, with head erect and defiant, he looked the physical and intellectual giant. He began to speak at last, slowly and deliberately, in the voice that has become so familiar to the people. There is an aggressiveness in Mr. Reed's speech which counts for more than rhetoric. He spoke to-day with his back to his friends, his face to his foe across the aisle. Save for his ringing voice the drop of a pin could have been heard. He said:

"In this debate, which has extended over many weeks, one remarkable result has already been reached, a result of the deepest importance to this country. That result is that the bill before us is odious to both sides of the house. It meets with favor nowhere, and commands the respect of neither party. On this side we believe that while it pretends to be for protection it does not afford it, and on the other side, they believe that while it looks toward free trade it does not accomplish it.



Thomas B. Reed.

"Those who will vote against this bill will do so because it opens our markets to the destructive competition of foreigners, and those who vote for it do it with a reservation that they will instantly devote themselves to a new crusade against whatever barriers are left.

"Whatever speeches have been made in defense of the bill on the other side, either by gentlemen who were responsible only to their constituents, or by the gentlemen with a sense of responsibility to the whole country, have one and all, with but rare exceptions, placed their authors uncompromisingly, except for temporary purposes, on the side of Unrestricted Free Trade.

"It is evident that there is no ground for that hope entertained by so many modern men, that this bill, bad as it is, could be a resting place where our manufacturing and productive industries, such as may survive, can re-establish themselves and have a sure foundation for the future, free from party bickering and party strife. Hence, also there can be no foundation for that cry, so insidiously raised that this bill should be passed at once because uncertainty is worse than any bill can possibly be. Were this bill to pass both branches to-day uncertainty would reign just the same. So utterly undisputed and so distinctly visible to every human being in this audience has been our growth and progress, that whatever the future industrial system of this country may be, the past system is a splendid monument to that series of successful statesmen who found the country bankrupt and distracted and left it first on the list of nations."

Mr. Reed here quoted at length from English authorities, showing the strength of their confidence in the prosperity of this country. "The quotations are also reminders for you, Mr. Speaker, and all who hear know that an American who has been long enough here to know his opportunities has found the best place for wages in the world. Is there any example of any nation of the world, situated as ours, which has taken the steps to which we are invited? Some gentlemen, perhaps, are hastening to say that England affords us the needed example, that we have but to turn to her history and find all we need as example, just as in the statement of her political economists we shall find all that is necessary for guidance and instruction. Mr. Speaker, I have looked there and I am amazed to find how little the example of England can teach."

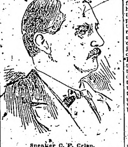
"The truth is that this very question of rising wages is what makes a good many men free traders. People with fixed incomes think that anything which raises wages is inimical to them, and manufacturers who are in foreign markets are naturally anxious to have wages on the foreign standard. I confess to you that this question of wages is to me the vital question. To ensure our growth in civilization and wealth, we must not only have wages as high as they are now, but constantly and steadily increasing."

Mr. Reed Eulogized the American Market

as being the best in the world, owing to the high wages paid here, enabling working men to purchase largely of the comforts of life. "Instead of increasing this market," he said, "by leaving it to the steady increase of wages that the figures of the Aldrich report show so conclusively, and which have received the sanction of the members from New York, the secretary of the treasury and the Democratic bureau of statistics, our committee propose to lower wages and so lessen the market, and then divide that market with somebody else, and all for the chance of getting the markets of the world.



Speaker C. F. Crisp.

The Agricultural Class.

"But what do you say about the farmer? Well, on that subject I do not profess any special learning, but there is one simple statement I wish to make, and leave the question there. If, with cities growing up like magic, manufacturing villages dotting every eligible site, each and all swarming with mouths to be filled, the producers of food are worse off than when half this country was a desert, I abandon sense in favor of political economy. One other thing I have noticed in this debate: When the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. Simpson) gets a little money ahead he does not put it into stocks in these immensely profitable manufactories; he has too much sense. He adds to his farm, and has others add. Example is richer than precept.

"If the hope of agriculturists is in English free trade, they had better ponder on the fact that while the wages of artisans have increased in England $2.43 per week since 1850, the wages of the agricultural laborers have only increased 72 cents, and while the Lancashire operatives in the factories live as well as anybody except Americans, the agricultural laborer is no better than the continental peasant. England's example will not do for agriculture.

"Here let us meet one other question, and let us meet it fairly. We are charged with having claimed that the tariff alone will raise wages. We have never made such a claim in any such form. Free traders have set up that claim for us in order to triumphantly knock it over. What we do say is that where two nations have equal skill and mechanical appliances and market equally so, and one can get her labor at one-half less, nothing but a tariff could maintain the higher wages, and that we can prove. We are the for we alone have within our borders the population and wages, the raw material, and within ourselves the great market which assures to us the most improved machinery. Our constant power to increase our wages, assures us also continuous progress. If you wish us to follow the example of England, I say yes, with all my heart, but her real example and nothing else. Let us keep protection, as she did, until no rival dares to invade our territory, and then we may take our chances for a future which by that time will not be unknown.

"Nobody knows so well as I do how much I have failed to present even my own comprehension of the great argument which should control this vote. I have said not a word of the great fall of prices which has come from the competition of the whole world, rendered possible by protection and substituted for the competition of a single island. I have said not a word of the great difference between the attitude of employers who find their own workmen their best customers in their own land, and who are therefore moved by their own best interests to give their workmen fair wages, and those who sell abroad, and are therefore anxious for low wages at home, and on whom works unrestrictedly that pernicious doctrine 'as wages fall, profits rise.' These and much more have I omitted, for there is a limit to all speaking.

"We know, my friends, that before this tribunal, we all of us plead in vain. Why we fail let those answer who read the touching words of Abraham Lincoln's first inaugural, and remember that he pleaded in vain with these same men and their predecessors. Where he failed we cannot expect to succeed, but though we fail here to-day, like our great leader of other days, in the larger field before the mightier tribunal, which will finally and forever decide this question, we shall be more than conquerors, for this great nation, shaking off, as it has once before, the influence of a lower civilization, will go on to fulfill its high destiny, till over the South, as well as over the North, shall be spread the full measure of that amazing prosperity which is the wonder of the world."

Given an Ovation.

Throughout Mr. Reed's speech he was frequently interrupted with applause, and at times the Democrats joined in the general laughter at his witticisms. When, at 1:30 o'clock, he glanced at the clock, which noted that his time had expired, the eloquent Republican entered upon his brief peroration, there was intense stillness throughout the house. The closing reference to that former illustrious leader, Lincoln, was made in a low voice, which could have hardly been caught had not everyone on the floor and in the galleries been straining to catch every word. As he closed his left hand was raised high in one of the few gestures which marked his speech. As the hand fell and his speech closed there was a burst of applause which swelled into a great demonstration, as the enthusiastic galleries gave shouts, hurrahs and sharp whistles which are often heard in theaters, but seldom in the halls of congress.

Speaker Crisp.

While the demonstration was going on Speaker Crisp relinquished the chair to Mr. Hatch of Missouri and resumed the old seat which he occupied in the days before he was elevated to the speakership. When he arose in his place he received an ovation. The speaker is symmetrical in form, dignified in bearing, with a broad, well poised head, fringed with a touch of silver hair on the sides, upon a pair of square shoulders. He looked the judicial-minded man he is. Until he warmed up he spoke with the hesitation of a man weighing each word, and with a perceptible tremor of the lip. As he became aroused, however, he displayed more freedom and ease, until the words came in a perfect torrent, sweeping resistlessly over all opposition. As Mr. Crisp proceeded he was given generous applause by his Democratic associates upon the floor, but his points were of an argumentative character, which appealed to the students of the question rather than to the galleries. He read from the minority report, and criticised that feature which declared that the foreigner paid the tax. In particular the speaker addressed himself to the ex-speaker, although the latter was still held in the cloak room by the congratulatory handshakes.

"Mr. Speaker," began Mr. Crisp, "I feel embarrassed at this vast audience here assembled; embarrassed in the idea that I may not be able to fulfill the expectations of my friends when I undertake, in the brief period allowed in the rules of the house, to answer, to reply to and make corrections to this house of the errors in the argument to which we have just listened. I assume that the cause of protection has no more able advocate; I assume that the arguments for protection can be put in no more forcible form than that to which you have listened today, and I shall ask you dispassionately to examine with me that argument, and then ask the judgment of the house as to whether the cause attempted to be sustained can be established consistently with right and justice to the people of the United States."

Opposed to Protection.

After his opening introductory remarks, Mr. Crisp declared that an examination of the protective system would show that while it was built up for the ostensible benefit of labor, it was in truth constructed for the benefit of the manufacturing classes. He pointed out that the wages of laborers in protected industries went down, and those in unprotected industries went up as a result of the McKinley act. This was shown by the statistics gathered by the senate committee on finance. The speaker referred to the artificial conditions created by protection. It took men, he said, from their natural channels and diverted them to unnatural channels. The same was true in the diversions made in the channels of trade. Protection was a Chinese wall, which not only shut out the world, but shut in the United States.

Mr. Crisp was greeted with applause when he said that thirty years of protection was a period of unrest during which the masses of the people had constantly rebelled against the heavy burden of taxation. The people had always been stilled at the polls by the Republican promises to reduce the tariff, but once successful at the polls, the Republican legislators surrendered themselves, body and soul, to the manufacturing classes. The speaker declared that the gentleman (Reed) had throughout his speech refrained from the arguments of reason and held to those of prejudice. He pointed to the Chinese as an example of what had resulted from a protective policy of hundreds of years, which had sought to make China rich by trading with itself.

Favors an Income Tax.

Mr. Crisp said that for twenty-five years the Democratic party had been trying to get in power. It had told the people that if given power it would reduce the burdens of taxation. The people had accepted this promise and given the party power. This tariff was a redemption of these pledges to the people. (Applause.)

It was not a perfect bill, but it was a step in the right direction. In referring to various features of the bill he spoke of an income tax, which brought out long and loud applause from the strong income tax element in the house.

He cited a speech of Senator Sherman's twenty years ago to the effect that a tax which fell heaviest on consumption and did not bear heavily on the wealth and income of the country, was intrinsically wrong. Mr. Crisp supported the income tax in vigorous terms. He said $30,000,000 of tax on accumulated wealth was but a small tribute in return for the benefits it received.

Mr. Crisp closed with an eloquent appeal to his Democratic associates to waive minor objections and to look at the great Democratic principles involved. "Let us stand together," said he. "Let us redeem our pledges. Let us pass this bill and it will bring gladness to the consuming masses, to the farmer, to the laborer and to the American people."

There was a triple round of applause as the speaker closed. A page walked toward him with a large potted plant, with red flowers above surrounded with white roses below. The applause continued for more than a minute, during which Mr. Crisp was warmly congratulated. He left the body of the house and returned to the speaker's desk.

While Speaker Crisp was speaking Mrs. Cleveland with a party of ladies from the White House, escorted by Private Secretary Thurber, arrived at the capitol. They forced their way through the crowd with difficulty to the president's gallery, and Mrs. Cleveland listened to the remainder of the debate.

Chairman Wilson.

Mr. Wilson at once arose to close the debate. He was greeted with cheers. He showed no signs of fatigue, to which he had been subjected. He was in fine voice and in an animated spirit, which permitted him to open with humorous and sarcastic replies to Mr. Burrows of Michigan and Mr. Dolliver of Iowa, which were greatly relished by the house. Mr. Wilson said Mr. Reed had foreshadowed his usual course of congressional procedure, and had recited a set oration with the old set praises of protection, "sicklied o'er the with pale hue of philosophy."

Turning to the subject in hand, Mr. Wilson eloquently portrayed the advance of freedom. This bill, he said, was but one of those advances. No McKinley bill could stem the advance of human progress. Great causes could not be laughed or ridiculed away, and the gentleman from Maine could not draw from his armory of sarcasm and wit in order to stop the advance of this cause of lightening the burden of taxation. Mr. Wilson then related the story of the English herring merchant who wrote to Sir Robert Peel that he did not want free trade as to herring, as it would let in Norwegian herring, but that on other goods he was a thorough free trader. Mr. Wilson appealed to his fellow Democrats not to allow any herring arguments to impede the movement toward the overthrow of the protective system.

Referring to an Income Tax.

Mr. Wilson said he had not wanted it attached to the bill, but once attached, he supported it with it with all the loyalty at his command. There was continued applause as Mr. Wilson denied the charges of sectionalism in the bill. He said that the animating feeling of those who had framed this bill was to make this country one in which one man would not be taxed for another, one in which religion, science, culture and education would go hand in hand as the common untaxed heritage of every citizen.

Mr. Wilson closed with an eloquent appeal to his fellow Democrats. He told them that the record of the house would permanently record no passing event, but a great epoch in American history. He wanted every Democratic name recorded on that historic roll. In that case, he said, the day would be a proud and happy one for him. His closing words were: "In the name of honor, in the name of freedom, I summon every Democrat to vote for this bill."

Mr. Wilson's glowing peroration aroused the Democrats and the galleries to the highest pitch of enthusiasm and the demonstration which followed his last words has seldom been equaled in the house. The whole Democratic side rose to its feet, books and records were thrown in the air, cheer followed cheer, the people in the galleries joined with voice and hands in the tribute. Before Mr. Wilson could sit down, three of the Democratic members, bubbling over with enthusiasm—Messrs. Johnson (Ohio), Tucker (Va.) and Bryan (Neb.)—rushed up the aisle, lifted Mr. Wilson upon their shoulders and carried him in triumph to the rear of the hall, where for ten minutes he listened to the words of praise that were showered upon him. It was a remarkable demonstration in every respect.

The Vote.

The vote was then taken, the amendments being first disposed of, resulting in the passage of the bill—204 to 140.

Nays—Fletcher, McCleary, Tawney, Kiefer, Minnesota; Johnson, North Dakota; Lucas, Prickler, South Dakota; Gear, Henderson, Updegraff, Cousins, Lacey, Hull, Hepburn, Hager, Dolliver, Perkins, Iowa; Cooper, Babcock, Shaw, Hagen, Wisconsin.

STOPPING A WILD RUNAWAY.

A Man in a Sulky Gives Chase and Saves Three Lives.

Yesterday morning, as the bells were ringing and people were on their way to church, "Dick" Blumenthal, the well-known horseman, drove leisurely up Main street, jogging in a light sulky the yearling colt that he has lately bought. Possibly some of those who from the sidewalk watched him go by thought he might have been doing something better, considering what day it was. But the next few minutes showed them the error of their notions, and marked Mr. Blumenthal as one person who had indisputably improved his Sunday, and by his courage and skill had averted a terrible accident and saved several lives and had done something none of them could do.

The large bay horses of President James G. Batterson, of the Travelers' attached to his close carriage, became unmanageable away up by the tunnel, and came down Main street running at a terrible pace. Mrs. Batterson and Mrs. Dr. Beach, her daughter, were inside, and Mrs. Beach's little boy and the driver were on the front seat. It isn't clear what set the horses going, but it is very clear that they were going, and going fearfully. The driver kept hold of the reins, and could steer them away from the horse cars, but he couldn't check their speed at all. Spectators were utterly helpless. To run out from the sidewalk and take hold would have been like jumping at a locomotive.

The wild team swept past "Dick" almost before he knew it, but he said afterward that as they went by he caught sight of the little boy on the front seat and felt he must do something. He whipped his colt into a dead run, and in a moment was sailing down Main street after them. He started the chase about opposite St. John's Church and it was a hot race. As the horse cars were close to the left of the running team he took the west side of the roadway. As he drew near the sound of his horse's feet roused the runaways and they put on more speed, but he dashed by them and crossed in front of them so as to be on their left. Then he took his reins in his left hand, liberated his own right, let the running pair come up alongside and, reaching out, took the nigh horse by the bit, and, slowing down his own colt stopped the whole procession just below the South Church. Mr. Batterson's horses had run a mile.

Hundreds of horrified people had watched the swaying carriage and saw with immeasurable relief the brave rescue. A cooler, pluckier thing was never done on Main street than Mr. Blumenthal's masterly management of his own and the other horses. A slight mistake in judgment might have wrecked everything, but there was no mistake. His clear head and thorough horsemanship and his ample courage were adequate to the trying occasion, and it will be a long while before the story of his brave drive ceases to be told by those who saw it. Not Buffalo Bill nor a Central Park mounted policeman could have done any better.

The ladies were taken home and were reported in the afternoon as somewhat unnerved, of course, but in no other way the worse for their thrilling experience. The little boy hadn't known anything about the danger and thought it was a fine drive.—Hartford Courant.

Panels are an accepted feature of fashionable costumes. The orthodox panels for the front is 20 inches wide at the bottom and 10 inches at the top. Those for the sides are 14 inches wide at the bottom and 7 or 8 at the top. The straight edge of the fabric goes next to the front breadth of the skirt. Some handsome materials in the hands of amateurs have been spoiled because the skirts were put together with the panels wrong edge front. Very great care should be taken in cutting and arranging them.

VAILLANT IS GUILLOTINED

THE FRENCH ANARCHIST SUFFERS THE DEATH PENALTY.

President Carnot Refuses to Interfere and the Man Who Threw the Bomb in the Chamber of Deputies Meets Death on the Guillotine.

Paris, Feb. 5.—August Vaillant, the anarchist who was convicted and sentenced to death for throwing a dynamite bomb in the chamber of deputies was executed to-day. There is no doubt that President Carnot, who has been anxious to act in strict accordance with the constitution, was considerably perplexed as to what course he should take in Vaillant's case. All the memorials and petitions sent to him by sympathizers of Vaillant have been referred by him to the pardon committee at the ministry of justice. The fate of Vaillant nominally rests with the president, but in such cases he is guided by his advisory minister of justice. Despite all the efforts of the revolutionary, socialist and anarchist newspapers to compel Carnot to assume the responsibility, he has refused to do so. Among the most affecting petitions received at the Place de L'Elysee was one which, it is claimed, was written by Sidonie, the daughter of Vaillant, to Madame Carnot, beseeching the latter to interfere on behalf of the anarchist. Many persons doubt the ability of the child to write such a letter, in which expressions are made use of that are hardly childlike.

All Paris was intensely excited over the execution and a tremendous crowd was in the streets near where the execution took place. The police continue to make arrests of anarchists, and the searches at the houses of suspected persons are unremittingly kept up, but notwithstanding the vigilance of the police bombs and infernal machines continue to be found in the streets and in houses, where they are placed by anarchists who, in nearly every instance, escape detection. The police precautions to-day were on an extraordinary scale.

A Midnight Shot.

Wilder, Minn., Feb. 5.—Friday night about 12 o'clock John Richter, living about three miles southeast of the village, shot and killed Silas Hulit of Mountain Lake. From what can be learned Hulit, in company with a local tough, was going through the country robbing chicken roosts. As Richter tells the story, they came past his house, breaking down six clothes lines, about 10 o'clock. About 12 o'clock they returned and tried to enter his barn. He raised the window. The noise frightened them and they started to run. They reached their sleigh and started to drive off, when, to scare them, as he says, he fired a load of buckshot. The charge entered Hulit's head above and back of the ear, coming out at the forehead. The horses ran a short distance, when they broke loose from the sleigh. One of the horses was struck by the ball that passed through the man's head, and after running for about forty rods the animal dropped and died. The man who was with Hulit left him in the sleigh and struck off south across the country. Up to the present time he has not been heard from.

Kennedy Sentenced.

St. Paul, Feb. 5.—At last the now notorious case of Burglar Joe Kennedy has been straightened out to the satisfaction of all concerned, and before another sun has set Kennedy will enter upon his term of one year and six months at Stillwater. During a lull in the criminal court Counselor George Walsh appeared before Judge Willis and requested that Kennedy be brought before the court for sentence on his formal plea of burglary in the third degree. He said that if the case was continued over as suggested or ordered by the court it would react to his client's disadvantage, and he asked the court to order the sheriff to produce Kennedy in court. This was done, and Kennedy was sentenced to one year and six months.

Patent Frauds.

Keokuk, Iowa, Feb. 5.—After being out three hours, the jury in the case of W. A. Bell, on trial in the federal court, brought in a verdict of guilty on all three counts this afternoon. Bell conducted a fraudulent patent attorney and brokerage business at Sigourney, Iowa. The government regarded the case of importance equal to the bond investment case recently tried in Chicago, as it is to establish a precedent for dealing with many similar fraudulent businesses throughout the country.

Koetting's Case.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 5.—The supreme court this morning granted a writ of error in the case of Banker Koetting of Milwaukee, who was sentenced to five years in the state prison for receiving deposits in his bank when he knew it to be insolvent. The court also granted a stay of proceedings until the case could be reviewed. The prisoner is to remain in the custody of the sheriff of Milwaukee county unless he furnishes bail in the amount of $15,000.

New Trial Denied.

Janesville, Wis., Feb. 5.—The application for a new trial in the Ashton murder case was overruled by Judge J. R. Bennett. The defendant, Matthew R. Ashton, a well-to-do farmer, was convicted of the murder of his aunt, Mrs. Daniel Stone, who stood between him and an estate of $200,000. The case will go to the supreme court.

Alleged Bigamist Held.

Baraboo, Wis., Feb. 5.—The examination of Clinton H. Vandebogart, the alleged bigamist, was completed last night. He is held to appear at the March term of the circuit court under $500 bonds.

Died in Florida.

Owatonna, Minn., Feb. 5.—J. E. Baxton is dead in Florida.

Hawarden, Iowa, Feb. 5.—John J. Tibbels, a pioneer settler, is dead, aged sixty-two.

A Death on the Train.

Gladstone, Mich., Feb. 5.—A young lady named Charlotte Grant, aged twenty-two, while en route from Montana to Evermore, Ont., via the Soo line, died on the train of consumption. The remains were prepared for shipment here. She was accompanied by her sister, Bella Grant.

Note This.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 5.—Prof. James and Miss Hyslop will start a conservatory of music here.

A single young man by name of Arthur Bowden was found frozen to death Jan. 27th, in the town of Tamarac. He had divested himself of all his clothing and gone to sleep in the wood pile—a rather cold bed at this season of the year. A few years ago the unfortunate fellow was sent to the insane asylum, but had been released. His brother, Will Bowden, was station agent at Angus a couple of years ago. —Warren Sheaf.

The government must borrow money because its revenues have fallen off; they fell off because trade and industry is stagnant; that condition is due to a panic created for the purpose of accomplishing the complete abandonment of silver as a money metal and that abandonment was desired that the value of gold might be increased, to the great profit of the few who own or control most of the gold of the country. Behold how beautifully the old thing works,—Farm Stock and Home.

Rev. Irl Hicks makes the following weather predictions for February. "Let it be remembered that the entire month of February is under the influence of a Mars perturbation and that our terrestrial equinox will be felt for the last half of the month. These facts necessarily call for much stormy disagreeable weather outside of the normal limits of the regular storm periods. On the 4th the equinox of Mercury will be at its center—the reactionary storms will be central on the 2nd and 3rd, and the moon will be new on the 5th. This combination of causes may well be expected to cause a continuation of cloudiness, with rain, sleet and snow from the 7th to the 11th. A cold wave will sweep behind the storms of this period, insuring cold weather until the reactionary storms, centrally due on the 13th and 14th, Blizzards will result, in the north at both periods and that cold weather will reach very far south. The 19th is the central day of the next regular storm period the first half of which will be passed before the actual storms will be organized and well on their eastward march. At the 19th to the 21st inclusive, the disturbances will reach their crises in all eastern sections. Meantime it will turn very cold in the northwest. The last disturbance for the month will be central on the 24th and 25th and spells of severe and stormy weather may be expected, February will end in cold weather. March promises to be an unusual hard month."

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three hundred and thirty-eight dollars, which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Herman Lindner, an unmarried man, mortgagor, to Security Trust Company, mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of August 1892, and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 30th day August 1892, at 10 o'clock a. m. in Book 50 of mortgages on page 125 and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Two Souls and So Forth.

They were wandering about the dark, deserted piazza, arm in arm, talking softly, as people usually do under such circumstances.

They had only known each other two days, but the days were long at a summer hotel, and time is short.

This may seem like a paradox, but it isn't.

He was not a summer young man, as she was a summer girl, and he was not accustomed to crowding the mourners, so that, notwithstanding he had been very devoted, he had been somewhat diffident in the material expression of his devotion.

The girl was quick to note this, but he had not caught on.

He was still permitting "I would" to wait on "I dare not."

So it was they strolled up and down, up and down, on that piazza until the girl was tired.

As they turned at a faraway corner, she saw a lonely chair waiting invitingly.

"Mr. Charlie," she said coyly, "there's a chair. Let's sit down."

"Permit me," he responded, gallantly drawing it forward. "Take this. I'll get another"—

But the girl didn't take it. She stood there laughing a cute, little, gurgling, appealing laugh, and somehow Mr. Charlie tumbled to the fact that one chair was plenty for two if a man only went about it right.—Detroit Free Press.

Those Lovers.

They had been engaged, but now were suffering from one of those quarrels which sometimes ruffle the course of true love.

They had not spoken for three days, and neither wished to be the first to yield.

But with the hankering which afflicts murderers and lovers with reference to the scene of the late unpleasantness he called at the house on a trumped up business mission to her father.

He—Does Mr. Dudley reside here?
She—He does.
He—Is he in?
She—He is not.
He—Will he be in soon?
She—He will.
He—Thank you. I will call again. (Turns to go.)
She—Excuse me, who shall I say called?

$3,000.00 A YEAR FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS,

If you want work that is pleasant and profitable, send us your address immediately. We teach men and women how to earn from $5.00 per day to $3,000 per year without having had previous experience, and furnish the employment at which they can make that amount. Nothing difficult to learn or that requires much time. The work is easy, healthy, and honorable, and can be done during daytime or evenings, right in your own local ity, wherever you live. The result of a few hours' work often equals a week's wages. We have taught thousands of both sexes and all ages, and many have laid foundations that will surely bring them riches. Some of the smartest men in this country owe their success in life to the start given them while in our employ years ago. You, reader, may do as well; try it. You cannot fail. No capital necessary. We fit you out with something that is new, solid, and sure. A book brimful of advice is free to all. Help your self by writing for it to-day—not to-morrow. Delays are costly.

FRIDAY JANUARY 1 189

HE HAD BEEN.

He Was a Man of Experience and Knew Whereof He Spoke.

I had heard numerous st ries of the difficulties attending church services in the mountains along the upper waters of the Cumberland river, and of how when those who came to pray remained to shoot, and also of various killings that had occurred when mountaineers of diverse and adverse personal opinions congregated at the rude meeting houses, but placed little credence in them. I was ruminating upon this subject one Sunday morning as I rode along, hoping that I might happen upon one of those log tabernacles in my way, when I approached a cabin. A man was sitting in the yard with his head tied up and his arm in a sling.

"Good day," I said. "Are there any churches in this vicinity?"

"Meetin houses round here, you mean?" he responded quite affably, though quizzically.

"The same," I nodded.

"Thar's one about four mile down the branch."

"Any preaching there today?"

"No; but thar wuz last Sunday. Won't be no more now fer a month."

"You don't have it very often," I ventured.

"It's a good thing we don't," he said savagely.

"Why? Don't you go to church?"

"I wuz last Sunday."

"That the only time?"

"I wuz about six year afore that."

"Great goodness, man!" I exclaimed. "You ought to do better than that. Don't you know you have an immortal soul to save!"

"Got a hide, too, I reckon," he replied rather vaguely to my comprehension.

"What does that have to do with it?"

He smiled almost pityingly.

"Reckon you hain't never been to meetin in these parts, have you?" he asked.

"Never," I said.

"Never seen the time when two or three wuz getherd together an thar to bless, have you!"

"Never."

"Never seen the Ten Commandments blowed full of bullet holes, have you?"

"Never."

"Never seen the sermon on the mount peppered with a gunful of buckshot an slugs, have you?"

"Never."

"Never seen the gospel of peace on earth, good will to men, tore open from Dan to Beersheby with a winchester, have you!"

"Never." And by this time I was almost in a state of collapse.

He rose to his feet excitedly and began limping around the yard.

"Well," he said, "you ain't the one to talk to me about goin to meetin. I've been."

The accent on that last word was too convincing, and I didn't stop a minute longer to inculcate any great moral truths. I simply said goodby and went my way.—New York Sun.

Morals and the Modes.

'Twas at the meeting of the ways
The maiden pensive stood,
Puzzled to know which road would lead
Most safely through the wood.

A straight and narrow pathway led Directly to her goal,
Most trying for her gown and hat
And wearing for her sole.

A broader road led deviously,
But smoothly thitherward,
And which to take this maiden fair
Had found exceeding hard.

At last she started, with a fixed
Decision in her eye.
"I'll take the crooked road," she said,
"And I will tell you why:

"I do not like to struggle with
The underbrush and leaves
Besides, the other is by far
Too narrow for my sleeves."

Her New Vaccination Mark.

She was a pretty girl and his fate, and he was telling her so. She listened angelically, and by watching her left eyelid he knew he was successful.

The left eyelid is always a true indicator of a girl's feelings.

Finally he ventured to slip his arm about her, and it was all right for a minute, when she sprung to her feet with anguish on her face.

"How can you!" she sobbed. "Brute!"

"My own," he protested.

"Go!" she wept. "I can never love you! You have no heart, no tenderness! You are inhuman!"

"What have I done?" cried the miserable young man, and then she lifted her streaming eyes.

"You have no regard for my vaccination at all," she said. "Oh, how it hurts!" So he was obliged to finish his proposal minus the encircling arm act. He isn't the only man in a like plight just now.—Boston Traveller.

A Little Thing Like That.

"I saw a funny thing down in West Virginia not long ago," said the drummer, flicking the ashes from his cigar on his boot heel. "A bride and groom were on a Cincinnati and Ohio train from Lexington, Ky., got off for a platform promenade while the train was being made up at Huntington, and after a few minutes he put her back on the car and went to the restaurant for some fruit. As he came into the car he stopped for a few minutes to speak to a friend in the smoker, and when he came on in to where he supposed his new wife was he couldn't find her. He looked everywhere without success; then he began to go crazy.

"Where's my wife? Where's my wife!" he shouted as he tore up and down the car, and the conductor came hurriedly in to see what the matter was. As he was trying to get a coherent answer from him an old fellow said he had seen her get off the car after the young man had put her on at the last station, and he guessed she was left. Then the groom raved and tore his hair and demanded that the train go back after her. To this the conductor objected, and a committee of five married men waited on the groom.

"Yes, yes, and the train must go back for her."

"Hold on a minute, will you?" said the old spokesman testily. "How long have you been married?"

"A week only, and the train must go back after her," he moaned as he rocked himself to and fro.

"Well, I guess not!" said the old fellow emphatically. "When you've been married as long as we have, you won't want to be inconveniencing a trainload of passengers for a little thing like leaving your wife behind," and the groom had to go on to the next station and wait for his bride.—Detroit Free Press.

Learning a Lesson.

In front of a State street dry goods store one day last week a well dressed man patiently stood waiting for his wife, who was only to be gone "two minutes." Outside the store hung various articles useful and otherwise. To a casual observer they looked—most of them—very otherwise. Just then a red faced woman flew up from the basement, and grabbing the patient, tired man by the arm said: "I want that wan up there. The man in the basemint sez ye'd get it fer me, fer there ain't no more down there." And she pointed to a shovel of the small iron variety hanging near the second story window marked "6 cents."

"Madam, I do not climb up to that window excepting every other day. This is the day I do not climb. If you want it very much, you might climb up and get it yourself."

She turned a wrathful pair of red eyes on him and said, "I'll be afther reporting yez fer yer impidence," and she departed into the beloved basement again in a state of great excitement.

As she was leaving another customer, overhearing the woman, thought the stranger an employee of the store and said, "Say, mister, where do you keep your pants!"

"I keep 'em on my suspenders. Where do you keep yours?" he snapped and glowered so on the man that he also departed in haste.

Then the tired, waiting man, no longer patient, turned and stood on the outer edge of the sidewalk at a respectable distance from the crowd. When his wife came out, he said, "Hereafter, madam, when I am imbecile enough to consent to go shopping with you, I'll wait in the next block if you have errands in this store."—Chicago Tribune.

Confiding.

Down in Virginia a robbery had been committed. The finger of suspicion pointed to a negro servant, and he was arraigned before the local justice, who happened to be the negro's old master, to whom he was still intensely loyal.

He made no defense or denial as the judge laid the evidence point by point against him, and sentence was about to be pronounced when suddenly the real culprit was discovered.

"Why didn't you say you didn't do it, George?" asked the justice.

"Why," said the faithful old servant, "you's a hones' man, judge, an if you say I is the man, den I is the man, but you see I ain't the man."—Youth's Companion.

Nothing to Fight For.

By the way of illustrating how "the women of the South helped along the war," an officer describes in the Grand Rapids Eagle a scene of which he was an amused eye witness. A gang of "Sherman's bummers," he says, had captured a plantation on which were many hens and chickens.

They wrung the necks of the chickens and then proceeded to gather the eggs, all the while laughing at the angry lady of the house. Just then some Confederate cavalrymen came down on a charge. The Union boys retreated a short distance, and made hurried preparations for a fight.

The woman ran up to the Confederate officer in command, and declared that she wished to help whip the Yankees.

"Very good," said he. "Get up on the fence and holler at them."

The woman, dead in earnest, mounted the fence, shook her fist, and shouted:

"Oh, you miserable Yankees! You have every chicken on the place!"

"What's that?" demanded the officer. "Taken all the chickens? Then there is nothing left worth fighting for."

With that he rode away, leaving the woman on the top of the fence shaking her fist at the Yankees and calling them names.

KNOWLEDGE
Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.
Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

NEWSPAPERS SIXTY YEARS AGO

A Contrast Between Then and Now and What May Be in 1944.

One hundred and fifty attended the annual meeting of the Bostonian society in the Old State House yesterday afternoon. There was a large turnout of members.

"It is curious," he said, "in looking over the records of Boston sixty years ago, to note the difference between the newspaper of that date and the great metropolitan journal of to-day. Then there were no telegraph dispatches. There were no market reports; the old prices current once a week were thought sufficient. There was no financial article, and no brokers' board and sale of stocks. There was only one railroad advertisement. There were no court reports. There was not a single leading article in the paper, and scarcely any local matter. There were no interviews and no special correspondence.

"Apropos to the prominence given to interesting events to-day, as compared with then, I may cite the following paragraph from the same issue of the 1834 paper:

"Miss Fanny Kemble was led to the altar on Saturday morning, and changed her name to Mrs. Pierce Butler. The ceremony took place at Christ church, Philadelphia, the service being read by the venerable Bishop White."

"Let us suppose the event to have taken place to-day. We should have had the entire pedigree of the family, from Roger Kemble down, a sketch of the life of the actress, her first appearance, her career, how and when she met her affianced, a description of the wedding, her trousseau, and, perhaps, even one of those truly denominated counterfeit presentments, miscalled portraits, that make the thoughtless laugh and the judicious grieve to contemplate.

"The vast amount of information given by the newspapers of to-day is not only conspicuous by its absence, but vexatious, especially to the historian who seeks for a record. Many remember the merchants of sixty years ago and their business and methods of doing business. From 12:30 to 1:30 was 'Change hour on State street, and from the corner of Congress to the corner of Kilby street the sidewalk was almost impassable by reason of the throng of merchants who were wont to daily assemble there.

"Can it be that the sketcher of 1944 will find as little in the newspaper of to-day to compare with the enterprise of his time as he of to-day does of that sixty years ago?"—Boston Traveller.

TICKET CANCELLING.

Ingenious Devices for Dating and Registering and Their Advantages.

The exigencies of railway passenger traffic have led to the invention of most ingenious machines for the cancellation, dating and registering of tickets. In one machine, designed for turning out tickets rapidly for street railways, ferries, etc., the individual tickets in a large roll of paper of the required width and thickness are divided from one another by a perforation and a pair of notches, which are also used for maintaining the registering during printing. The strip of paper then passes over a series of wheels, which regulate the frictional tension, to the printing cylinder, from whence it is turned out ready for use, says the Pittsburg Dispatch.

In other machines tickets can be numbered consecutively from one to any given number. For instance, there is a special "ticket holder and register," by which a web of tickets can be cut up and dated, each ticket being counted and marked as it is being withdrawn, to prevent fraud. The tape is drawn through feed-rollers, by turning a handle, and passes between a printing cylinder and a bed cylinder. Upon the printing cylinder is a knife which cuts off the tickets as it delivers them through a slot. A counting device is geared to the printing cylinder, and keeps a register of the operation. It is enclosed in a case, which is normally closed by a locked door. By the use of this machine all troublesome counting of the stock of tickets is avoided, while dishonest officials find an exact account kept against them.

Fortunate Reply.

One day at a dinner party Charles G. Leland became much interested in a Frenchman near whom he sat, and who seemed equally inclined to make his acquaintance. After dinner they were turning over a collection of the works of Blake, and Leland said to the Frenchman that Blake was a very strange visionary; that he believed the spirits of the dead appeared to him, and that he drew their portraits.

"He was mad, then," said the stranger.

"No," replied Leland, "he was not a madman. He was almost a genius. Indeed, he was all but a Dore!"

There was a roar of laughter, and Leland, innocently supposing that he had said something clever, laughed, too. When the guests had departed, the host said:

"Well, what do you think of Dore?"

"Dore? Why I never saw Dore in

"That was Dore to whom you were Talking Swedish.

Susy, six years of age, had noticed that the girls of foreign nationalities who served in her mother's kitchen spoke English in a way somewhat different from the English she was accustomed to hear from her father and mother.

One day her mother sent Susy down stairs with an order to the cook not to prepare any soup for dinner. Presently the little girl came back.

"Well," asked her mother, "did you give Mary the order?"

"Yes, mamma, I told her in Swedish."

"Told her in Swedish! Why, child, what did you say?"

"I said to her, 'You needn't make no soup, Mary!'"

WHEAT VERSUS HOGS.

HOW TO ESCAPE THE RESULTS OF THE PAST BAD CROPS.

Necessity of a Diversity in the Farmer's Efforts—How Forty-Seven Cent Wheat Can Be Made to Yield a Return.

The following article on the raising of hogs should be read by every farmer in the Northwest, and especially by farmers in Northern Minnesota and North Dakota. It treats of a subject which affects the permanent prosperity of this section and is from Gen. Mark D. Flower, who has given a great deal of time to investigating the points mentioned. It is terse but comprehensive as its perusal will show:

The rapid decline in the market value of wheat throughout the world until the present ruinous prices have been reached leads to inquiry as to the causes that have produced the result, and whether these causes are of a permanent or temporary nature.

A few years ago it would have been considered presumptuous to predict the present conditions of the wheat markets of the world, and yet, many of our most observing and capable business men are convinced that the low prices have come to stay, with exceptions now and then when the crops of other countries fail from natural causes. The price of wheat, like other commodities, is regulated by the supply and demand, and, while the demand has not and is not likely to decrease, it is equally certain that the supply is rapidly increasing with the advent of new competitors who possess many advantages over the American farmer. The United States with its vast empire of productive soil can easily supply the bread for the balance of the world; but can it do so with profit? If we cannot export wheat and leave a margin of profit for the producer, the sooner we learn the fact and change our methods of agriculture, the better for all.

Let us briefly note who our chief competitors are. India, Russia, Australia, and some of the South American countries, with their recent advancement in modern methods of agriculture, and with their lately improved facilities for transporting their surplus grain, must, from now on, be considered important factors in the world's markets, and he who does not heed this fact and shape his efforts in husbandry accordingly will soon regret his lack of discernment. In all the countries named the price of labor is not more than 50 per cent of the American price, while in India a day's labor costs but a few cents. India alone, with its vast areas of wheat fields and its recently improved transportation facilities, can pour its almost unlimited surplus into the markets of Europe at prices that defy American competition. With these conditions confronting us, is it not time to call a halt in exclusive wheat raising? Have we not other and better resources? Have we not other and more promising farm products, natural alike to soil and climate, to which we can turn with profit in this hour of wheat bankruptcy? With wheat at 47 cents at the home station the price is below the cost of production, and poverty of soil and poverty of purse are the logical consequence. Like a ship at sea without a rudder, the more sail we carry, the farther out of our course we go. The farmers of all of the Northwestern states, including Southern Minnesota, have all passed through the "wheat period" under very much more favorable conditions than now exist, but with the same financial results—poverty, mortgages, exhausted soil and bankruptcy. If our farmers will not be guided by the experience of their brothers, there still remains the advantage of reaching the same ends by the same old route, but if they will change there will be a saving of time and of money.

Experience in Other States.

In Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Southern Minnesota, when the farmers from sheer exhaustion were driven to abandon exclusive wheat production, their prosperity began. The farmer must not abandon wheat raising entirely, but he must exercise a trifle of the good sense he is usually supposed to possess, and diversify according to the peculiar circumstances of his case, raising 50, 60 or perhaps 70 per cent of his former acreage, while turning his attention to other lines—live stock, dairy products and other things, according to circumstances. There is an irrevocable economic law that he must not violate with impunity and expect nature to reward him; he must not continuously, year by year, raise wheat upon the same soil, without rest or recuperation, and expect good results. That immediate diversity in farming is urgent is conceded, and this naturally raises the inquiry, what can the farmer in the wheat belt substitute for wheat? Without going into the consideration of the long list of products that may profitably be substituted, we simply name the hog. There is no product of the farm that universally commands a better price. The hog is a staple article that always commands the market price in cash. The farmer who is provided with good, warm pens and reasonable facilities can produce two crops of hogs each year. With fat merchantable hogs he can turn them into cash any month in the year. The hog will consume the waste product of the farm and return money for it; in a word, the hog is the farmer's friend, and he only requires reasonable care to trebly recompense him for every outlay of time or money. The usual American opinion is that hogs cannot be successfully produced outside of the "corn belt." We say American opinion because hogs have been raised in Europe and Canada and other countries without corn for more than a hundred years, being successfully fed and fattened on barley, rye and peas. Within the past two years many successful experiments have been had in Northern Minnesota and North Dakota with wheat feeding, the hogs so fed commanding the top of the market at South St. Paul and yielding a fraction over 80 per cent of choice meat, which is from 5 to 6 per cent greater than results from corn feeding. Apparently cholera and other fatal hog diseases that infest the corn-fed hog never attack the hog fed upon wheat, barley or peas.

Hogs raised in Scotland and fed upon barley command a premium in the English market. It is time the belief that hogs cannot be successfully produced on other than corn is fully exploded. The farmers of the wheat belt have the advantage of climate and food with which to make hogs that will as surely command a premium over the corn hog as No. 1 hard is at a premium over the spring wheat of Kansas and Nebraska.

How to Raise Hogs.

There are a few common-sense things that must be observed to make hog raising profitable. First of all secure a well bred hog for breeding. There is as much or more difference in the quality of hogs as there is in horses. A common, long-nosed, long-legged, slab-sided hog is of no account. You cannot fatten such a hog. Besides he is a famine breeder—he eats everything placed before him and squeals for more. Shun this kind of an animal. There is no money in him for anybody. For our climate, the Poland China is doubtless preferable to any other, as it grows rapidly, is compact and makes flesh on small rations, besides being a fairly good breeder. With fair care it is ready for the market in from eight to eleven months, weighing from 200 to 300 pounds and commanding always the highest price. The hog is sensitive to extreme heat or cold. Therefore, reasonable provision should be made for shade in dog days and warm pens in winter. The hog is not elegant in any of his tastes, but he will repay in hard cash for every outlay for his comfort and ease.

Brood Sow and Litter.

Above all things, during pregnancy don't kill your brood sow with kindness. What she wants is a warm, dry pen, with a yard adjoining sufficiently large for reasonable exercise. Don't overfeed the brood sow. Remember this, as it is all important. A brood sow must be fed small rations of nourishing food, but must never be permitted to become fat. A fat sow in pregnancy will not raise 20 per cent of her young for numerous reasons not necessary to detail.

If the young pigs come in the early spring or fall it is absolutely necessary that the pen shall be warm and dry, with plenty of good bedding. By a reasonable observance of the above simple rules the farmer will be amply repaid for his trouble and expense in the good results that will certainly follow.

Feeding.

In northern climates above the corn belt, where corn is not at hand for food, a reasonable intelligence must be observed in preparing the feed. In feeding wheat, wheat screenings, barley, rye or other small grain it is necessary to either grind the grain or soak it in water until it is sufficiently softened to render mastication easy and certain. During the growing period (spring, summer or fall) the hog may, with profit, be permitted to roam at will in the pasture where he will thrive splendidly on clover or alfalfa. If the pasture has never been sown to tame grasses a small ration of grain or the skim milk or other waste food of the farm will keep the young stock hogs in fine growing condition until the fattening time.

Cool fall weather is the time to push the growth and fattening of hogs at low cost. Hogs may be readily fattened without corn. Wheat will fatten hogs very rapidly, but to lessen the waste it is best to soak it at least twelve hours before feeding, thus making it much easier to masticate and to digest. If barley is used as food, the same rule of soaking applies. A mixture of soaked or ground wheat and barley is exceedingly good food. Immature corn also makes good food, though inferior to either wheat or barley. Wheat contains a larger percentage of protein, or flesh forming food than either corn, oats or barley. Prof. Robertson, of the Ontario government station, reports that from nine to fifteen pounds of increase in the live weight of swine are obtained per bushel of frozen wheat; this being the result of actual experiments. Under favorable conditions in quality and age of the swine, with hogs at 5 cents per pound, the frozen wheat netted 75 cents per bushel.

Have We a Hog Market?

Within the past few years a market for the hogs of Minnesota and both of the Dakotas has sprung up at our very door. We refer to South St. Paul. At this place over $2,000,000 have been expended in the construction of immense packing houses for both hogs and cattle, and the stock yards, also located there.

During the past year more than 300,000 hogs have been bought and packed for all parts of the United States and Europe, and the number was less than one-third of the requirements.

For the year of 1894 1,000,000 hogs will be needed to keep these immense industries busy. The market value of hogs at this place is at all times equal to the Chicago market, with the freight deducted. With all of these advantages of food, climate and market, there is no good reason why the farmers of the wheat belt should plod along in the old rut. The time for emancipation is at hand. Let the farmer avail himself of the opportunity. Diversity in farming is the key of success.

THE INTERSTELLAR ETHER.

Ethereal Waves Which Affect the Eye and the Photographic Plate.

Our eye does not act by detecting heat; in other words, it is not affected by the whole range of ethereal quiverings, but only by a very minute and apparently insignificant portion. It wholly ignores the ether waves whose frequency is comparable with that of sound, and for 30 or 40 octaves above this nothing about us responds; but high up in a range of vibration of the inconceivably high pitch of 4 to 700,000,000 per seconds—a range which few accessible bodies are able to emit, and which it requires some knowledge and skill artificially to produce—to those waves the eye is acutely, surpassingly and most intelligently sensitive.

This little fragment of total radiation is in itself trivial and negligible. Were it not for men and glow-worms and a few other forms of life hardly any of it would ever occur on such a moderate sized lump of matter as the earth. Except for an occasional volcano or a flash of lightning, only gigantic bodies like the sun and stars have energy enough to produce these higher flute-like notes, and they do it by sheer main force and violence—the violence of their gravitative energy—producing not only these, but every other kind of radiation also. Glow-worms, so far as I know, alone have learned the secret of emitting the physiologically useful waves, and none other.

Why these waves are physiologically useful, why they are not what is called "light," while other kinds of radiation are "dark," are questions to be asked, but at present only tentatively answered. The answer must ultimately be given by the physiologist, for the distinction between light and nonlight can only be stated in terms of the eye and its peculiar, specialized sensitiveness, but a hint may be given him by the physicist.

The eternal waves which affect the eye and the photographic plate are of a size not wholly comparable with that of atoms of matter. When a physical phenomenon is concerned with the ultimate atoms of matter, it is relegated at present to the vaguer group of knowledge summarized under the head of chemistry. Sight is probably a chemical sense. In the retina may be complex aggregations of atoms, shaken asunder by the incident light vibrations, and rapidly built up again by the living tissues in which they live, the nerve endings, meanwhile appreciated them in their temporarily dissociated condition—a vague speculation, not to be further countenanced except as a working hypothesis leading to examination of fact, but nevertheless the direction in which the thoughts of some physicists are tending—a direction toward which many recently discovered experimental facts point.—Professor Lodge in Fortnightly Review.

EASY TO SHOOT.

A Fact to Remember When You Meet a Rattler.

The writer saw an Indian kill a rattlesnake in a very peculiar manner recently. The rattler was about ten feet from the Indian, who was resting his rifle on his knee, apparently taking aim. Whenever he moved the weapon a few inches the snake would move around and get exactly in line with it. Then, to show how the thing was done, the Indian moved about the snake in a circle, and the reptile moved as if his tail was a pivot, always keeping his head and body in line with the gun.

The Indian then agreed to bandage his eyes and shoot the snake in the mouth. The writer bandaged the Indian's eyes, and, holding the gun at arm's length, the latter pulled the trigger and the ball entered the snake's mouth.

"How did you take aim?" was the query.

"The snake he take aim," was the reply.

We have talked with an old hunter on this proposition, and he claims that a rattlesnake will always range directly in line with a gun or stick pointed at it.—Carson (Nev.) Appeal.

Little Hamstede.

A kindly, honest and simple little man was Frederick William Hamstede, originally a city clerk of London, and a versifier who concocted worthless doggerel, for love and not reward, at a rate which would surprise most poetasters. Yet his claim to remembrance lies now in the fact that Thackeray called him "dear little Hamstede," and loved and protected him from banter with a strange and touching chivalry.

If any one laughed at the great novelist's attachment to so insignificant a protege, Thackeray would exclaim:

"No one shall say a word against little Hamstede in my hearing! I love little Hamstede. I tell you I love little Hamstede, and as for his verses over which you have been making merry, all that I care to say is that I take more pleasure in reading his poetry than I do in reading your prose!"

The secret of this large-hearted protection was not far to seek. Hamstede was a dwarf and a hunchback; he had been crippled by falling from a nurse's arms in infancy, and could not get about without a cane. Thackeray, the giant, loved him for the sufferings he had undergone.

Strikers Have Rifles.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 3.—For some time the miners in the Montgomery mines have been on a strike and have been trying to induce the men employed by the Stevens Coal Company at Acme to quit work, but without avail. Thursday Sheriff Sitman of this city received a telegram from the Stevens Coal company stating that the Montgomery miners were preparing to march to Acme to drive out the working miners, and asking for the protection of life and property. A deputy was sent and to-day another telegram was received stating that 150 men from Montgomery had started up the creek on foot for Acme, and asking help. The sheriff, accompanied by seven deputies, has started for Acme, which is about thirty miles up the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad. The miners are about ten miles from the railroad, and it is impossible to ascertain the present aspect of affairs there. It is known, however, that the Montgomery miners have been endeavoring to force the men at Acme to quit work. The men decided to continue work, whereupon the strikers determined to use force, and 150 of them left Montgomery for Acme armed with Winchesters with the avowed intention of forcing them out.

Later—Information from Acme just received states that the miners there are resisting the strikers. They are about 300 in number and all are armed. Both sides are determined and serious trouble is certain.

His Scheme Failed.

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—A clever scheme of robbery was revealed when Victor Hamilton Echorn, of the Pennsylvania Salt Works company, was arrested for endeavoring to steal $15,000 of the company's money from the runner of the South Mark bank. It was finally matured and was carried out in every proposed detail, with the exception of getting $15,000. Echorn got a bag full of bricks and paper and was caught red-handed. Echorn's plan was to have the runner from the South Mark bank, bringing the $15,000 to meet the bi-weekly pay roll, waylaid and robbed. He needed an assistant or two, and on Jan. 4 he inserted an advertisement in a morning paper "for men of nerve." George C. Thomas of New York, who was in this city seeking employment, answered the advertisement, as did also Frank J. Mullen. Both these men, independently, informed the police. They were directed to acquiesce in the scheme in order to punish the would-be thief. When the robbery was attempted officers were on hand and arrested Echorn.

Condition of Trade.

New York, Feb. 3.—Bradstreets says: The success of the government bond issue is regarded with qualified satisfaction, but the effect on either speculation or investment is mealy sentimental. Interviews with bankers at New York, Troy, Syracuse, Paterson, Cleveland, Chicago and Nashville show that the volume of mercantile paper offered has increased, though not to a large extent. Providence and Boston banks are buying paper from other cities. At such centers as Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee and Newark there is no increase in the volume of commercial paper offered. In industrial lines the number of establishments reopening is more than ten to one of the number reported shutting down. In fact, there is reason to believe that hundreds of industrial establishments have begun work within a week or two, although not on full time in all cases, of which no specific mention has been made in print.

Conrad Dirks' Suicide.

New Ulm, Minn., Feb. 3.—Conrad Dirks, Sr., an aged and wealthy farmer, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself. He resided only a short distance from New Ulm, and owned the finest farm in this section of the country. His total property is valued at $20,000. About two years ago he sustained a stroke of apoplexy and for over a year he was afflicted with melancholy. He was deeply interested in his financial affairs, and it is thought that the destruction of his son's store in Springfield by fire had a great deal to do with his own taking off. In the morning he was apparently well, and went out to chop wood. At 9 o'clock his folks made a search for him and found his body hanging to an iron rod of his wind mill. He was sixty-three years of age the day before his death.

Rebels as Belligerents.

London, Feb. 3.—The Times has received the following advices from Rio de Janeiro of Tuesday's date by way of Montevideo, which it will publish tomorrow: The foreign diplomats have held a conference to discuss the question of the rights of the insurgents to be recognized as belligerents. No actual decision was reached, but the feeling was distinctly favorable to such recognition, except on the part of the American representatives. A majority of the ministers have sent dispatches to their representative governments informing them of the deliberations of the foreign representatives and advising them to recognize the insurgents as belligerents.

Fakirs Arrested.

Marietta, Ohio, Feb. 3. — Barbick & Richards, traveling specialists, advertised medical services and surgical treatment free. Consultation was free, but medicines came high, and they realized over $800. They have been arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses. Two hundred dollars was recovered. They hustled for their bill and finally after paying attorneys and refunding they were permitted to go. They showed no diplomas. Inquiry at Cincinnati brought the information that they were not registered there as claimed. They are billed for other towns.

Latest From Hawaii.

Auckland, N. Z., Feb. 3.—The steamship Mariposa has arrived here from Hawaii, bringing news up to Jan. 20. When she left Hawaii people were restlessly awaiting the decision of the United States congress. The reported landing of United States marines and sailors has no foundation in truth, and it may be said that there is no change in the situation, pending the arrival of further advices from the United States government. The newspapers which support the provisional government deny the right of the United States to restore the queen.

Back in His Old Sit.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Special—Sam J. Smead, formerly postmaster under Cleveland, took possession of the Fond du Lac postoffice yesterday, relieving James T. Green, Republican, removed. No reason for the removal of Green has been given. His term of office would have expired on April 20.

Bloody Border Battle.

Belgrade, Special—A dispatch from Cettinje says that a border fight has occurred between the Montenegrins and Albanians. It is added that two of the latter were killed and one wounded.

Sorrows of the Manitoba Farmers.

A few farmers from the Dakotas and other American states, during the last two or three years, took a notion that they could better their condition by moving into the queen's territory. The Bottineau (N. D.) Pioneer prints a letter from John Brander, one of the unfortunates, who writes from Nesbitt, Manitoba, explaining why he cannot pay his subscription. We make the following interesting extracts, which justifies the good sense of those who did not abandon the union for the uncertainties of the Canadian Northwest:

"The Manitoba farmer has a great many grievances to contend with which seem to keep his nose to the ground. I will mention a few:

"First the long distance to a wheat market and the excessively high freight rates for hauling after paying a large share of building the road.

"Second—The unreasonably high custom tariffs on agricultural implements and binders twine that is charged upon these articles coming into this purely agricultural country and then the proceeds lavishly squandered on 'immigration.' (The increase in population for the last ten years has not been equal to the natural increase.)

"Third—Short summer seasons and early frosts in the fall in wet seasons, and dry weather.

"Our markets at present are about as follows: Wheat—No. 1 hard, 41 cents per bushel; No. 2 hard (No. 1 Northern,) 29 cents; oats 35 cents; barley, 40 cents; potatoes, 30 cents; hay $6 per ton; butter, 20 cents per pound; eggs, 20 cents per dozen; pork, $5 per cwt; beef, $3 (no sale); man's wages board; girl's, $10 per month.

"This country is now full of horses and grumbling farmers, and both are at a discount."

His Idea of Genius.

Freddie Van Twiggen had been silent for such a long time that everybody concluded that he must be thinking again. Quite unexpectedly he said:

"A genius is weally a vewy extraordinawy pawson."

"Yes," replied one of Freddie's friends; "there is no doubt of that. By the way, what is your idea of a genius?"

"A genius," said Freddie after some consideration, "is a fellow who makes you wondah how such a smaht man can be such an utter chump."

"August Flower"
"For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said my stomach was worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food. On the recommendation of a friend I procured a bottle of August Flower. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained strength and flesh rapidly. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has cured me."

THE WORK OF CONGRESS

RESUME OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The federal elections repeal bill occupied the entire session of the senate. Senator Chandler concluded his speech, which has extended through the past two or three weeks, and was followed by Senator Palmer, who argued the law, having entirely failed of its purpose, and being generally obnoxious, should be repealed. An animated controversy of the franchise qualifications of the state constitutions of Mississippi and Massachusetts took place between Senators Frye and Hoar on one side and Senators Gray and Bate on the other. The final vote is to be taken on the bill this afternoon.

The Hawaiian debate again occupied the attention of the house. The debate is attracting much less attention than was anticipated. This is perhaps partly due to the abandonment of the policy of restoration of the administration and partly to the fact that the long tariff debate has surfeited the house. The vote will be taken late this afternoon.

Congressman McCann introduced a resolution directing the judiciary committee to investigate Judge Jenkins' decision by which employes of the Northern Pacific were interdicted from striking. It recites that all employes have a right to quit work at any time, and that the act of congress of 1886 made labor unions lawful. It then recites the story of the Northern Pacific reduction. The preamble denies that a strike was threatened, and the resolution directs a speedy investigation of the whole case.

Only four members were present last night when Mr. Hall (Dem. Minn.) began to speak in support of the administration. A half-dozen others came in subsequently and there was considerable attendance in the galleries. Mr. Hall charged that the revolution was the result of a conspiracy made possible by the covert aid of Mr. Stevens and the presence of the United States troops. He endorsed the policy of the administration in its attempt to right the rong done the queen through the connivance of the United States Minister. As the facts grow clearer, said he, public sentiment will place in every honest hand a whip with which to scourge J. L. Stevens through the land.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The Hawaiian resolution was not passed yesterday afternoon because of the failure of the Democrats to secure a quorum when a vote was taken upon it. Much less opposition from the Democratic side developed than was at one time anticipated. Only one speech, that of Gen. Sickles of New York, was made in opposition to the adoption of the resolution, although there was some passive opposition on the Democratic side as indicated by the refusal of several Democrats to answer to their names when the resolution was placed upon its passage. The Hitt substitute, the Blair amendment and the motion made by Mr. Reed to recommit the resolution were in turn voted down. When the vote came to be taken upon the main question, however, the adoption of the entire resolution, the Republicans refrained from voting and the Democrats lacked 17 of a quorum. Mr. Cummings of New York voted for Mr. Reed's motion to recommit the motion and Mr. Sickles against the McCreary resolution. Mr. Cummings of New York, Mr. Geary of California and Mr. Cockrell of Texas refused to go on record either for or against the adoption of the resolution. These were all the indications shown of a break in party lines in the Hawaiian matter. The Populists voted generally with the Republicans. Mr. Broderick, of Kansas was the only Republican who declined to follow the leader of his party and refrain from voting. He voted against the resolution. When the Democrats found themselves without a quorum they passed a resolution revoking the leaves of absence and then adjourned. They expect to have a quorum present this afternoon.

The senate did not come to a vote on the federal election bill yesterday afternoon as was anticipated. Several senators who had not hitherto spoken desired an opportunity to be heard on the measure, and by unanimous consent the time of general debate was extended until this afternoon.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The bill repealing in toto all federal election laws regulating the control of congressional elections has passed both houses of congress and only awaits the signature of President Cleveland to become a law. After several weeks of discussion the senate finally came to a vote on the house bill repealing the federal election laws, and it passed by a vote of 39 to 28. Numerous amendments were presented by the Republicans, but they were voted down regularly and methodically, the Democrats not even taking the trouble to join in the debate on the amendatory propositions. Senator Stewart of Nevada voted with the Democrats on every proposition, giving as his reason that he thought the power of the executive was already too great, and that the centralizing tendency of the age should be checked at once if the republic is to survive. The three Populists, Senators Allen, Kyle and Peffer, also voted with the Democrats on every amendment, as well as on the main bill. The measure as it passed the senate is identical with the bill as it passed the house, no committee amendments having been proposed.

By a vote of 175 to 57 the house adopted the resolution condemning Minister Stevens and sustaining the Hawaiian policy of Mr. Cleveland. The Republicans filibustered against it to the end. Upon the first vote the resolution was carried—174 to 3, and an interesting parliamentary question was raised as to whether 177, instead of 179, was not a quorum, four seats being vacant on account of deaths. The speaker held that a majority of the members of the house then living constituted a quorum, quoting in support of his position a review of the subject made by the ex-speaker in the Fifty-first congress. His position, however, was warmly assailed by some of the Democratic members and it was finally agreed to take the vote over again so the ruling was eventually withdrawn. After the vote upon these resolutions had been completed Mr. Bland of Missouri made an attempt to get up his bill for the coinage of the silver seigniorage in the treasury. The Eastern Democrats, led by Messrs. Tracey and Cochran, inaugurated a filibuster in which they were joined by the majority of the Republicans, although a few of the latter indicated by their votes that they favored a consideration of the bill, and for four hours Mr. Bland and the remainder of the Democrats were held at bay. Finding that it was impossible to secure a quorum to proceed with the consideration of the bill, and the house might be deadlocked indefinitely upon the proposition, Mr. Bland directed his efforts toward securing the adoption of a resolution to revoke all leaves of absence and to instruct the sergeant-at-arms to arrest absentees. After a persistent struggle Mr. Bland was successful, and the resolution was passed.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The deadlock on Mr. Bland's silver seigniorage bill was broken after four hours of continous filibustering, when, by a vote of 176 to 4, the house carried Mr. Bland's motion of going into committee of the whole for consideration of his bill. The Eastern Democrats and the great mass of the Republicans made a determined opposition, but Mr. Bland was at last victorious. On the final vote, 16 Republicans and all the Populists voted with him, while 22 Democrats who were present joined with the remainder of the Republicans in refusing to vote. It was thoroughly understood that quite a number of Democrats who voted with Mr. Bland this afternoon were in favor of certain modifications of the bill, although they would not carry their opposition to the extent of voting against its consideration. It is also well known that Secretary Carlisle and the administration generally is opposed to the bill in its present form. After the consideration of the bill began, Mr. Carlisle arived at the capitol and had a conference with several of the leading Democrats of the house, as well as those Democrats who were managing the filibuster, and just before adjournment, the announcement was officially made on the floor by Mr. Tracey that no further attempt to filibuster against the consideration of the bill would be made. This is taken to mean that a compromise has been agreed upon and that certain concessions will be made, in line with the suggestions of Mr. Carlisle.

The special order was the memorial resolution in memory of Representative Mutchler of Pennsylvania, who died at the beginning of the present congress. Addresses were delivered by Senators Quay of Pennsylvania, Mitchell of Wisconsin, and Hansbrough of North Dakota, and several others. The senate adjourned until Monday.

Washington, Feb. 10.—The entire day in the house was consumed in debate on the Bland silver seignorage bill, the speakers being Messrs. Bland, C. W. Stone (Pa), McKeighan, Harter and Kilgore. It is expected a vote on the bill will be reached by Tuesday at the farthest, and Mr. Bland is confident that it will pass. This opinion is generally shared by the leaders on both sides, although there probably will be some modifications of the bill that will make it more acceptable to the Democrats who are now opposing it. Mr. Harter created some amusement by his reference to the manner in which the Democratic party was delineated in the comic papers as a jackass. He thought it was perfectly fair, perhaps, for Republican papers to portray the Democracy as a jackass, but he did not see why a proposition like the Bland bill was brought into the house. Democrats should flap their ears and bray to show that they were jackasses. Mr. Kilgore of Texas contended that if the government was in need of money it was better to coin the silver seignorage than borrow money and pay interest upon the loan.

Angry at Altgeld.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 10.—The sheriff and state's attorney of this county have just returned from Springfield, Ill., where they went to secure requisition papers from Gov. Altgeld for one W. A. Gray of Chicago, who is wanted on the charge of conspiracy in defrauding Hughes county out of several thousand dollars in sinking artesian wells. Altgeld absolutely refused to grant the requisition. The people of Pierre are indignant at the escape of Gray from punishment, and arrangements are being made to burn Altgeld in effigy for his action in the matter. Evidence against Gray was strong. His employes here have already been convicted for complicity in the fraud, but he was really the party, and our people wanted to see him punished.

Boomers for Yankton Reserve.

Mitchell, S. D., Feb. 10.—It is expected in this city that the recommendation of the secretary of the interior will be observed by congress and that the bill authorizing the opening of the Yankton Indian reservation lands to settlement will pass both branches of congress at an early date and that the opening will take place this spring. There will be about 1,200 entries made upon the land subject to settlement and entry and the inquiries already being received by the real estate men and the government land office in this city, where all filings will be made, shows that there will be many more than this number of people after free homes upon this reservation. The reservation land is of the richest and hence the demand for the same will be enormous.

Sold Red Eye to Redskins.

Hot Springs, S. D., Feb. 10.—This morning United States Marshal Bray arrived here with a man named McClellan in his custody. McClellan was accused of introducing liquor into the Aborigines of Rosebud agency, and a large demijohn of above proof whisky was introduced as evidence in the trial, which occurred before Commissioner Anderson. Maj. J. G. Wright, the Indian agent, was in attendance with Stands-for-Them and Scott, two Indians as witnesses. McClellan was bound over in the sum of $300 to appear before the United States court at Pierre.

Pedagogue Will Win His Case.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 10.—Attorney General Coe I. Crawford says concerning the revoking of W. M. Cross' teachers' certificate by County Superintendent Hunt, that "a county superintendent has no power to revoke a teacher's certificate without giving the teacher a hearing on specific charges." He has not filed his decision yet.

In the House of Lords.

London, Feb. 10.—The house of lords has completed the committee stage of the parish council bill.

BIG BLAZE IN DULUTH

THE BOARD OF TRADE BUILDING NOW IN ASHES.

The Structure Entirely Destroyed, Causing a Loss of About $120,000; Insurance, $80,000—Valuable Records and Papers Consumed.

Duluth, Feb. 12.—The Duluth board of trade building, on the corner of Superior street and Third avenue west, was destroyed by fire yesterday, causing a total loss of over $120,000, with insurance aggregating $80,000. The fire started shortly after noon in Guthrie & Earhart's office, and is said to have originated in a desk. When discovered it could easily have been extinguished had any water been available, but when an attempt was made to use the hose in the building no water came. Then the flames had spread considerably and Earhart's office was blazing. An alarm was sent in, but when the firemen arrived on the scene the fire had reached the second story and was burning fiercely. Then it was found that the hydrant opposite the building was frozen, which caused further delay. When water was finally obtained the fire was beyond control. The building was entirely destroyed, and but few of the occupants saved anything. Many of the records of the board, covering the whole period of its existence, were burned, and they can never be wholly replaced. Secretary Wells was just completing his report for the past year, and all his manuscripts and notes were destroyed. The building was four stories high on Superior street and five stories on Michigan street. It was a brick structure, and was built in 1885, being dedicated on Jan. 6, 1886. The loss on the building alone is about $65,000, while the value of the contents will increase the total loss to $120,000 or more. The total insurance, as far as known, is $80,000, but this is exclusive of the insurance on the two telegraph offices, which are covered by blanket policies. The board of trade has $55,000 insurance on the building, $12,000 on rents and $750 on office furniture and fixtures.

The board has been contemplating the erection of a new building, having purchased a lot and adopted plans for a structure costing $300,000, the old quarters being found inadequate to accommodate the greatly increased business. Work on the new structure will now be begun as soon as the weather will permit. In the meantime the board will occupy temporary quarters in the chamber of commerce building.

A. D. Thompson had a narrow escape while trying to save valuable papers from his office in the third story. When he tried to descend he found the halls filled with flames and smoke, and got out on the fire escape just as the fire burst into his office.

Yetzer Captured.

Omaha, Feb. 12.—J. G. Yetzer, president of the defunct Cass County bank of Atlantic City, Iowa, was arrested at Council Bluffs last night on a charge of fraudulent banking. He has been staying at the home of a friend in Council Bluffs for a week while officers have been searching the state for him. Yetzer will be taken to Atlantic to-day. Feeling at Atlantic is very high against him. At one time lynching was talked of. Yetzer is already under $5,000 bail on a similar charge.

A Big Strike.

Henderson, Ky., Feb. 12.—Henderson was visited by the most disastrous conflagration that has ever occurred in the history of the place, starting with John H. Barrett & Co.'s large tobacco stemmery at the corner of Main and Fifth streets, the fire was wafted by a strong wind to the factory of R. H. Soaper on the opposite corner. Both these buildings, containing about 1,000,000 pounds of tobacco, together with four brick dwellings, were quickly destroyed. The total loss was something over $150,000.

Trial for Murder.

Waterloo, Ind., Feb. 12.—Sam Deeters will be placed on trial at Angola for the most heinous murder ever committed in Steuben county. On Aug. 31 last he shot and killed his neighbor, Amos Buchtel, and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Laura Lowe. He then wounded William Yates and attempted to kill his own mother by locking her in a barn and firing the building. The mother escaped and Deeters was arrested. He lived five miles north from Waterloo, but the case was taken to Steuben county on a change of venue.

Cyclone in Indiana.

Michigan City, Ind., Feb. 12.—A cyclone struck this city at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It swept through a lumber yard, carrying everything before it, and passed over the Monon and Michigan Central freight yards where it carried five cars from the tracks and wrecked them. The funnel then disappeared over the lake.

Blue Ribbon Record.

St. Louis, Feb. 12.—A jury in a criminal court larceny case here made a blue ribbon record. It came into court and through its foreman asked the judge that it be allowed, instead of finding against the defendant, to return a verdict with ten years' imprisonment. The judge refused and the jury disagreed and was discharged.

Epidemic of Diphtheria.

St. Vincent, Minn., Feb. 12.—At Emerson, Man., three miles north of St. Vincent, two families are afflicted with diphtheria. Four children out of one family have died within three days. The city authorities have quarantined the affected houses and have done everything to prevent the spread of the disease.

Indicted a Cashier.

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 12.—The grand jury has indicted Samuel Collyer, cashier of the defunct Merchants' National bank and one of the most prominent men of the city, on a charge of selling a worthless draft on the Chase National Bank of New York for $300. He was arrested and released on $10,000 bonds.

Rebels Lose.

Buenos Ayres, Feb. 12.—Dispatches received here from an official source at Rio de Janeiro say that the government forces at Nictheroy have repulsed the insurgents and captured many prisoners, among whom are several naval officers. In Rio Grande do Sul the insurgents have captured Basso Fundo, Allegrete, Monosay, Cruz Alta and Sollad.

New County Desired.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Feb. 12.—A proposal is seriously made for a new county with Fairfax as the county seat. The villages of Wellington, Bandan and Cairo in Renville county, with Grafton, Molke, Severance, Bismarck and Alfsborg in Sibley county will be included. As things stand many have to travel forty or fifty miles to a county seat.

Capt. McKay's Candidacy.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Feb. 12.—Capt. C. W. McKay of this city is a candidate for junior vice commander at the coming encampment of the G. A. R. Capt. McKay is captain of company F of the state militia and has been commander of Stanton post. He is very popular in this end of the state.

Will Hunt for Sapphires.

Lake City, Minn., Feb. 12.—A sapphire, genuine but of poor quality, was picked up in this vicinity last fall and it is presumed that more and better ones can be found by a careful exploration, which will be made in the spring and summer.

A Clay Pigeon Tie Shoot.

Whitewater, Wis., Feb. 12.—The Waukesha Rod and Gun club shot a match here with the Winchester Rod and Gun club. Each club shot at 400 clay pigeons. It resulted in a tie, each getting 314. The tie will be decided in Waukesha in March.

Loses a Landmark.

Tomah, Wis., Feb. 12.—The Northwestern hotel in this city was burned last night. Loss, $2,000; partially insured. The building was an old landmark.

FALL OF THE BEAUTIFUL

A SNOW STORM PREVAILS IN THE WEST AND SOUTH.

Railroads in Nebraska and Kansas Blockaded and Trains Abandoned—The Storm One of the Worst in Many Years in Kansas.

Omaha, Feb. 12.—Since 3 o'clock yesterday morning a storm has raged generally in the upper Missouri country covering the entire territory between the river and the mountains. The wind is from the north, blowing almost a gale, accompanied by fine snow which is drifted badly and packed hard. In this city the streets have been kept open and cars moving, but the movement of railroad trains has been greatly hampered. Last night all trains on the Elkhorn, Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific and Burlington, in Nebraska, are from two to four hours late. All outgoing trains are abandoned. The Kansas City & Nebraska Central has abandoned all its trains. Reports received from points in the west at 7 o'clock says the snow fall is increasing and is drifting badly so that a general blockade is imminent. The mercury is still a few degrees above zero, but is falling slowly. This will entail great suffering and probably extensive loss among cattle ranges. The wet snow of Friday covered all forage out of sight, and this latter fall will make it impossible for the cattle to obtain any food. The blizzard will also have a deterrent effect upon any probable Indian uprising as the snow is too deep and the weather too cold for such a demonstration.

Kansas City, Feb. 12.—The great New York blizzard was almost outdone in the West yesterday. It began snowing in this city about noon, and has continued ever since, the snow coming down so thick it looks like a fog. Up to 8 o'clock last night the precipitation was fully one foot in depth, and still falling, accompanied by a high wind. All street car lines in the city were compelled to suspend operations about 4 o'clock, the plows being unable to keep the tracks sufficiently clear to permit the cars to run, and a long line of grips and coaches are stretched along the various lines in different parts of the city. Only those who have to be out are in the streets, as it is almost impossible for pedestrians to get about. In-coming trains from all directions are very late. Reports from Kansas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory say that the storm is the worst in many years. Railroads are blockaded and trains abandoned. Much suffering will result.

Helping Out the Merchants.

Ruthven, Iowa, Feb. 12.—For some time past the firm of J. E. Mulroney & Co. of this place have been doing some very extensive advertising for the purpose of reducing their stock. Some friends who thought the stock was not going fast enough last night backed a wagon up to the back door of the store and loaded in between $300 and $500 worth of goods and departed, forgetting to leave their card or any other fee. As soon as the robbery was discovered officers were put upon the trail. Part of the stolen goods are found in the advent church, where the thieves had left them after sorting out what they wanted.

Fire in Colt's Shops.

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 12.—Fire broke out in the Colt Patent Fire Arms company's shop yesterday, and in two hours destroyed about $150,000 worth of property. The works employ about 500 men. The government Gatling gun contracts will not be impeded. The whole shop was burned Feb. 5, 1864, with a loss of $1,500,000, not long after Col. Colt's death, a singular coincidence with the present fire after "Goldie" Colt's death a few weeks ago.

Fatal Fire in Paris.

Paris, Feb. 12.—A fire occurred in the Rue de Reuilly. While the firemen and workmen were engaged in the basement of the burning building a carboy of sulphuret of carbon exploded. The flames completely enveloped the party. Eight firemen were killed and seventeen workmen severely burned.

Orton-Lee.

Ortonville, Minn., Feb. 12.—The wedding of Miss Clara A. Orton to Albert S. Lee is announced for Wednesday evening next. Miss Orton is the eldest daughter of the late Hon. C. K. Orton, founder and town-site proprietor of this city. Mr. Lee is a prominent young business man who came to this city from Minneapolis two years ago. A reception will follow the wedding at the Orton residence.

DURING hard times consumers cannot afford to experiment with inferior, cheap brands of baking powder. It is NOW that the great strength and purity of the ROYAL stand out as a friend in need to those who desire to practise Economy in the Kitchen. Each spoonful does its perfect work. Its increasing sale bears witness that it is a necessity to the prudent—it goes further.

N.B. Grocers say that every dollar invested in Royal Baking Powder is worth a dollar the world over, that it does not consume their capital in dead stock, because it is the great favorite, and sells through all times and seasons.

Duluth, Feb. 30th.—There is an excited hegira from all parts of Northern Minnesota and Canadian border towns to the new gold district of Rainy Lake along the international boundary. United States Special agent A. L. Ston who has just returned from there states that people are flocking to the district by sled dog trains and on foot from all directions. The nearest railway point is 100 miles distant, but all buildings in the new town of Rainy Lake City are overcrowded and hundreds of people are sleeping in tents in a temperature that frequently reaches 20 to 30 degrees below zero. Rainy Lake City is the center of gold discoveries in Minnesota, all but the richest fields are believed to be in Canada north of the Lake.—Crookston Times.

The meanest of all the mean things which the editor of the Journal has ever done in connection with the printing matter was the fling at Judge Ives contained in its last issue, because he refused to issue the writ of mandamus. Judge Ives gave as his reason for declining to have anything to do with the matter that he was a relative of one of the parties interested and asked that it be taken before another judge who was not thus interested. What course more manly or honorable could have been pursued? It showed that Judge Ives had a due appreciation of the honorable position he occupied and would do nothing that would bring the least suspicion upon him. He undoubtedly saw—as everyone else did who had any knowledge of the law or justice of the case—that he would have been obliged to decide it as Judge Searl did and then there might have been some grounds for a suspicion that he favored the defense on account of his son's interest in the case. The Journal's attack upon him for refusing to have anything to do with the matter, can, therefore, only reflect upon the source from whence it came and show to what depths of meanness and dishonesty that paper can descend.—Crookston Times.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment the sum of four hundred and sixty-six dollars which is claimed to be due and is due, at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Joseph Jean and Odele Jean his wife, mortgagors, to Security Trust Company, of Nashua N. H., mortgagee bearing date the 7th day of July 1890, and with a power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 11th day of July 1890 at 4:20 o'clock p. m. in book 50 of mortgages on page 49. Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Security Trust Company of Nashua, N. H., mortgagor, to E. P. Goodsell Jr. by written assignment dated the 22nd day of April 1892 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on the 4th day of May 1892 at 8.30 o'clock a. m. in book 61 of page 202, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The west half of the west half of Section two in Township one hundred and fifty, of Range forty-two, in Polk county, and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made, by the sheriff of said Polk county at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county and state, on the 1st day of March 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes if any, on said premises and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Supplement

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

Of the Meeting of the Board of County Commissioners, Polk County, Minnesota.

The board met in adjourned session on the 29th day of January, 1694, at 10 o'clock a. m. All members present.

The following resolution offered by Mr. Kirsch was adopted.

"Believing it to be the intention of the law relating to the notice or list to be published, of expiration of time of redemption, that each such person or party being delinquent on his taxes, should have the opportunity and privelege of knowing this fact through the medium of a newspaper as an informer, it is to be inferred that such newspaper should be of good standing and general circulation, but inasmuch as this important list was published last year in a sheet called the Tribune, a paper issued at Crookston and circulated principally around McIntosh and vicinity, and for which act the county auditor alone is responsible, and an act for which this board has been criticised for allowing the fees therefor, and

Believing furthermore that it is the intention of said law, that the greater number if not all of the tax-payers should have an opportunity of being informed on this important matter concerning the security of our homes and for the purpose of preventing a repitition of such obscure publications as practiced last year, and

Believing—as a matter of fact—that the fees of 25 cents per description as, fixed by law for such publication is excessive and extortionate, we.

Therefore request and demand on behalf of the tax-payers of Polk County that the County Auditor cause said list of experation if time of redemption about to be published for the taxes of the year 1889 to be published in the weekly Crookston Times, The Polk County Journal, The Tribune, of Crookston and Red River Dalen, only one of said papers The Weekly Crookston Times shall be required to publish said list for three successive weeks and that we will allow each of said papers, if they or as many of them as will agree to this arrangement, a fee of three cents for each description (or items of tax carried out). By this arrangement the tax-payers are benefitted in a double measure first by saving at least 13 cents on each description and second the distribution of said list, with the circulation of the four papers above mentioned will reach nearly every tax-payer of Polk County; but if any of the papers above mentioned should decline or refuse to publish said list then the County Auditor may designate some other newspaper in its place and

That only in this and in no other manner or form, and at no higher cost to the delinquent tax-payers than 12 cents will this board recognize or allow any bills presented for the publication of said list.

Acopted this 29th day of January 1894.

A. C. RHINEHART,
C. P. DEMERS,
M. E. KIRSCH,
J. E. OPPEGAARD,
ANTON LINDEM,
County Commissioners.

The reports of Kirsch, M. Cornelius and Oppegard relating to the additional securities obtained from the persons delinquent on the seed grain loans of 1893 were read and on motion the same was accepted.

The petition of Wm. Shaper and others for organization of a new school district out of school district No. 82 was presented and a hearing set for the next meeting of the board.

Kirsch offered the following resolution which was adopted.

Whereas, it appears in the report of J. E. Oppegard that one Xavier Juneau foreclosed a chattel mortgage given by Prayide Thiveerge in his grain or wheat raised on the sw¼ sec. 30 tp. 150 r. 40 (Chester tp.) and on which grain so raised the County of Polk held the first lien for seed grain furnished said Pratide Thiveerge, and whereas it appears in the same report that Mr. James Rosholt forclosed a chattel mortgage given by C. O. Nelson on his grain raised on the nw¼ sw¼ sec. 16, tp. 149 r. 41 (Lessor tp.) and on which Polk County held the first lien for seed-grain furnished said C. O. Nelson,

Therefore, be it resolved that the County Attorney be and he is hereby required to forthwith notify said mortgagees above mentioned to pay over to the county the amount of its prior claims, or in the failure of immediate payment to institute action against the said mortgagees for the recovery of the amount of the county's lien.

Mrs, Catherina Roberge was ordered refunded the taxes paid in error, on the s½ se¼ and s½ sw¼ sec. 10, tp. 151 r. 45 for 1891.

The stipulation of agreement entered into by and between Peter Truax and the committee appointed on behalf of the county relating to the ditch proposed to be established through Lowell tp. was agreed to and ratified by the board.

The petition of Lars Abelson asking to attach his farm the nw¼ sec 30 tp. 154, r. 46 to school district No. 71 was granted.

"Whereas, the action of this board with reference to the county printing has been questioned by some of the newspapers whose bids were not excepted and whereas said newspapers have asserted that the printing was given to the Crookston Times, East Grand Forks Courier and St. Hilaire Spectator at an additional cost of 2,500 Dollars over the bid of the Polk County Journal which claimes to have been the lowest bidder and whereas a comparison of the bids, shows that the prices charged for job work varied but very little in any of the bids, therefore be it resolved that in order to determine the truth or falsity of the statement that the printing was awarded at a cost of 2,500 Dollars more than other bids submitted, the County Auditor and one or more of the County Commissioners to be appointed by the chairman, be requested to examine the printing bills paid during the past year and report to the board at the next meeting the total cost of all matters published in the official papers during the past year, it being understood that the price paid last year were exactly the same as this year.

The chairman thereupon appointed Kirsch and Lindem as a committee to examine the bills referred to.

The assessment made against Robillard & Co., Village of Red Lake Falls was ordered transferred to Tell Robellard.

On motion of Kirsch the chairman was authorized to employ an attorney to appear in behalf of the county in the appeal case of Cooke & Hammond asking the court to order the commissioners to give the county printing to said Cooke & Hammond—Lindem and Oppegaard dissenting.

E. M. Hoff and C. G. Rapp of St. Hilaire was each granted an abatement of 500 Dollars in their assessment for goods and merchandise.

The County Auditor was authorized to advertise for bids on a combination of iron bridge to be built across a ditch the size of bridge to be 18 feet wide by about 60 feet long.

On motion of Commissioner Kirsch the bridge petitions was laid over until next meeting.

The report of the Register of Deeds was read and accepted, the same showing total receipts of $4,299.65. Salries and clerk hire $2,966.85 out proceeds $1,332.80.

The report of the clerk of court was read and accepted, same showing total receipts including county work of $3470.00.

The report of O. L. Hamery, County surveyor was read and accepted, total receipt for work as surveyor amounted to $611.00.

The amount found placed to the credit of the text-books account was ordered transferred to the county revenue fund.

The assessment of goods and merchandise to A. E. Brush of Angus tp. was ordered cancelled.

The financial statement for 1893 as prepared by the County Auditor was read and on motion the same was accepted, ordered published.

The application of R. E. English of Fertile for a auctioneers license was granted for one year, he having filed his bond and paid the fee as established by the board.

The County Auditor was instructed to notify G. A. Ralph to correct the copy of a plat of the townsite of Thief River Falls made by him and on file in the Register's office to correspond with the original plat thereof.

The amount drawn by the County Treasurer of $384.95 in excess of the amount of limit as fixed by the statute for clerk hire in his office for the past year was legalized by the board in allowing the amount overdrawn.

A hearing was ordered set for next meeting of the board on the petition of John Braht to detach the sw¼ of sec. 32, tp. 153, r. 48 from school district No. 118 and same attached to No. 30.

The report of Sheriff Grundyson was presented and read to the board, the same showing total receipts of $4,814 72 his, deputies salaries traveling expense including 600 Dollars for the use of horses, buggies and cutters amounted to 3,207.66 Dollars. The board ordered the report placed on file.

The Board joined in the following affidavit:

"We the undersigned constituting the board of County Commissioners of Polk County do hereby affirm as their true belief that the care of public business in this county requires that special meetings be held during the course of the present year beyond the regular and special sessions as fixed by a special law governing this county, and that we consider said special meetings to be necessary and indispensable.

HIS LITTLE JOKE.

How a Bad Subject Turned the Tables on an Insurance Agent.

Bob Keyworth of Houston is a tall man, upward of 6 feet [illegible], but he looks as if he was not long for this world. He is hollow chested and so thin that he looks very much as if he had not had anything to eat since the war. When he passes along the streets, the undertakers come out and cast a long, lingering glance at him, and no wonder, for he has been inspiring them with hopes that have never been realized for the last 20 years. He has, moreover, a hacking cough that has the genuine graveyard ring to it.

Not long ago it occurred to him that it would be a good idea to have his life insured. He had previously experienced some astonishment that he had never suffered from the [illegible] of life insurance [illegible] discovered that [illegible] to take any risks on [illegible] subject, as his [illegible] at any time. Being of a [illegible] turn of mind, Bob made it a [illegible] time on to [illegible] every possible [illegible] tackled one in the lobby of a Houston hotel. The agent represented an influential New York company. Introducing himself, Bob said:

"I just heard of your arrival and hurried over to see you. For [illegible] I have been wanting to get my life insured in some good company, and yours is first class."

The agent gazed at the living anatomy before him and grew somewhat embarrassed. He hemmed and hawed a few times and said hesitatingly that he was only taking first class risks and that his visitor seemed to be rather feeble.

"Yes," said Bob, "I know I look consumptive, [illegible] all my life, and [illegible] are living [illegible] years of [illegible] needle with [illegible] glasses. I'm [illegible]"

The agent [illegible] tory sort of way.

"I never [illegible] and have the [illegible] da," continued [illegible]

"I don't care to insure your life," said the agent, with increasing firmness.

"That's what all these [illegible] when I talk to them, [illegible] inducements. [illegible] you owe your company [illegible] my dear sir. You may die [illegible] you will regret [illegible] the company [illegible] your salary, [illegible] let them know how you are neglecting their interests."

"Excuse me, but I have a business engagement," said the agent, trying to get away, but Bob [illegible] out a skeleton hand and detained him.

"I have been vaccinated several times, and it took every time. Besides I am a man of influence here, and if you succeed in insuring me [illegible] prominent citizens of Houston you will capture."

"I'm too [illegible]"

"I don't [illegible]," replied Bob, "so I will [illegible] later in the day, when we will talk it over."

The [illegible] rushed out of the hotel, and [illegible] tears rolled down his hollow cheeks.—Texas Siftings.

"Yes," said Mr. B—— cheerfully. "We poets thrive in hard times or easy times."

"I presume so," continued the teller. "It must be a pretty good business. I imagine that a poem of yours must be good for a hundred dollars anywhere you please to offer it."

"Ye-e-es," said Mr. B—— thoughtfully. "Oh, of course, of course," he added.

Two days later he went into the bank again and handed a deposit slip to the teller. It read thus:

Financial.

The funny man with a beard of a week's growth came and leaned heavily against the railing in front of the paying teller.

It was bitter cold, and the world without shivered.

"Money is close," hoarsely whispered the funny man as he glanced significantly at the vault.

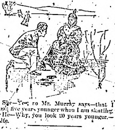
"Not so close as it was, however," he rejoined.

He had thrown the fellow into the farthest corner and was now jumping upon him with both feet.

Presently the janitor interfered, and all was still.—Detroit Tribune.

Too Much of a Compliment.



She—Yes; so Mr. Murray says—that I look five years younger when I am skating.

He—Why, you look 20 years younger.—Life.

No Use.

"Ignorance of things ginerally perwents us from enjoyin a dreadful lot of happiness in this life," said Aaron Linscott to the minister one day. He was given to this form of discourse with the clergymen, doubtless on the same principle that led him to talk sickness with his doctor and crops with his neighbors.

"You git a ter'ble blind view of life on the way things is runnin if you don't edicate yourself up to knowin a blessin when you see it. When I see folks throwin their blessin's away, it allers makes me think of a barr'l of cranb'ries."

A barrel of cranberries! If the visitor felt small interest before, he certainly lacked none now. He expressed his surprise.

"Yis, a barr'l of cranb'ries," said Aaron. "When I was out in the West Injies, there was a man tuk keer of me when I was sick, an he wouldn't take pay, but said I could send him somethin off the farm, so when I got home I shipped him a barr'l of cranb'ries by a vessel that was goin out from our place.

"Well, after a time a letter kem back. He writ very perlite an seemed grateful, but he said, most unfort'nate, that the fruit looked putty, but he hed to throw it away, for in cookin it hed turned sour."

And then Aaron added his moral, "That's what I call mis in the sweetness of things 'cause you didn't know how to get at it."—Youth's Companion.

She Got a Pass.

Mayor Joe Rhinock of Covington last evening related to his friends an amusing adventure of the day before. A colored woman, burdened with a lusty, squalling baby, called at his office.

"Am dis de mayor?" she wanted to know.

"It am," responded the executive.

"Den jest you sit down and write me a pass to Pruitts, Ky.," she ordered, without any palpable waste of words.

His honor explained that this was not one of his prerogatives and that her request would have to be laid before the chairman of the council relief committee.

"It does, eh?" asked the madam. "I'ze got to catch dat 12 o'clock train. Gimme dat pass, or I leave de baby!" She made a motion to drop the pickaninny into Mr. Rhinock's lap. That settled the argument. She got the pass.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

No Dissenting Voice.

"I'm a sort of April fool," said the man with a wart on his nose.

"Born the first day of April?" casually inquired the man with the gray spot in his mustache.

"No. Married."

"I don't know whether that made you an April fool or not," said the man in the mackintosh, lighting a cigar, "but whoever picked you up for a valuable package that day got badly April fooled."

And there was a most unanimous and approving silence all around the board.—Chicago Tribune.

A Maine schoolmaster said with stern emphasis the other day: "I saw the person who was whispering then. I am looking at that person now. IN A BUFFALO'S HEAD.

Singular Charge With Which a Hunter Killed a Bull.

The buffalo of Ceylon carries his head in a peculiar manner—the horns thrown back and his nose projecting on a level with his forehead—thus securing him from a fatal front shot. This renders him a dangerous enemy, as he will receive any number of balls from a small gun in the throat and chest without showing the least distress. In "The Rifle and Hound in Ceylon" an account of a dangerous encounter with this animal is given. The writer had fired without killing the buffalo and had not a ball left. With a stealthy step and a short grunt the bull advanced upon the man, seemingly aware of his helplessness.

"Suddenly a bright thought flashed through my mind. Without taking my eyes off the animal I put a double charge of powder down the right-hand barrel, and, tearing of a piece of my shirt, I took all the money from my pouch, three shillings in sixpenny pieces and two anna pieces.

"Quickly making them into a roll with the piece of rag, I rammed them down the barrel. They were hardly well home before the bull sprang forward. I had no time even to replace the ramrod, and threw it in the water, bringing my gun on full cock at the same instant.

"I now had a charge in my gun which, if reserved until he was within a few feet of the muzzle, would certainly floor him. The horns were lowered, their points were on either side of me, and the muzzle of the gun barely touched his forehead when I pulled the trigger and three shillings' worth of small change rattled into the hard head.

"Down he went and rolled over with the suddenly checked momentum of his charge. Away went B—— and I as fast as our heels would carry us, through the water and over the plain, knowing that he was not dead, but only stunned.

"There was a large fallen tree about half a mile from us whose whitened branches, rising above the ground, offered a tempting asylum. To this we directed our steps, and after a run of one hundred yards we turned and looked behind us. The buffalo had regained his feet and was following us slowly. We now experienced the difference of feeling between hunting and being hunted.

"By degrees the bull's pace slackened and he fell. We were only too glad to be able to reduce our speed, but we had no sooner stopped to breathe than he was up again and after us. At length, however, we gained the tree, and beheld him stretched powerless upon the ground within two hundred yards of us."

Introductions at a Ball.

It is clearly the duty of the hostess at a ball or dancing party to endeavor to provide her guests with partners, and for that purpose she must either make introductions herself or through the help of others. She must always ask permission before presenting a gentleman to a lady—permission that should never be refused unless the lady has very good and strong reasons for declining to make the gentleman's acquaintance. Young men often present each other to young ladies, and it is entirely proper that they should do so if they have first asked leave. A gentleman may also ask a lady, if he knows her well, to introduce him to another lady when a proper opportunity shall occur. Of course he should neither wish nor expect his friend to cross a crowded room with him to make the introduction, because she would be left to make a bad third, or else retrace her way alone. The situation would be awkward, except for one of the ladies of the house.—Philadelphia Times.

Somebody's Good.

To make our own troubles the means of helping the troubles of others is a noble effort for good. A well illustrated instance of this kindly sympathy is shown in a letter from Mr. Enoch L. Hanscom, School Agent, Marshfield, Me., an old Union soldier. He says: "It may do somebody some good to state, I am a man of 60 and when 40 had a bad knee and rheumatism set in. I was lame three years and very bad most of the time. I got St. Jacobs Oil and put it on three times and it made a cure. I am now in good health."

NO SEA-SERPENT.

But There are Several Strange Marine Animals That Look Like It.

The question of the existence of the "sea-serpent" is solely one of fact. There is no prior reason why such reptiles could not exist, and creatures to which such a name would apply did exist in abundance in mesozoic times. Nevertheless, although there have been many reports of the discovery of the "sea serpents," there is not at present the slightest positive evidence to prove that such a creature now inhabits the sea. It is not within the realm of probability that any marine reptile of large size other than sea turtles now exist.

The sea has been as fully explored as the land. The fishes of the sea, from the surface to the depth of five miles, are as well known as the animals of similar size on any of the continents except Europe. The larger animals which swim near the surface in the open ocean are for the most part well known and have been known ever since oceanic navigation began. Probably not half a dozen species of marine animals reaching a length of 15 feet have been discovered in our century. Most of those now known were known to the ancients.

The sea-serpent stories may be classified as follows:

1. Pure inventions, forecastle yarns, etc.

2. Alcoholisms.

3. Stories with a foundation of fact, the basis being a seal, a fragment of a wreck, a long strip of kelp, or some other natural object mistaken for a serpent.

4. Practical jokes, as the India-rubber sea-serpent seen on Silver Lake, N. Y., about 1855. This appeared usually in the evening and in sight of the veranda of the hotel.

5. The great oarfish, or king of the herrings (Regalecus glesne.) This is a long, slender, ribbon-shaped fish of the open sea. It swims in swift undulations, with great speed, on the surface of the water. It reaches a length of 20 feet, or more. The dorsal fin on its head forms a high crest, like the mane of a horse, and the fish is altogether a striking object. It has been but once taken in American waters, a specimen having come ashore in Bermuda some years ago. This fish is remotely allied to the mackerel. According to Dr. Goode, all the sea-serpents with "upreared heads and the mane of a horse" can be referred to Regalecus.

A smaller fish of this type, too small to seem like a serpent, is occasionally taken off our coast and known as king of the salmon (Trachypterus rex-salmonorum). The Chinnock Indians believe that if this fish is caught the salmon will cease running. A similar noxious influence is exerted by the birth of twins. Other swift-moving, ribbon-shaped surface fishes, as the thread-eel, the cutlass fish, etc., have been reported as young sea-serpents.

6. The great frill-shark (Chlamydoselachus anguineus) has been reported as a sea serpent. It was correctly drawn as such by a Maine fisherman before its occurence in the Atlantic Ocean was known. This is a very rare shark, as slim and flexible as a snake, and grow to be 15 feet or more in length. It has the general structure of the shark, or rather of the extinct shark, for one has to go back to the carboniferous age to find any like him. This shark, with its frill of gills about its neck, is one of the rarest of fishes, only about four existing in collections. It is thought to be the oldest living vertebrate, for all other sharks of similar structures have long since passed away. It is the original of the sea-serpent that swims low, with its head under water.

7. The great killer, or gladiator (Orca orca). This creature is a water mammal allied to the porpoise and dolphin. It is very swift and strong, and of so savage a disposition that it is the terror of whales, seals sharks, swordfishes and of large fishes generally. It reaches a length of 20 to 30 feet. It is ordinarily detested by fishermen, but this summer it served them a good turn by "rounding up" in Monterey Bay the shoals of salmon from the neighboring ocean.

In its spiteful attack on the whale—and it will kill even the biggest of them—it has been taken for a sea-serpent. Its sword shaped dorsal fin, some 6 feet high, helps on the illusion. All the sea-serpents which attack whales, "choking them in their gigantic folds" and "lashing the water for rods into bloody foam," are doubtless killers.

8. Venomous little snakes exist in the Indian Ocean. These are well known and are never taken for "sea-serpents."

The above record includes all the sea-serpents of which I have seen records up to date.—Prof. D. S. Jordan in the San Francisco Examiner.

APPOINTMENT BROKEN.

"May!"

"Oh, May!"

"Mr. Wilmarth didn't call on you last evening!"

"Did Mr. Wilmarth call last evening?"

May Davis coloring hotly, looked up as the two noisy school girls, their shrill voices ringing through the house, came rushing into the cozy little studio where May painted placques and panels and pastel portraits.

"No," she replied, quietly. "Why?"

Gertie Davis and her particular friend, Katie Lyons, exchanged solemnly significant glances.

"We know," went on Gertie impressively, "that he had asked permission to call on you last evening. We know he did not. And we know," dropping her voice until it sounded really sepulchral, "why he broke his appointment."

"That I shall also know in good time," said May somewhat frostily. "I had a telegram from Mr. Wilmarth last evening."

She remembered, however, that the dispatch had said simply:

"Pardon my absence. Am unavoidably detained."

"I think I'll go home," ventured Katie a little nervously. "Perhaps May would rather not hear what we saw."

May, holding a palette and sheaf of brushes, deliberately turned around to face the speaker.

"Tell all you have come to announce, Katie," she advised, quietly.

May Davis was a pretty girl of 22. Her face in repose had a gravity which made her appear older than she was, but when her seriousness broke in smiles she looked bewitchingly gay and youthful. Her wavy brown hair she wore parted, and brushed simply back from a fair, smooth brow. Her sincere eyes were grey, shadowed by long, dark lashes.

"Well," began Miss Lyons, who was at the angular age of 14, "you know that great brick building, the Langham apartment-house, which is just across the street from our place?"

May nodded, and Katie went on.

"Well, last evening Gertie and I—you know Gertie was staying over night with me—were dressing for a class social in our room, when we got talking about you and Mr. Wilmarth. Gertie was saying how much he seemed to think of you, and how often he came to see you, and—and everything. All at once—she was dressed and leaning against the window, waiting for me—she said:

"'Why, there he is!'" burst in Gertie, unwilling that her friend should longer monopolize the nature of their sensation in a nutshell. "And there he was! I could see him quite plainly in the brightly lighted room of the Langham. And as Katie and I were watching him——"

"A lady came into the room," exclaimed Katie, breathlessly.

"And," cried both together, "he kissed her!"

They stared round-eyed, at their victim.

"Is that all?" queried May.

"All!" repeated the scandal-mongers, faintly.

"Yes. Why shouldn't he kiss her? He may be engaged to her, for all we know to the contrary. It seems to me you have been exciting yourselves needlessly."

"We—we thought," stammered Gertie, "that he was engaged to you!"

"Mr. Wilmarth has never honored me with a proposal," May declared, still in that level tone. "And now, if you girls have nothing more important to say to me, I shall be glad of an opportunity to finish this panel."

Feeling cheated and abashed, the girls took themselves away. May rose and fastened the door behind them. She returned to her seat and stared at the hollyhocks on the half painted panel. What ugly, sprawling things they were! and only an hour ago she had had the bad taste to consider them beautiful. She did not again take up the palette. She only sat there, conscious in some stupid way of being aghast at her own emotion.

"Any admittance?" queried a laughing voice.

The fur covered shoulders, Parisian hat and sparkling eyes of Nancy Luders confronted May when she opened the door.

"You falsifier!" cried the vistor, gayly, as she embraced her friend. "You refused to make one of my theater party last evening because you had given Mr. Wilmarth permission to call. And, behold, Mr. Wilmarth failed to materilize."

May felt surprised and indignant. Was the whole town taking up the question of her admirer's broken appointment? Who, besides herself, was concerned with the fact that he had stayed away?

"He sent me word he was detained," she said, stifling her annoyance.

Nancy smiled, knowingly.

"He was. When we were taking the suburban theater train at the Northwestern he was seeing off a lady who was going on the St. Paul flyer. I knew he could not have been out this distance, and have reached there by that hour. May, dear—perhaps I ought not to mention it—but you really should know——"

"Go on," said May, in an even voice.

"Well, their parting was most affectionate. He kissed her, and said: 'I shall write you soon, dear.' And she answered: 'Do, Edwin. I shall be most anxious till I hear from you.' One of our party happened to recognize the lady, who was quite pretty. He says she is a gay, wealthy young widow named Mrs. Vastine, and that she lives in St. Paul. I told you all along that I distrusted Mr. Wilmarth. I feel so grieved for you, after all the attention he has paid you."

"Oh, don't waste your sympathy," said May, looking straight into her friend's eyes with a serene smile. "There is no necessity whatever for condolence, I assure you. And I do not wish to hurry you, dear, or to seem rude, but this panel is an order, and I am rather rushed to get it finished by the date mentioned."

"Oh!" murmured Nancy, taken aback, "if that is the way you feel about my kindness——"

And in a very bad humor, indeed, she departed.

The young artist went back to her holly-hocks. She thought them uglier than ever. She deliberately lifted her blender, and with a few swift, circular strokes merged the varied, brilliant tints in one indistinguishable daub. All at once she laid aside palette, brushes, rest-stick, and, leaning her head on her hands, burst into tears.

Well born, comfortable off, attractive, accomplished, she had had many admirers, but not one had touched her heart until she met Edwin Wilmarth. Her cheeks now burned with shame as she recollected she had given him her love unasked, but had not his manner toward her been that of the most eager lover?

The afternoon light faded. She heard the street door open. Her father must have come home. She would hardly have time to dress for dinner. She dropped her brushes into a can of turpentine, and rose listlessly. There was a step in the hall without. A tall form darkened the doorway. She turned to see Edwin Wilmarth.

"I wonder if you will forgive me, Miss Davis," he said, coming forward hat in hand, "for invading your retreat. The servant told me I should find you here. I owe you an explanation as well as an apology for my failure to keep my appointment last evening."

She did not answer him. In a kind of dream she waited for the explanation. She wondered faintly if people were to keep forever coming up those stairs to talk about a mere absurd appointment that had been broken.

"One who is very dear to me," went on Wilmarth, "whom I had not seen for years, owing to my long absence in Europe, chanced to be in the city yesterday. She was leaving for her home last evening. I knew you would pardon me if I took the liberty of writing you my regrets. I went to the Langham where she was staying with a friend. She so much wished to make your acquaintance. I'm afraid," with a boyish laugh, "I had raved of you a good deal."

May felt the warmth come back to her heart with a rush.

"Who—who is she?" she asked, in a voice that to her sounded far away.

"Did I not tell you? How stupid of me! She is my only sister—a widow. Her name is Vastine—Cynthia Vastine. She lives in St. Paul. Why—what is wrong, May? You have been crying."

He had just caught a glimpse of her face, till now resolutely turned from the light.

"I spoiled my panel. It is absolutely ruined."

"That's a pity. But, May——"

"Yes."

"I told Cynthia my hopes. She is so anxious for my sake. What can I write her? That you care for me at all—I love you so! Dear, will you trust your future in my hands?"

She lifted to his a radiant face.

"Most confidently," she whispered.

Gertie Davis and Katie Lyons confided to each other that May certainly could not have any pride. Miss Luders disclaimed responsibility after having "warned May concerning his treacherous conduct." But when they learned that Mr. and Mrs. Wilmarth were about to pay a visit to the groom's sister—the pretty St. Paul widow, Mrs. Vastine—not one of the three said: "I told you so!"

JAPANESE CLANSMEN.

Sons Who Died to Avenge Their Fathers—Forty-Seven Ronins.

No crusader of the west, no viking of the north cherished a higher ideal of loyalty and chivalry than the clansmen of old Japan; no Corsican more ruthlessly handed down a feud from generation to generation or exacted from son and brother the execution of a sterner vendetta. The Satsuma men of to-day triumph in the fact that their own swords have avenged in this generation the defeat inflicted on their forefathers in the year 1600 by the Tokugawa clan.

Legend and drama recount every day to eager ears the stories of sons who died to avenge their fathers clansmen, that they might slay the foeman who had caused the death of their lord. The favorite heroes, who hold in popular estimation the place assigned by us to Robin Hood and his men, are the forty-seven ronins, a name assigned to men who had lost their clanship.

Their lord was obliged to commit hara-kiri, or judicial suicide, for having within royal precincts drawn his sword on a noble who had insulted him, and these stanch vassals devoted themselves to the destruction of the insulter, knowing assuredly that, having slain him, they would be equally condemned to take their own lives.

Still may be seen fresh incense sticks burning before the graves of their leader and his young son and visiting cards stuck into the little tables above them as tokens of the respect in which they were held by those who know their story and deplore their doom.

Mr. Black records that at a review of British troops in 1864 at Yokohama a great daimio was watching with interest the manoeuvers of the regiments and batteries of artillery stationed there. At the conclusion he was asked to allow the escort of his retainers who had accompanied him to go through their drill and tactics, to which he readily consented.

Turning to Sir Ruthford Alcock, who was inspecting the troops, he proudly said:

"My retinue is small and their tactics are not worthy of notice after what we have seen, but there is not one man among them who if I say 'die' will not unhesitatingly sacrifice his life at my command."

They Sneezed in Chorus.

The Rev. R. S. Hawker, in the course of some reminiscences of an aged friend of his, quotes an anecdote which this friend, himself a clergyman, was fond of telling. It is about a marriage ceremony and a pinch of snuff, and in the narrator's own language runs thus:

"It was always the custom in those days for the clergyman after the marriage to salute the bride first, before any other person. Well, it was just so that I had just married a very buxom, rosy young lady, and when it was over I proceeded to observe the usual ceremony.

But I had just taken an enormous finger-and-thumbful of snuff; so no sooner had the bride received my kiss—and I gave her a smart kiss for her good looks—than she began to sneeze. The bridegroom kissed her, of course, and he began also.

Then the best man advanced to the privilege. Better he hadn't, for he began to sneeze awfully; and by and by the bridesmaids also, for they were all kissed in turn, till the whole party went sneezing down the aisle, and the last thing I heard outside the church door was tchu, tchu, tchu, till the noise was drowned by the bells from the tower.

Wear and Tear of London Bridge.

What is the cost of London's toilet? No statistician has yet attempted to estimate it, and, indeed, the whole subject has been neglected. This is a pity, since there are some wonderful figures about cleaning the streets of the metropolis. The most startling, perhaps, are those relating to London bridge. It is computed that about 200,000 pedestrians and 20,000 vehicles cross that structure every day. Each leaves behind a little shoe leather or a little iron—just a trifle. But when litter and dust are added to these minute losses the whole fills between three and four carts. The most surprising fact of all, however, is that the incessant traffic across the bridge reduces to powder about twenty-five cubic yards of granite every year.—Newcastle (Eng) Chronicle.

WEIGHING AND MEASURING.

Proof of Air Currents by Means of a Rotating Globe.

Continuing his Christmas lectures at the Royal Institute, Prof. Dewar, showed, in the first place, how it is possible to weigh and measure air or gas under high pressure. Air was compressed into a small iron vessel until it became thirty times denser than ordinary air, and the vessel was weighed on a steel-yard. A further compression to sixty times the ordinary density was made, and the weight was found to have correspondingly increased. Then the compressed air was turned off into a gas holder for measurement, and was seen to be 3 1-2 cubic feet. Next Prof. Dewar turned to the subject of the circulation of air. By means of a diagram, he showed how air is always moving from the equator to the poles and then returns. Midway between the poles and the equator, of course, were the calms. The fact that air rises from the equator in consequence of heat he demonstrated by means of a very thin paper baloon, the air in which was heated and so caused to expand and rise. When currents met and crossed, they had tornadoes and waterspouts, the same thing happening in air as they might observe in pools when whirls and eddies occurred. Some of the effects of a whirl of air were illustrated by the familiar experiments of spinning coins, and sawdust on glass. Thus, the audience could see, he said, what happened, in the case of ships caught in a tornado. They might also note the effect of the use of a fan on the movement of air, causing a pressure on one side and diminution on the other. The temperature of that theatre was kept equal by fresh air being fanned into it from below, the outlet being through the roof.

Before leaving the subject he gave a demonstration of the effect a rapidly rotating globe would have upon the circumambient air, the air being repelled from the equator and sucked under the poles. No wonder, he said, that when wind traveled at fifty or sixty miles an hour ships were helpless. The experiment of keeping a ball poised on nothing but a current of air was also shown, and then two interesting experiments were made with sand. Sand was placed before a current of rapidly-moving air and carried with such rapidity (but not more rapidly than the current itself moved) that in ten seconds holes were cut through a sheet of glass. In the same way a beautiful lace pattern was cut upon another piece of glass by the air and sand alone, the pattern being secured by placing a substance over the glass, leaving exposed only the parts to be cut.

Prof. Dewar then went on to the chemistry of air, which, as he explained, was connected with what took place in the combustion. Producing a candle, he remarked that it would need air to burn as a man would need air to live. Put under a glass the candle soon burned out, but it left some liquid on the side of the glass, just as a man would on breathing into it. Lime water on being introduced into the glass, became turbid, and lay around the glass under the deposit or liquid left by the candle. This showed that new air had been produced. Therefore, they were confronted by the fact that in combustion new air was produced, and the question was, What? They might burn a candle away, and yet its products by burning would be heavier than the candle itself originally. This was proved to be the case also, with magnesium wire when burned. The solid which remained was not metallic in character; old chemists called it calyx of the material. Now the increase of weight following combustion could only come from some material in the air used up in the process of combustion, and that must be oxygen. Oxygen intensified combustion and was completely taken up by the burning body. Air, however, was not completely taken up, but only to the extent of about a fifth of its volume. The burning of carbon, phosphorus and metal in oxygen all went to show that air was a mixture containing only a fifth of its substance as oxygen, which alone had the property of maintaining combustion.—London, Daily News.

A SOMNAMBULIST'S PLIGHT.

She Rowed Across a River and Tied Herself With Rope.

Miss Cora Maye, the 16-year-old daughter of Mrs. Starr Dogan, resides with her family on the south side of the Yaquina river, six miles east of Toledo. Between 1 and 2 o'clock Friday night during her sleep, and clad only in a night robe, she arose from her bed and walked out on the back porch. There she secured an old oilcloth coat, and, after wrapping it about her, picked up a piece of rope and started for the river, 100 yards distant. At the boat landing she entered a boat, rowed herself up the river about 400 yards, and landed on the opposite bank. After setting the boat adrift she climbed a steep bank of the railroad track, where with the rope she tied her lower limbs together, passed the rope around her body twice over her shoulder, and then tied her hands behind her body. Then she hobbled up the railroad track for a distance of about three-quarters of a mile, and suddenly fell. She was awakened by the fall, and, although paralyzed by cold and fright, started to retrace her steps.

Her cries of distress soon alarmed the occupants of a house near by, who came to her rescue, and found her still tied, nervous, chilled, and in the saddest of very sad plights. She was taken home at once, and then her family learned for the first time that she had been absent from the house, and, of course, accepted her condition as the evidence that she had been the victim of an abduction. This was the news that first reached the community, and enraged men scoured the vicinity for the supposed guilty parties. Two tramps were arrested at Summit on suspicion, and after staring destruction in the face for several hours were finally released after establishing an alibi.

A good sleep restored the young girl to her normal condition, and thus, what appeared at first to be a shocking crime, was only the queer escapade of a somnambulist or sleep-walker.—Corvallis (Or.) Times.

Good Record for a Stormy Trip.

A splendid record for safety of ships and cargoes was made during 1893 by the large fleet of grain carriers between Pacific ports and Europe. The voyage is the longest and stormiest of all routes in the world's commerce, yet out of 326 vessels which sailed from San Francisco and other Pacific ports for Europe only one failed to arrive at her destination safely and with cargo in good order. This one ship was stranded on a South Pacific island, and lack of wrecking facilities alone prevented her getting off and resuming her voyage. Her crew was saved.—New York Tribune.

The Object of his Marriage.

Mrs. Gadd—I am very glad to hear you say that Mr. Tillinghast didn't marry Miss Landin for her money. She's such a thoroughly nice girl that she deserves to be married for love, even if she is an heiress.

Mr. Skidds—No, Tillinghast didn't marry her for her money, but for her real estate.—Truth.

RESUME OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The Hawaiian controversy occupied the principal time of the senate. Senator Gray of Delaware opened his argument in defense of the policy of President Cleveland. Early in the session an interesting incident occurred in the presentation by Senator Cullom of an opinion signed by 30,000 wool growers of the West protesting against the wool schedule in the new tariff bill. The speech of Senator Gray on the Hawaiian matter was devoted principally to an attempt to prove the complicity of Minister Stevens with revolutionists, the senator citing the evidence of members of the provisional government to show that they were in daily consultation with the minister previous to the revolution and that they expected the protection of the American troops in their plan to overthrow the queen.

In the house the first bill called up was one to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors in the District. Mr. Pickler offered an amendment restricting liquor licenses for hotels to such as have thirty sleeping apartments, which was defeated. Mr. Pickler made the point of no quorum. After filibustering some time he withdrew his point and the bill was passed. This was the only bill from the committee on District of Columbia, and Mr. Breckenridge then moved to go into committee of the whole for the consideration of the urgency deficiency bill. After Mr. Cannon had criticised the item of appropriation for the payment of United States witness fees, which he said was inadequate and might embarrass the United States court, the bill was passed.

Washington, Feb. 14.—The Hawaiian revolution was again the subject of discussion in the senate to-day. Senator Gray resumed his argument in support of the president's policy, and reiterated his charges of yesterday that the revolutionists were dependent on the United States minister and the United States forces for support of their movement, and that thereafter the provisional government depended absolutely upon the United States forces and the flag for protection and for the maintainance of the government they had established. The full significance of the present Hawaiian situation came out at the close of the senator's speech, when in a colloquy with Senator Teller he admitted that as a member of the foreign relations committee he understood the efforts of the president, moral or diplomatic, to restore the queen were at an end, and that the present minister to Hawaii had no directions to pursue further diplomatic negotiations to that end.

The house spent the day in debate on the Bland seigniorage bill, the principal speeches being those by Mr. Culberson of Texas in favor of the measure and Mr. Coombs of New York in opposition. Several times to-day Mr. Bland attempted to reach an agreement for closing general debate to-morrow with a view to securing a vote, but objection was made. Over forty members have asked for time to speak, and it may be possible that a special order will be required to bring the bill to a vote, but Mr. Bland does not think this method will have to be resorted to.

Washington, Feb. 15.—All efforts to agree upon a time for closing the debate upon the Bland bill have so far failed, and debate is still proceeding without limit. Mr. Bland will probably permit this to go on until to-morrow night, and there are quite a number of gentlemen who insist upon their right to be heard. The opponents of the measure have decided that they will insist upon a quorum of the advocates of the measure being present at every stage of the parliamentary procedure hereafter, so that a motion to close debate will require a quorum of those who are in favor of it. There are many members of the house who are absent at this time and it will probably require two days at least to secure the attendance necessary to bring the bill to a vote. To-morrow it is Mr. Bland's intention to make a motion to close debate, and as this motion will probably develop the lack of a quorum, the opponents of the bill refusing to vote, he will then offer a resolution to bring in absentees. A quorum favoring the bill being here, if necessary, a special order will be brought in to bring the measure to a final vote. Mr. Raynor and some of the other Democrats who are leading the opposition, still insist that the bill can be beaten, but Mr. Tracy, who is floor leader of the opposition on the Republican side, frankly confessed that he believes the bill will pass when it reaches a vote. As to whether it will be vetoed, however, he gives no opinion. The debate was without startling incident of any kind.

The entire time of the senate was consumed in the discussion of the house bill compelling the Rock Island Railroad company to stop its trains at the new towns of Enid and Round Pond, in the Indian Territory. The measure is especially championed by Senator Berry of Arkansas, and is proving a subject of great attention, as some Democratic senators see in the proposed exercise of congressional power, usurpation of rights. No action was reached on the bill, but a vote will probably be taken to-morrow.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The vice president of the United States came to the rescue of the Oklahoma town-site bill today and by his vote broke the tie and passed the bill compelling the Rock Island Railroad company to stop its trains at the new towns of Enid and Round Pond. This measure has been under discussion in the senate nearly a week and has been one of the most hotly contested bills of the session. Senator Blackburn moved to lay the bill on the table. The roll call resulted: Yeas 25, nays 31, and the motion to table the bill was defeated. Senator Peffer then presented an amendment to provide that in any election for the location of county seats "all citizens of the United States," irrespective of sex, shall be entitled to vote. It was opposed by Senator Blackburn, but Senator Peffer made a strong speech in support of his amendment. "I intend," said he in conclusion, "to avail myself of every opportunity to give to women—God bless her—every advantage, every right and every privilege that I have got." (Applause). The amendment was defeated, the vote being yeas 15, nays 4. Those voting for woman's suffrage were Senators Allison, Carey, Davis, Dolph, Frye, Gallinger, Hansbrough, Kyle, Manderson, Mitchell of Oregon, Peffer, Perkins, Stewart, Teller and Wilson. The bill was then reported as amended and after the third reading, the roll was called. The result was a tie. "The vote on this bill," said Vice President Stevenson, "is yeas 27, nays 27, a tie. The chair votes yea." This vote of the vice president saved the bill and it was declared to be passed. The senate then adjourned and the Peckham nomination goes over until to-morrow.

The debate on the Bland seigniorage bill in the house was characterized by several strong Democratic speeches against the measure. Mr. Bland has given up hope of reaching an agreement to close debate by unanimous consent and to-morrow he will move to close debate. As the opponents of the bill will decline to vote it will require a quorum of the advocates of the measure to carry this motion. Mr. Bland does not expect to secure a quorum to-morrow, but as soon as this lack of a quorum is demonstrated, steps will be taken to compel the attendance of absentees and Mr. Bland is confident that on Monday a quorum will be present to pass the bill.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The senate adjourned after spending the better part of two days considering the nomination of W. H. Peckham of New York to be associate justice of the supreme court. The nomination was rejected by a vote of 32 to 41. The vote in detail was as follows:

Ayes—Bate, Blackburn, Brice, Butler, Caffery, Dixon, Faulkner, George, Gray, Hale, Harris, Hunton, Kyle, Lindsay, McPherson, Martin, Mills, Mitchell (Or.), Mitchell (Wis.), Palmer, Pasco, Pettigrew, Platt, Proctor, Ransom, Roach, Squire, Stockbridge, Turpie, Vilas, Voorhees, White (La.)—32.

Absent Without Pairs—Colquitt and Sherman.

Recapitulation—For confirmation, Democrats, 23; Republicans, 8; Populists, 1—32. Against confirmation, Democrats, 15; Republicans, 23; Populists, 3—41. Paired for confirmation, Democrats, 4; Republicans, 1—5. Paired against confirmation, Democrats, 1; Republicans, 4—5. Absent and unpaired, Democrats, 1; Republicans, 1—2.

Mr. Bland began his coercive tactics to compel a vote on the silver seigniorage bill. The bulk of the Republicans and the Democratic opponents of the measure inaugurated a filibuster with the intention of forcing him to produce a quorum of the advocates of the bill to pass it, and the entire day was consumed in roll calls. The highest number of votes Mr. Bland was able to poll was 163 in favor of his demand for the previous question on the motion to close debate. Of these 145 were Democrats, 9 Populists and 9 Republicans. Mr. Page (R. I.) and Mr. Ryan (N. Y.) refused to join the filibuster, but voted against the motion. The Republicans who voted with Mr. Bland are as follows: Bowers (Cal.), Broderick, Doolittle, Funston, Marshal, Hermann, Post and Sweet. Mr. Bland abandoned any further attempt to secure a quorum, and the house passed a resolution instructing the sergeant-at-arms to telegraph for absentees.

Washington, Feb. 19.—The Democratic members of the senate committe on finance have decided that they will not be able to report the tariff bill to the full committee on Tuesday next, as they had announced they would be, and one of the members of the subcommitte which has had the bill under consideration said to-day that he would not attempt to say when the bill could be reported. "I shall be very well satisfied," he said, "if the bill is in shape to be reported by the beginning of next week." The reason for the postponement is discovered in the fact that the work of satisfying Democratic senators has been found a very difficult one, and the construction of a bill that is sure to be accepted by them, the undertaking requiring many changes of purpose and alterations of the figures as first made. When the subcommittee began their work they had before them the draft of a bill upon which it was believed it would be an easy matter to secure agreement, but this bill has been changed in some respects several times and has become so worn from handling and erasures that it has become necessary to destroy the original copy and replace it with a new one. There is still much demand for concessions on the part of senators on minor items, and many of the most important features in the bill are unacted upon. Sugar is included in this list and it looks as if its fate would be about the last question to be determined by the subcommittee.

The fight over the silver seigniorage bill was resumed in the house to-day, and Mr. Bland is confident that there will be a quorum on hand to order the previous question to-morrow. Once the necessary quorum is obtained, and that is only a question of time, as the opponents of the measure have practically abandoned hope of defeating the bill, it will be brought to a vote if need be by a special order from the committee on rules, the speaker having promised a special rule if the emergency demands it.

Minor matters occupied the attention of the senate to-day. Senators Daniel, Caffery and White of California have notice of speeches on the Hawaiian resolution for this week, and it is probable that other senators will speak upon the subject before next Saturday.

The French Tariff.

Paris, Feb. 19.—In the chamber of deputies, after a strong attack upon the policy of protection, in which M. Naquet took the lead, urgency was voted and the chamber proceeded with the discussion of the clauses of the bill introduced with the view of increasing the duty on corn. A long and excited debate followed on the proposal of M. Jerres to make the sale of imported wheat a state monopoly, with a view of avoiding control of markets by speculators. The debate was finally adjourned.

Convicted Rioters.

Pitsburg, Pa., Feb. 19.—The jury in the case of the fifty-eight coal miners charged with rioting in the Mansfield region, returned a sealed verdict this morning finding thirty-seven guilty and twenty-one innocent. The latter were discharged and the thirty-seven convicted were remanded to jail for sentence.

YOUNG WOMAN WRONGED

SENSATIONAL STORY OF A YOUNG WOMAN IN IOWA.

She Says That She Was Betrayed by a Friend, Kept a Prisoner for Three Weeks, and When Her Child Was Born It Was Murdered.

Des Moines, Feb. 19.—Miss Ollie Newman, a brunette from Swan, commenced a suit in the district court against Dr. D. C. Gates, Dr. C. V. Smith, William Weston, Justice of the Peace Edmund Buckley and Mrs. Henrietta Shook for $20,000.

Miss Newman's petition, which was drawn by her attorney, A. A. Haskins, reads like the climax of a novel, and in it several indictable crimes are alleged. Miss Newman wants the $20,000 for alleged personal injuries received at the hands of the defendants. She says that she was led astray, that an operation was performed to hide the scandal, that her child was killed, and that her health was ruined.

Miss Newman has lived all her life at Swan, a small town in Marion county. She is a pretty girl and has a cultivated soprano voice. Dr. D. C. Gates is a man of thirty-six and for some time has been an evangelist in the Christian church. Miss Newman is a member of the same church. Gates' mother is Mrs. Henrietta Shook. They live in Swan, and are wealthy. Gates is an accomplished man and has a fine tenor voice. He has been the leader in the church choir and has many warm friends all over the state. Last spring the two became intimately acquainted, although they had been friends for years. Miss Newman says that Dr. Gates made love to her and escorted her home from church sociables and revivals, and that under a premise of marriage he led her astray April 30, 1893. Then, according to Miss Newman's petition, the trouble commenced. Miss Newman states that efforts were made to hide the scandal. She says Dr. Gates refused to marry her, and to avoid the scandal and disruption of the two families she listened to the pleadings of the defendant to come to Des Moines and see if it was too late to save the exposure. She says Mrs. Dr. C. V. Smith, who had an office at East Sixth and Locust streets, is the niece of Mrs. Shook and was a party in the alleged conspiracy. She says that at last she said she would come to Des Moines, and that she was told that she would be met at the train or the Goldstone hotel by a lady who would take care of her.

On the night of Sept. 21, 1893, she says she came to Des Moines on the accommodation train of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. But she says that no lady met her at the Goldstone. She says that Justice of the Peace Buckley met her and took her to Mrs. Smith's in a closed carriage. In her petition she alleges that Justice Buckley, who is a gray-haired man, and who has lived all his life at Swan, walked from Swan to Ford, and then took another train to Des Moines to meet her, and that this was done to avoid suspicion. Justice Buckley is related to Dr. Gates. She charges that she was taken to Mrs. Smith's house, kept a prisoner for three weeks, and that when her child was born it was killed.

New Silver Scheme.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Just before the house adjourned Saturday Representative Hicks of Pennsylvania introduced a bill which he believes will be an excellent plan for the settlement of the silver question. The bill is in a crude shape at present and was drafted by John Haner of Philadelphia. The bill is entitled "a bill for the encouragement of the mining of silver in the United States and the formation of silver guarantee banks." It provides in brief that any person may deposit with the government $50,000 worth of silver bullion, and by depositing with it 25 per cent of the value of the bullion in interest bearing government bonds as a guarantee against any depreciation of the silver, he may receive $50,000 in legal tender notes redeemable in coin.

For Lake Craft.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—A stupendous canal project, which, if successful, will entirely revolutionize the traffic of the great lakes, is said to be in contemplation. The proposed canal is designed to immensely facilitate the passage of vessels from Chicago, Milwaukee, and other Northwestern points to the East, and to render entirely unnecessary the present long route through the straits of Mackinaw, Lake Huron, St. Clair river and lake, and thence down the Detroit river to Lake Erie. The plan now said to be under consideration is to construct a canal directly across Michigan from the eastern shore of Lake Michigan to either Detroit or Toledo.

The Southern Pacific Robbery.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 19.—It is rumored that United States Marshal Gard and Miles T. Bolles arrested two well known men near Calabasas in connection with the Roscoe train robbery, and are on their way to the city with them. The reason given for their non-appearance is that they are afraid the railroad men will take the men from them by force and do violence to them. The coroner's jury found that the dead men, Harry Daly and Fireman Arthur Masters, came to their death by a wreck caused by two men unknown to the jury with intent to rob. The testimony showed that both men were crushed to death, as no gunshot wounds were visible.

Had Some Use for Small Pox.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Dr. J. W. Lake, who was taken to Boston last night charged with forgery, created a mild sensation by demanding to be taken to the pest house. The physicians who examined Lake said that he had applied an irritating oil to his face and hands to give the appearance of small pox. It was thought by the police that he had planned an escape from the pest house.

Passed Away.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19.—Mark H. Frish is dead.

Nature's Own Paint Mines.

Chadron, Neb., Feb. 19.—Much excitement was created here over the discovery of a large deposit of mineral paint close to the city. There are four distinct colors and where the rock crops out it is fifteen feet thick. By combining the colors twenty-eight shades can be produced.

Fatal Collision at Sea.

London, Feb. 19.—The steamers Cadoxtor and Clythia, both British, have been in collision in Barry Roads. The Clythia sank and six of her crew were drowned.

Denounced the Lords.

London, Feb. 19.—Four thousand persons assembled in the Trafalgar square to-day in answer to an appeal for a manifestation against the house of lords for destroying the clauses in the parish council bill which called for a reforming of the London vestries. The meeting, with much show of feeling, adopted resolutions condemning the house of lords for its action in this matter. The speakers who were vociferously cheered time and again in the course of their remarks, were Joseph Arch, Dr. Charles L. D. Tanner, the Irish Nationalist; Dababhai Naoroji, the well known Bombay merchant, and five other members of the house of commons. The meeting adopted resolutions declaring the house of lords to be a mischievous and useless institution, and demanding that it should be abolished forthwith.

Pope Leo Says Mass.

Rome, Feb. 19.—The closing ceremony in connection with Pope Leo XIII.'s jubilee year took place yesterday and consisted of a mass celebrated by him in St. Peter's, followed by the "Te Deum." The details of this impressive ceremony were arranged by the executive committee of the jubilee fetes. Sixty thousand tickets were given out for this final celebration, and it is estimated that 50,000 people were present. The mass was celebrated at the papal altar. Leo was borne into the basilica in the sedia gestatoria at 9:40 o'clock. He was preceded by a cortege of cardinals and bishops. His appearance was followed by the enthusiastic cheering of the immense multitude.

Behind the Bars.

St. Paul, Feb. 19.—The first Ramsey county patient released from the state asylum for the insane at Rochester under the conditions of the state insanity law, recently declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, arrived in St. Paul yesterday morning. He was arrested at the union depot immediately upon his arrival in St. Paul and taken to the central station, where he gave his name as James Marsh. He was examined at the station by Dr. Ancker, city physician, who considered him of unsound mind and ordered that he be confined in the county jail pending an examination in regard to his mental condition by the probate court. The orders of the city physician were complied with, and Marsh was locked up in a padded cell in the county jail.

The Cities' License Bill.

Dubuque, Iowa, Feb. 19.—Mayor Dougherty and a committee of the leading citizens of Dubuque have returned from Des Moines, where they called on Gov. Jackson. He told them he favored any amendment to the prohibitory law upon which the larger cities of the state could agree. He suggested that their representatives draft a bill. The suggestion will be acted upon and the bill will be drafted by Judge Powers of Dubuque, chairman of a committee representing several cities. Its central provisions will be that in localities (county, city or township, as may hereafter be decided upon) which vote to permit the saloon, the license shall not be less than $500 a year.

Shot While Hunting Deer.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 19.—A special from Moscow, Idaho, gives an account of the accidental death of Edward Oylear, son of Capt. J. C. Oylear, while out hunting with a hired man, Ernest Cooper, on the banks of the North Clearwater river, twenty-five miles east of Cameron. A deer jumped up a short distance ahead of them and Cooper leveled his gun to shoot. Oylear was slightly in advance, and the deer ran in such a way that as Cooper aimed Oylear came in range and the bullet penetrated the back of his head. The deceased was twenty-eight years old, and had only been married a few days.

For Killing Policemen.

Dubuque, Iowa, Feb. 19.—The Haley jury returned a verdict in a short time of murder in the first degree and fixed the penalty at life imprisonment. Leonard W. Haley, together with Hugh Robbard and James Kent, were indicted for the murder on April 14 last of Policemen Fritz and Talcott, who found them in a Milwaukee car in the railroad yards in this city and attempted to arrest them for highway robbery. Robbard was tried at the last term of court and found guilty and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. Kent succeeded in escaping arrest and is still at large.

Family Drowned.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 19.—T. F. Farnell, a sheep man of Fobry county, arrived here today and brought news of the drowning of a ranchman named Frank Randall, together with his wife and three children, in the Rio Grande river at a point near Prisidio, San Vincento, Mex. The river is easily forded at that place, but in some manner the wagon in which Randall and his family were crossing was upset, and before any of the occupants could get from under the box bed they were drowned.

Four Men Stabbed.

Leon, Mex., Feb. 19.—A grand cocking main was being given at the City of Lazos, near here, last night, when a dispute arose between the owners of two birds pitted against each other. Both men drew knives and attacked each other. Two friends of the men took up the dispute and the fight became general, resulting in four men being stabbed to death and several others seriously wounded. The riot was finally quelled by the police, who made many arrests.

Trials of an Editor.

Devils Lake, N. D., Feb. 19.—Merchant Chamberlin and Editor Blackley, of the Devils Lake News, had a three-round contest without gloves, resulting in a draw. Spectators were barred excepting the referee. The trouble arose over an article in this week's issue of the News.

Trains Collide.

Des Moines, Feb. 19.—In a collision between a freight train and a passenger engine on the Rock Island road near Valley Junction, both engines and ten freight cars were demolished and several trainmen painfully injured.

School Teacher Dead.

Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 19.—Mrs. Elizabeth E. Sherwin, principal of the Lincoln school, died of peritonitis.

Populist Funds.

Miller, S. D., Feb. 19.—The funds for the Populist campaign are to be met by sowing 1,000 acres of wheat.

Chosen President.

The Knights of Labor.

Philadelphia, Feb. 19.—If a bombshell had been exploded in the midst of their camp, local Knights of Labor could not have been more surprised than they were when John W. Hayes, general secretary-treasurer of the order, issued the following notice: "To the Order Wherever Found—Greetings: Brothers T. V. Powderly, past general master workman; A. W. Wright and John Devlin, of the late general executive board, have entered suit against the order of the Knights of Labor for balances of salary which they claim are due them. This notice is published to prevent any credence being given to unreliable statements which may be made in the public press. If by decree of court it is learned that the order is indebted in any way to these claimants the order is, and will be, fully able to meet any just claims."

The Dalrymple Bonds.

Bayfield, Wis., Feb. 19.—The Dalrymple bonds for the Bayfield Harbor & Great Western railroad bid fair to be a bone of contention at the coming election. At the February meeting of the town board President Dalrymple put in a request for an extension for the earning of the $30,000 bonds which have been voted by the town and will become his upon the completion of a certain amount of the road. The board favored the renewal in case the road would guarantee the completion of the number of miles called for within a specified time. Mr. Dalrymple promptly rejected the offer. There will be two parties at the spring election on this question.

Splendid Showing for Vermillion.

Huron, S. D., Feb. 19.—Referring to what is being accomplished at the state university at Vermillion, Dr. Joseph Mauck, president of the institution, here a few days since spoke in high praise. Obstacles, incident to the fire which destroyed part of the building, apparatus, etc., a few months since, are being rapidly overcome and work in all departments is progressing nicely. The faculty is united and the students are loyal, patriotic and apparently satisfied, and the quality of instruction is as good as before the disaster. The winter attendance is even better than that of last year.

An Awful Fate.

Keokuk, Iowa, Feb. 19.—John Sullivan met a horrible death on the farm of John Nelson near Warsaw, Ill., yesterday. He slipped and fell against a portable saw, his head striking first. The saw ran into the skull, barely reaching the brain. In an effort to free himself Sullivan fell a second time, the saw striking the right shoulder, running down the back, tearing the ribs from the backbone and cutting into the body. Sullivan was taken to Canton, Mo., where surgeons removed part of the skull and amputated the right arm at the shoulder. The man died in a few hours. Sullivan formerly lived at Petersboro, Ind.

The French Tariff.

Paris, Feb. 19.—In the chamber of deputies, after a strong attack upon the policy of protection, in which M. Naquet took the lead, urgency was voted and the chamber proceeded with the discussion of the clauses of the bill introduced with the view of increasing the duty on corn. A long and excited debate followed on the proposal of M. Jerres to make the sale of imported wheat a state monopoly, with a view of avoiding control of markets by speculators. The debate was finally adjourned.

Shot From the Brush.

Cottonwood, Idaho, Feb. 19.—George Cooper, a prominent young lumberman, was assassinated while sleigh riding with a young lady. The young couple were some distance from town and were passing a clump of thick brush along the side of the road, when some one concealed in the brush fired upon them with a rifle. Cooper was shot through the body and died in a short time. The assassin is supposed to be a rival of Cooper's for the young lady's hand. There is intense excitement at Cottonwood and a posse is in search of the assassin.

Sioux City Should Be Glad.

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 19.—At receiver's sale the equity in the Sioux City Engine works was sold to a local syndicate for $20,000. The industry was one of those involved in the failure of the Union Loan and Trust company last April. The Credit and Commutation company, the organization of the trust company's creditors, opposed the sale. The bonds against the plant are largely owned by the local syndicate. It is announced that 200 men will be put at work within a month.

County Teachers to Meet.

Minneapolis, Feb. 19.—Assistant County Superintendent of Schools H. M. Wilcox has arranged the programme for the meeting of the Hennepin county teachers to be held next Saturday in Caton's college. Rev. F. O. Holman, of Hennepin Avenue M. E. church, will deliver the principal address, "Socrates." Other papers will be presented by R. L. Glasby, H. I. Harter, Miss Lillian Buss and Mrs. S. E. Power.

New Directors to Meet.

Minneapolis, Feb. 19.—The new board of directors of the American Masonic Accident association will meet next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at which time the board will reorganize for the coming year. At this meeting the question of re-electing Trubey to the position of secretary will probably be brought out and is likely to cause considerable debate.

Revoked His Certificate.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Feb. 19.—S. L. Wait, superintendent of schools of Lyon county, has revoked the certificate of Norton, the teacher of the Amert school who recently chastised a pupil severely, but was acquitted before two justices of the peace. Norton was given an opportunity to retire from his position as teacher, but refused.

Boys Must Not Smoke.

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 19.—The legislature has passed the bill prohibiting the sale of tobacco in any form to minors under sixteen years of age. The bill passed the senate at the early morning session just as it passed the house.

Mining Suit.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Attachment proceedings have been commenced here by the Davis Mining Company of Negaunee against the Weston Furnace Company of Manistique, Mich. The mining company claims that the furnace company is indebted to it in the sum of $11,484.

Bill Nye Ill.

New York, Feb. 19.—Bill Nye, reported dying, is lying ill at the Hotel Imperial, Niagara Falls, and his manager has canceled all his engagements for next week.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Five Hundred and Fifty eight ($558.00) Dollars, which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Peter E. Englund and Sidsel Engh his wife mortgagors, to Security Trust Co. mortgagee, bearing date the 11th day of December 1892 and with a power of sale herein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 31st day of December 1892 at 4 o'clock P. m., in Book 59 of mortgages, on page 261 which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Security Trust Co. mortgagee, to Joseph P. M[illegible] by written assignment dated the 3rd day of July 1893, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds on the 5th day of July 1893, at 8:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 64 on page 459, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore Notice is Hereby Given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: the north west quarter of Section Twenty three in township one hundred and fifty two of range forty-two in Polk County and State of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Crookston in said County and State on the 17th day of March 1894, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes if any, on said premises and Twenty five dollars Attorney's fee, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

The protracted meetings now being held at the Lutheran Church are proving to be a great success, and are meeting with the hearty co-operation of all church workers. Last night the services were conducted by President Elder Knutson of St Paul, and a number of testimonies were secured. Let the good work go on.

RUSSIAN THISTLE.

Bills have been introduced in Congress asking for government aid to destroy this thistle. The plant abounds in the two Dakotas and Minnesota in great quantities. Gov. Shortridge, of North Dakota, has been in Washington for several days, and when the subject came up before the committee on agriculture last Saturday he said in regard to the matter:

"I am a practical farmer and not committed to either side of Mason and Dixon's line, but believe in doing the greatest good to the greatest number I have been a farmer for 10 years in the greatest wheat growing district in the world, and am thoroughly acquainted with the entire wheat growing region of the union, but in no locality have I ever seen such a pest as this thistle. It has no leaves, there fore it cannot be burned, and wherever it appears it is absolute destruction for farming. In some sections of my state farmers have been compelled to abandon their lands on account of it.—Crookston Times.

Much has been said in these columns from time to time of the advantages which the farmers in the northern part of the state would derive from feeding hogs with wheat screenings or low grade wheat, or even wheat of higher grades when the prices were very low, or barley. They would in this way get a much better price for their wheat than if sold to the elevators at present low price. Prof. Thomas Shaw in a recent letter to this paper advised against raising wheat to feed hogs. A correspondent noticing this, says: "We think Prof. Shaw has overlooked a most important point when he talks against the use of wheat on the ground of cost. The patent flour should be taken out of the wheat and the balance fed to stock, then his objection to cost would be done away with. The remainder is fully as valuable for feeding as to leave the patent flour in the wheat and feed that to stock. It should be our duty to encourage the use of low grade flour and offal rather than corn, for it is a lack of home demand for all below a patent flour that has brought wheat to its present low level, and shuts down our many large flour mills that could today all be running full capacity if they had only to look for a market for patent flour." In a communication in another column the same correspondent enlarges upon his subject. He points out, too, a variety of ways in which both farmers and city people can profitably use the lower grades of flour and mill feed, and thus enlarge the consumption of wheat.—Pioneer Press.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of [illegible] four hundred and sixty-six dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Joseph Jean and [illegible] Jean his wife, mortgagors to Security Trust Company of Nashua N. H., mortgagee, bearing date the 7th day of July 1890, and with a power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 10th day of July 1890 at 4:2? o'clock p. m. in book 30 of mortgages, on page [illegible]. Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Security Trust Company of Nashua N. H. mortgagee, to E. P. Goodsell by written assignment dated the 2nd day of April [illegible] and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on the 11th day of May 1892 at 8.30 o'clock a. m. in book 6? of [illegible] page [illegible], and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage viz:

The west half of the west half, of Section two in Township one hundred and fifty, of Range forty two, in Polk county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county and state, on the 1st day of March 1894 at 10 o'clock a. m., of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes if any, on said premises and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three hundred and thirty-eight dollar, which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Herman Lindner, an unmarried man, mortgagor, to Security Trust Company, mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of August 1892 and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 8th day August 1892, at [illegible] o'clock a. m. in Book 59 of mortgages on page 95 and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The north-east quarter of Section seven, in Township one hundred and fifty, of Range forty-four, in Polk county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston in said county and state on the 24th day of March 1894 at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest and taxes if any on said premises and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated January 26th A. D. 1894.

Security Trust Co., mortgagee.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Seven hundred and thirty-three dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Maud L. [illegible] and Fred [illegible] her husband, mortgagors to Dakota Investment Company mortgagee, bearing date the 28th day of June 1888 and with a power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 5th day of July 1888, at 11 o'clock a. m. in book 33 of mortgages on page 23, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Lots two and three of Block four of the original townsite of Red Lake Falls in Polk county and state of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county, at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county and state on the [illegible] day of March 1894 at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest and the taxes, if any on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated [illegible] A. D. 1894.

FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS.

If you want work that is pleasant and profitable send us your address immediately. We teach men and women how to earn from $5.00 per day to $3,000 per year without having had previous experience, and furnish the employment at which they can make that amount. Nothing difficult to learn or that requires much time. The work is easy, healthy, and honorable, and can be done during daytime or evenings, right in your own locality, wherever you live. The result of a few hours' work often equals a week's wages. We have taught thousands of both sexes and all ages, and many have laid foundations that will surely bring them riches. Some of the smartest men in this country owe their success in life to the start given them while in our employ years ago. You, reader, may do as well; try it. You cannot fail. No capital necessary. We fit you out with something that is new, solid, and sure. A book brimful of advice is free to all. Help yourself by writing for it to-day—not to-morrow. Delays are costly.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of three hundred and twenty-five dollars ($225.00) which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Antoine [illegible] an unmarried man to Security Trust Company bearing date the 29th day of January A. D. 1890 and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 5th day of February A. D. 1890 at 3:10 o'clock p. m. in book 42 of mortgages, on Page 221 and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The south half of the south-east quarter of Section 20 in Township one hundred and forty nine of Range forty six in Polk county and state of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county and state, on the 31st day of March A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt, and interest, and taxes, if any, on said premises and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Delinquent Tax List

OF

POLK COUNTY, MINN.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss. DISTRICT COURT,
County of Polk. } 14th Judicial District.

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA, to all Persons, Companies or Corporations, who have or claim any Estate, Right, Title or Interest in, Claim to, or Lien upon any of the Several Pieces or Parcels of Land in the List Hereto Attached, Described:

The list of taxes and penalties on real property for the county of Polk, remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1894, has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court, of the County of Polk, of which that hereto attached is a copy.

THEREFORE, You, and each of you, are required to file in the office of said Clerk, on or before the 29th day of March, A. D. 1894, your answer, in writing, setting forth any objections or defense you may have to the taxes and penalties, or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to, or on which you have or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim or lien.

And in default thereof, judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land, for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interest and cost.

NILS MOES,
Clerk of the District Court in said County of Polk.

Explanation to the Tax List of 1892.

Wherever the notation "Ex. Int. R. R. Co." appears as a part of any description of land in the following list it means that the title of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company or its trustees or mortgagees is not in any wise to be impaired or affected by the tax judgment to be entered in these proceedings and that only the interest of the purchaser from said company should be effected by said tax judgment or sold thereunder.

[In the following list, "a" represents acres; "e" east; "n" north; "s" south; "w" west; "ne" northeast; "nw" northwest; "se" southeast; "sw" southwest; "bl" or "blk" block; "r" or "R" range; "&" and; "tp" or "twp" township; "ft" feet; "st" street; "cor" corner; "frl" fractional; "pt" part; "$" dollars; "do" or " means a repetition of the word or words in the line above on which it occurs. The spaces between figures in columns of figures represent the decimal point between dollars and cents, and all figures that fall below any dollar mark, as above represented, are to be read in the same manner as though the dollar mark was there.]

DOGS FOR USE IN WAR

HOW THEY ARE TRAINED IN A LITTLE TOWN IN AUSTRIA.

The Intelligence They Display Is Simply Marvelous—How They Hunt Out and Succor the Wounded and Lost—Scenting an Enemy When Five Miles Away.

Some 80 miles west of Vienna the little market town of Wels nestles in the foothills of the Austrian Alps, which here rise in bold cliffs from the banks of the Traun.

The forests of the neighborhood are too open to harbor much game, but a stranger stopping at the summer hotel of the little town might easily be led to believe that the citizens must be the most indefatigable hunters of the Austro-Hungarian empire. From morning till night, and sometimes till long after dark, he may hear the echo of shots and the barking and howling of dogs approaching the town or dying away in the distant hills, and occasionally answered from far and near, as if all the sportsmen of the northern Alps had met in convention.

The plan of training dogs for military purposes was first adopted by the French garrisons in Algiers, but has since been tried with great success in Prussia, Italy and especially in Austria, where four footed messengers have for many years been taught to carry letters to the snow bound villages of the Alpine highlands. The shaggy collies used for that purpose make the best war dogs and can be trained to race in a bee line to the next military post and announce their arrival by a peculiar bark that is at once recognized and answered by the shout of a sentry.

They will also range a long chain of hills in quest of wounded soldiers, and either dash back to report their discoveries or stand guard at the side of the cripple till an ambulance party comes near enough to be signaled by a long drawn howl.

Trainers send out three or four of their shaggy pupils at once and ascertain their proficiency by all sorts of ingenious tests. Soldiers instructed to act the part of helpless cripples will hide in thickets or caverns and keep still till the dog tugs at their sleeves, when they will sit up and reward his sagacity with a piece of sausage.

They then try to rise, but pretend to be too weak to walk or even to shoot, and ask the dog to call for assistance. If help is near, Collie will set up a loud howl, repeated at shorter and shorter intervals, till the signal is answered from the valley below. If his appeals should remain unheeded, he will mount the next rock and look about as if to impress the lay of the land on his mind, and then dash off to summon help from headquarters.

Should two cripples intimate their need of aid at the same time, Collie will guide the rescuing party to the hiding place of the one farthest away, and help them to pick up or somehow assist the the other man on their way home.

"Messenger dogs carry letters in a small bag wrapped around their collar and will permit only the proper officials to touch that collar. A noncommissioned officer, displaying the insignia of his rank, may venture to remove the bag, but the dog will follow him and see to it that he gets him an answer.

Private soldiers are "stood off" with a menacing growl. Persons wearing the uniform of the enemy cannot stop the messenger with anything but an extremely well aimed shot. Dogs racing along the battle front will dodge bullets by running zigzag and develop a marvelous talent for taking advantage of every cover, running through the highest grass or along the safe side of rocks and fallen trees.

Picket post dogs are selected from a different breed. The half shepherd, half wolf dogs that carry letters and hunt up cripples are not entirely devoid of scent and can find their way back home in a manner not wholly explicable on the theory of keen eyesight. But for efficiency in the rôle of sentries they yield the palm to a species of deerhounds that do their best work after dark.

On picket duty a well trained sentinel of that breed will scent the approach of a troop of cavalry before a man, with his ear on the ground, can hear the trampling of the horses. The dog sentry will announce his discovery in a more discreet way than the Scotch widow who screamed through the citadel of Lucknow when her "inner ear" heard the approaching bagpipe of the McGregors. Phylax on scenting danger will step up close to his uniformed companion, and after a pause of silence and keen attention will announce his suspicion by low growls, getting more frequent rather than louder, as the cause for alarm becomes more unmistakable.

The best dogs of that breed have "challenged" cavalry from a distance of three to five miles, according to the direction of the wind; and infantry from nearly two miles. They can be trained to announce the approach of a known friend in a quite different way—viz, by leaping to and fro or crouching down and jumping up by turns, but without the warning growl of the danger signal.—F. L. Oswald in Youth's Companion.

The Goliath of Big Basin.

In Big Basin, Santa Cruz county, Cal., there are thousands of giant redwoods that will measure from 10 to 23 feet in diameter. But the Titan of them all is a giant known far and near as "the Goliath of Big Basin." This monstrous vegetable growth is 23 feet in diameter at the ground and is perfectly solid, a fact noted as a rarity in these colossi of the forest. Goliath is a fraction over 200 feet in height, the lower 100 feet of the trunk being free from branches or unsightly excrescences. Experienced woodmen declare that the tree would weigh more than 100,000 tons and that it would "cut" 1,500,000 feet of clear board measure lumber, besides 100 cords of wood that could be gotten out of the limbs and waste.—St. Louis Republic.

TRIED TO BREAK RECORDS.

A Toboggan Slide That Will Likely Prove Fatal to Three.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—A special to The Sun from Colorado Springs, Colo., says: Richard Woods, a Manitowoc driver, and two other men, tried to break all previous records of speed in descending Pikes' Peak, on a contrivance called a toboggan by the railroad men. This consists of a flat board nailed over a groove which fits closely on the rack rail of the cog road. Below 50 feet there is a sharp turn at the top of Son-of-a-Gun hill, the steepest point in the whole road. Here the brake must have become useless, for the toboggan with its human freight, shot down the incline beyond all control. At the first slight turn the frail board jumped from the rails, leaping into the air for a fearful distance and throwing the three men away out over the mountain side. None of the men struck the earth within 80 feet of the track, and one of them, Wood, landed fully 75 feet away.

The surface there is entirely rough, broken rock, with jagged edges. The men struck on this, being terribly cut and bruised. All three may die.

Even With the Lightning Rod Men.

A gang of lightning rod sharks made an attempt to rod a farmer's house against his will Saturday, but got the worst of the bargain. The farmer is an old soldier, living 10 miles south of this city, named John Snyder. On Thursday one man called and inquired who the owner was, got a drink of water and departed. The next day another called and proposed to make the farmer a present of 100 feet of rod, charging him 75 cents a foot for 10 feet and charging him extra for the necessary points, insisting that the farmer sign a contract for the balance. This he refused to do, and the fellow left. Saturday two more men drove up to his place, threw out rods and tools and proceeded to put up the rods. The farmer objected, but they claimed to have an order to do the work and laughed him to scorn. Snyder got his gun, and covering the man in the wagon, who had drawn a revolver, he ordered him to clear out or he would let daylight through him. The fellow drove off at a lively rate, leaving his pal at the mercy of the farmer, who served him in like manner, and now the farmer has 40 feet of lightning rods to sell.—Warsaw (Ills.) Cor. St. Louis Republic.

Love For the Zigzag.

The straight line is an abomination to the Chinese. They endeavor to avoid it in their streets and buildings and have banished it completely where country field paths are concerned. They will always substitute a curve whenever possible, or they will torture it into a zigzag.

In districts not devastated by the Tai Pings nor subject to the influence of the foreigner, the houses and temples are characterized by curved, often peaked, roofs, ornamented with fantastic modifications of the "myriad stroke pattern." The inhabitants of such regions are soon found to have a mental world to correspond. The straight line is scouted. They think in curves and zigzags. To the Chinese mind the straight line is suggestive of death and demons. It belongs not to the heaven above nor to the earth beneath. In a true horizon line are seen the "undulations of the dragon." Therefore, argue the Chinese, the straight line pertains to hades.—Contemporary Review.

Hope Without Faith.

"Oh, doctor, I have sent for you, certainly; still I must confess I have not the slightest faith in modern medical science."

"Oh, that doesn't matter in the least. You see, a mule has no faith in the veterinary surgeon, and yet he cures him all the same."—Tagliche Rundschau.

Mrs. Southworth's Home.

Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, who is now nearly 74 years old, loves Washington, her home, better than any place on earth. One would hardly believe that her cottage contained 14 rooms, all endeared to her by long and eventful associations, but best of all she loves her study, where she can watch the grand old Potomac with its high banks and picturesque, changing views. She seldom writes now, but instead reads, and her favorite books are the lives of Christ, and the comparisons she makes of the various histories of his life. Prospect cottage remains unchanged, for Mrs. Southworth, save for the needed repairs from year to year, keeps intact the features of her old home. Recently one of the grand old trees near the veranda was blown down, and this and the destruction of a natural flower garden on the steep hillside have caused Mrs. Southworth to mourn as for some old friends.—Washington Correspondent.

Bullet Waves.

One of the interesting results of the recent experiments in England in photographing flying bullets has been to show that the disturbance in the air travels faster than the bullet itself.

The photographs exhibit air waves in advance of the bullets, even when the latter are moving faster than the velocity of sound.

In one case where the bullet was moving considerably faster than sound travels in the air it was preceded by an atmospheric disturbance which, at the moment the photograph was taken, was half an inch in advance of the point of the bullet. Even when the bullets were traveling four times as fast as sound the atmospheric disturbance kept ahead of them.—Youth's Companion.

A Reminder of Cold Weather.

The first installment of children's sleds and possibly the only one to be made this season by the Maine Manufacturing company at Fairfield is now being decorated and made ready for the market. They say that last year they made about 47,000 of these sleds, and this year the output will be less than 6,000.—Bangor Commercial.

GREELEY AND RAYMOND.

A Philosophical Dissertation on the Merits of the Two Great Editors.

There is not a paper in all this country that possesses the individuality that characterized the New York Tribune when Horace Greeley was its editor or The Times when edited by Henry J. Raymond.—Kansas Commoner.

The day of great newspapers, edited by great editors, such as Horace Greeley and Henry J. Raymond, has passed away.—Chicago Tribune.

We had the pleasure of knowing both Greeley and Raymond. We were more intimate with the first named of these contemporary editors than with the other. They were able, sincere, energetic, public spirited Americans. Neither of them was a cherub. Mr. Greeley, good man! said "damn" more than once as we regret to remember, and when he called Raymond "the little villain" that cool headed man retorted in language which many people have forgotten. The two did not get along very well together when one was editor of The Tribune and the other among his assistants, nor afterward when they were editors of rival papers, though both were of the same party. Neither of them was an "ideal editor," or a very deep thinker, or a first class statesman or a notable scholar.

Greeley was a stronger and more stirring writer than Raymond, but Raymond was a far more skillful editor than Greeley. Greeley was more fervent in mind than Raymond; Raymond was more judicious and nimble than Greeley. Raymond, when he was a member of the legislature, and the speaker of the assembly, and the lieutenant governor of the state, and a member of congress, and a delegate to state or national conventions, gave evidence that he was greatly more ingenious in politics than Greeley, who, indeed, during the brief period of his service in congress, did not win distinction. Raymond always kept up a close intimacy with those astute political managers, Thurlow Weed and William H. Seward, while Greeley was unable to stay long in the "political firm of Seward, Weed & Greeley," in which, as he said when he left the concern, he had been a "junior partner."

Greeley was more of a philosopher than Raymond, who, in turn, was more of a man of affairs than Greeley. Greeley was often compared with Benjamin Franklin, though he did not possess Franklin's scientific quality; Raymond might be compared, in many respects, with Franklin Pierce, though he was not of Pierce's politics. Greeley had certain eccentricities of manner and action; Raymond was always regarded as a very level headed man. Both of them belonged to the antislavery school in politics; but Greeley's fervor in the cause far surpassed Raymond's. Greeley had in his earlier years been a champion of "social reforms" which were bitterly denounced by Raymond, who, however, in the latter years of his life, began to look with favor upon certain theories of socialism. Greeley was negligent in his dress; Raymond was natty. Both Greeley and Raymond were founders of New York daily papers which still exist, but neither of which is now characterized by the traits of its founder.

We agree with The Kansas Commoner that none of the New York papers now possesses the individuality of Greeley's Tribune or Raymond's Times, and no one of them can possess it, for both of these memorable individuals long ago departed for "the undiscovered country from whose bourn no traveler returns" after it had been their lot "to grunt and sweat under a weary life," but that is not a reason why we should despair of the American press. We may yet have editors not unworthy to be compared with the greatest and best we have ever had.

A true man was Horace Greeley, strong, earnest and good—honored be his memory! An able man was Henry Jarvis Raymond—clear headed, quick witted, reasonable, temperate, genial and highly accomplished—let his name shine in the editorial galaxy!—New York Sun.

Maria Pettini.

Italian critics think that they have among them a young singer who is to create a great sensation. Her name is Maria Pettini, and her only instructor has been her mother, who has been a singer of some distinction. Recently the Roman Academy of St. Cecilia offered a diploma of merit, and Signorina Pettini entered the competition. The audience before whom she sang was the most critical one Rome could show, but her hearers were so delighted that, contrary to their usual custom, they applauded loudly. The diploma was awarded to her without one dissenting voice.—Rome Correspondent.

Mrs. Gage's Hope.

Mrs. Matilda Joslyn Gage, who is the representative of the Woman Suffrage party for the state of New York, is an older worker in the cause than Susan B. Anthony. She told the New York City league the other evening that Miss Anthony was not favorably impressed with the idea of woman suffrage at first. Mrs. Gage bases a hope for general interest in the work upon this fact, for she says, "If Susan could change so decidedly, I don't see why other people may not."

Orders For Women.

A curious fact is brought to light by the Manchester Guardian in connection with the reception of the Order of St. Isabella of Portugal by Mme. Carnot. The order is reserved exclusively for women, and in the bestowal of its insignia the acquiescence of the queen as well as of the king of Portugal is required. It is therefore the daughter of the Comte de Paris who has conferred this distinction upon the wife of the president of the French republic. Prussia, Russia, Austria, the German empire and Bavaria all have orders specially reserved for women who distinguish themselves.—London Queen.

PULPIT AND PEW.

There are 1,280,728 negroes who are members of the Methodist church in this country.

It is reported that a new church, called the American Methodist church, is about to be organized by some white and colored ministers in the south.

Bishop Tucker of Uganda ordained seven men to the ministry recently, two of whom are the greatest chiefs in the country and govern great provinces.

The Rev. Charles Houston opened a ball in Wolverine, Mich., recently, with a prayer in which he asked that none might be led away in their hours of amusement.

Sam Jones has been dropped as a member of the North Georgia conference. A pastorate in the conference is worth only $1,000 a year. Sam is making a great deal more than that on the road.

The Rev. Mr. White of Brooklyn, known to fame as the "marrying minister," who never turned away a loving couple, is dead. In his life he made 14,000 people more or less happy, as he claimed that none of those whom he united ever returned to revile him.

Bought Him When a Savage.

"Here is the best investment I ever made in my life," said C. Gentile as he took the extended hand of a stalwart young man with the features of the American Indian and introduced the gentleman as Dr. Carlos Montezuma. "One would not think I bought the doctor for $30. He was but five years of age then. It was in the summer of 1871. I was prospecting in Arizona, taking photographs of Indians and Aztec ruins and gathering curiosities. One day a band of Pimo Indians came into my den with this handsome fellow here, but he was not handsome then. He was painted in glaring colors, with rows of beads around his neck. I took a fancy to him as a genuine live curiosity. The Pimos wanted $30 for him. I tried to beat them down, but they insisted upon their price, and I gave it. The little chap cried for a day or two, thinking I was going to kill him, and he laughs now when he explains that he took me for the devil."

Dr. Montezuma is in the government service and is now on his way from the Colville reservation of Washington to the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., where he will enter upon the duties of school physician. The doctor was partly educated in Chicago in the public schools, where he spent five years, and later took the course in the Chicago Medical college, entering the Indian service of the government after his graduation. He says his life will be dedicated to the service of the Indians, and he will never be perfectly satisfied until the government properly educates the young of his people.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Turkish Priest In the Toils.

In the Turkish village on Midway plaisance there is a muezzin named Drenar Effendi, a priest, very zealous in the performance of his religious duties. Yesterday afternoon he was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct and given a ride in the patrol wagon to Woodlawn station.

The trouble arose from a growing disposition on the part of the Turks to treat the duties of their religion with indifference. When Drenar Effendi called the Turks to prayer yesterday afternoon they did not respond with what seemed to him a proper amount of alacrity, and incensed at their slowness he seized a club and began to beat them over the head. This attracted a large crowd at once, and a guard arrested the priest. By the time he reached the station the Turks began to be very much frightened at the thought of their priest's being locked up like a common criminal in a Christian jail, so a delegation was sent over to Woodlawn to bail him out in time for the sunset service, attendance upon which was secured by moral suasion instead of a club.—Chicago News-Record.

Prince of Detectives.

Vidocq, the great French detective, was born in Arras in 1775. He began life as a baker and early became the terror of his companions by his athletic frame and violent disposition. At the same time he was a notorious thief, and after many disgraceful adventures he enlisted in the army. In 1796 he returned to Paris with some money, which, however, he soon squandered. Next he was sentenced at Lille to eight years' hard labor for forgery, but repeatedly escaped, and in 1808 he became connected with the Paris police as a detective.

His previous career enabled him to render important services, and he was appointed chief of the safety brigade, chiefly composed of reprieved convicts, which purged Paris of the many dangerous classes. In 1818 he received a full pardon, and his connection with this service lasted until about 1828, when he settled at St. Mande as a paper manufacturer. Soon after the revolution of 1830 he became a political detective, but with little success. In 1848 he was again employed under the republican government, but he died penniless in 1857.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Cinderella and Her Slipper.

Yes, I know you are saying to yourself, "That headline would have looked and sounded better had it been 'Cinderella and the Glass Slipper,'" but the writer has been making a critical study of this most interesting nursery story and finds that the famous "glass" slipper properly has no place in it. The "glass" slipper is really the "fur," "cloth" or "felt" slipper, the word "glass" having been substituted through a strange mistranslation of the story. In the original it was written pantoufle en vair, which, being translated, would be "the fur slipper." The translator, however, wrote it as if it had been pantoufle en verre, making the "little cinder girl's" fur foot covering one of glass, which, it must be admitted, would be one quite appropriate to a fairy.—St. Louis Republic.

Street Cars Run by Natural Gas.

The cars are of the ordinary size, but are constructed entirely of natural gas pipes, ranging in size from six inches down. These hollow tubes are neatly carved, so that to the average observer the fact that they are built of such material is not noticed. These pipes are heavily charged with gas, and, with the aid of a boiler and the engines at work beneath the floor it is said a run of 30 miles can be made without refilling the tubes. A speed can be obtained equal to that of cars run by the electric method. It said that one of the latter will cost $6,000 for its construction, while a gas car can be made for $2,000. Either artificial or natural gas can be used as the propelling power. It is further asserted by its inventor that to operate it a day of 12 hours will cost but $1.14, while the expense of running an electric car for the same period will be $6.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

The Stupid Husband of a Noted Singer.

Catalani's husband, a handsome Frenchman, was even more unintellectual than his wife—he was stupid. Once, having found the pitch of the piano too high, she said after the rehearsal to her husband: "The piano is too high. Will you see that it is made lower before the concert?"

When the evening came, Catalani was annoyed to find that the piano had not been altered. Her husband sent for the carpenter, who declared that he had sawed off two inches from each leg, as he had been ordered to do. "Surely it can't be too high now, my dear!" said the stupid husband soothingly.—Youth's Companion.

The City and the Country Dude.

A city dude seldom does anything worth chronicling, for he is universally regarded as empty headed, incapable of even arousing genuine curiosity. But a country dude—well, he is pretty certain to be interesting. Here is a specimen: A Buckfield young man recently tried to lift his carriage out of the mud while standing on the axle to save soiling his shoes.—Bar Harbor Record.

Why Children Are Always Doing Things.

Temptation, which is continual in children because everything is new to them, is nothing else than the force of an idea and the motive impulse that accompanies it.—Alfred Fouillee in Popular Science Monthly.

A curious box was recently found amid the ruins of Pompeii. The box was marble or alabaster, about 3 inches square and closely sealed. When opened, it was found to be full of pomatum or grease, hard, but very fragrant. The smell resembled somewhat that of the roses, but was much more fragrant.

American pioneers were God fearing and Bible loving. They staked out town lots in 22 Bethels, 10 Jordans, 9 Jerichos, 14 Bethlehems, 22 Goshens, 21 Shilohs, 11 Carmels, 18 Tabors and Mount Tabors, 22 Zions and Mount Zions, 26 Edens, 30 Lebanons, 26 Hebrews and 36 Sharons.

A Liverpool policeman, who, as he thought, swallowed a sixpence 13 years ago, recently had a severe pain in his throat. A fit of coughing came on, and the long lost coin, half of its original thickness, was released from his throat.

There is an unknown quantity of silver in the bay of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil—a silver mine, in fact, of, comparatively speaking, unlimited dimensions, and every ship that drops anchor there cuts into the bed of ore.—Exchange.

At Redditch, England, 20,000 people make more than 100,000,000 needles a year, and they are made and exported so cheaply that England has no rival and practically monopolizes the trade.

thing to say to us. "All men may die, but I shall live," is the dream of heedlessness. "All men must die, and therefore I," is the fact that is to be recognized and prepared for.

But we can become indifferent even to this "last enemy." It is not the glum indifference of desperate despair, but the cheerful indifference of perfect faith. If we have no place to go to, it is hard to contemplate our exit. But if there is a better place, a residence in which will be added happiness, we may even shake hands with Death, tell him that our latchstring is always out and he will be welcome whenever he sees fit to come. It is the fear of taking a leap in the dark that bids us pause. But if we are sure of taking a leap into the light we can easily let go our hold on this rugged life and drop into the life to come. The sea may rage as it pleases if our next port of entry is heaven, and lurking accidents and diseases may come out of their hiding places into the open, for at the worst they can only do us a good turn by opening the door of a larger and better house to live in.—New York Herald.

The tortoise is not an animal one would naturally fix upon as likely to be afraid of rain, but it is singularly so. Twenty-four hours or more before rain falls the Galapagos tortoise makes for some convenient shelter. On a bright clear morning, when not a cloud is to be seen, the denizens of a tortoise farm on the African coast may be seen sometimes heading for the nearest overhanging rocks. When that happens, the proprietor knows that rain will come down during the day, and as a rule it comes down in torrents. The sign never fails. This presensation, to coin a word, which exists in many birds and beasts may be explained partly from the increasing weight of the atmosphere when rain is forming, partly by habits of living and partly from the need of moisture which is shared by all. The American catbird gives warning of an approaching thunderstorm by sitting on the low branches of the dogwood tree (whether this union of the feline with the canine is invariable the deponent sayeth not), uttering curious notes. Other birds, including the familiar robin, it is said, give similar evidence of an impending change in the weather.—Chicago Herald.

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS.

Be independent. Do not lean on others to do your thinking or to conquer your difficulties.

Trust to nothing but God and hard work. Inscribe on your banner, "Luck is a fool; pluck is a hero."

Spend less than you earn. Do not run in debt. Watch the little leaks, and you can live on your salary.

Make all the money you can honestly, do all the good you can with it while you live, and be your own executor.

Be punctual. Keep your appointments. Be there a minute before time if you have to lose your dinner to do it.

Work. The world is not going to pay you for loafing. Ninety per cent of what men call genius is only talent for hard work.

Enter into that business or trade which you like best and for which nature seems to have fitted you, providing it is honorable.

Be honest. Dishonesty seldom makes one rich, and when it does, riches is a curse. There is no such thing as dishonest success.

Don't try to begin at the top. Begin at the bottom, and you will have a chance to rise, and will be surer of reaching the top some time.—Evangel.

To Stop the Discord.

The prodigious and conflicting clamor of pianos in the main building at the World's fair is to cease, and only one piano will be played at a time in one portion of the music section. Each exhibitor will have his 10 or 15 minutes, and he will thus make no discords, as the other pianos and organs that are scheduled for the same time will be separated from him by some hundreds of feet and several partitions.

Skatemaking In Midsummer.

Manufacturers are this season receiving larger orders than ever for skates. One company received two orders in one week—one for 100,000 pairs and another for 50,000 pairs. This is the busy season for the manufacturer of skates.—Hardware.

Where the Blame Belongs.

One of the lovely nymphs who was floating about among the sylvan woods and streams during the summer has among her belongings a gown which the prosy man who pays the nymph's bills considers not a dream, but a very substantial reality, as it cost him $500 over and above the original price. That was the sum he paid for one of the horses that took cold while the carriage waited at the door of the modiste when the gown was being fitted. He had been clipped, and the illness resulted in his death. The owner of the "creation," however, thinks the unreasonable man should place the blame where it belongs—on the modiste of the fashionable horse.—New York Times.

This Year's Juicy Melons.

It is one comfort that financial stringency hasn't hoarded up and hidden away all the peaches and melons. The quality as to most fruits is hardly up to the customary mark this year, and a good many apples fail to attain their customary size and flavor. Even the tomato is inclined to indicate a little falling off. The watermelons are good. If the market does not show quite such huge ones as a few of the big southern melons seen here in most years at this season, the supply of good sized ones is abundant and the quality good.

The only criticism is that while they were probably harvested and sent north at the customary time not all of them for some reason have fully and completely ripened this time. In the heart of many of the sweetest will be found a streak or two of unripeness. But this criticism does not apply to all. Some of the southern melons are as sugary as they are juicy, and how good they are these hot days, especially after a few hours of cooling near the ice! Those who have not tried them in the morning before breakfast have something to learn of their excellence at that hour.—Hartford Times.

A Narrow Escape.

A narrow escape from "a mysterious dispensation of Providence" is reported in Aroostook county, where a farmer was tending a horse fork, unloading hay, with a lighted cigar in his mouth. He placed the fork, and as the forkful started it hit the cigar, which flew out of his mouth and went up with the hay. But his buildings are yet standing.—Lewiston Journal.

The first European bank, founded at Barcelona in 1401, issued no bank notes. The first ones circulated in Europe were from the Bank of Stockholm in 1668.

Turkish toweling in pure white is considered the most correct thing for the covering of chairs and couches in the summer sitting room.

We have our opinions of people who are always pretending they want to hide from newspaper interviewers and reporters, and who abuse these nice young gentlemen and ladies as a nuisance. The fact is, it is the newspaper that makes people nowadays. The person who is never interviewed does not amount to much.

All this summer the German papers of America have been sadly exercised over the Weltausstellungssonntagsfragen. Their editors wax thin and pale. If the World's fair directors had known their action would give rise to a word like that, they never would have tried to open the show on Sunday.

A movement looking to the abolishment of free lunches is on foot among the New York State Liquor Dealers' association. They think apparently that it does not pay these hard times. The funny man of the New York Tribune suggests that they keep up the lunches and let the bar go.

"They put so much powder in our gloves nowadays that it [illegible] through sometimes," put in the girl with the blue [illegible].

"Yes, indeed. How sensible you are! But to return to E[illegible]—"

"It isn't any easy matter to get even with her, is it?"

"Easy enough now. She's really in love with Tom, so she can't manage him as well as she does the other [illegible]."

"Humph! But how did you manage it?"

"Oh, it happened [illegible] unexpectedly. I dropped in with [illegible] and M[illegible] to get a cup of tea at her house yesterday. I saw that she was a[illegible] and [illegible] was leaving Tom [illegible] was pouring [illegible] in the back parlor, and [illegible] I [illegible] to greet Tom before she [illegible] and dropped my muff in my haste."

"Was Tom wearing as large a chrysanthemum as usual?"

"Larger. He was carrying a lovely bunch of them too. '[illegible] me, Miss [illegible],' he said. I reached for the flowers like a flash. 'Thanks, awfully,' I cried; 'how lovely of you to bring them [illegible]!'"

"You didn't! [illegible] they were for—"

"Elle, of course, but he couldn't say a word. You should have seen his face, though, when he handed me my muff."

"Oh, and think of E[illegible] [illegible] him, as she thought, [illegible] with the flowers. Her [illegible] have been a study."

"Of course I couldn't see it, but when I heard the crash of one of her cherished tea-cups I knew that I was avenged. I'll have to watch her closely after this, though," she added, with a sigh, "for she'll get even with me somehow or perish in the attempt."—Chicago Tribune.

An Easy Question Answered.

A schoolteacher [illegible] for paying only [illegible] as he was [illegible] credit wherever possible, had the arithmetic class before him.

"Now," he said, holding up a silver dollar, "how much money is this?"

"One dollar," answered the class as easy as falling off a log.

"And how many bushels of potatoes could I buy with it, potatoes being worth [illegible] a bushel?"

Nobody answered, and the grocer's boy held up his hand.

"I know," he said.

"Well, my lad, tell the class how many."

"Enough to [illegible] you and [illegible], considering what you would [illegible]."

She [illegible]"

"Are you going to move on?" demanded the grocer.

"Purty soon, my friend—purty soon," replied the old man as he looked up again [illegible] and wiped his eyes. "She was a good wife, and the recollection of her death [illegible] me. What's taters a bushel to-day?"

The grocer was looking around for [illegible] officer and didn't reply.

"I never see taters without thinking of Bill. Bill was an awful good boy—too good for this world. Treat him [illegible] with 10 bags of taters, and in lifting one out of the wagon he busted a blood vessel and was brought home a corpse. I never think of it without weepin."

Red onions is only red onions to other folks, but to me they call up some awful recollections. I wish—"

"See here, old man," interrupted the grocer, "will you take 10 cents and go on?"

"I don't want no 10 cents, but yet if you object to my givin away to my feelin's—"

"I do object. If I could find an officer I'd have you run in, but as I can't I'll buy you off this once. Take this money and go."

"It seems heartless to sell my feelin's this way, but I don't want to make you any trouble. I see you have some cabbages there. I never see cabbages without thinkin how—"

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands can testify. Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but many, if not most, of the remedies in general use afford but temporary benefit. A cure certainly can not be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes. Ely's Cream Balm, which is so highly commended, is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power with perfect safety and pleasantness to the patient.

Italian Etiquette.

If the woman who visits Rome wishes to follow traditions and "do as the Romans do," she will be careful never to take an escort's arm in a Catholic church. Indeed, the guides instruct those who stroll innocently arm in arm about St. Peter's looking at the pictures, frescoes and altars of that wonderful cathedral that they are committing an impropriety. Italians are very particular about the etiquette of kissing the hand. A man kisses the right hand of his mother, aunt or elderly friend, and the left hand of his sweetheart. It is not permitted him to kiss the palm of the hand except in great and affectionate intimacy; it is regarded as a token that he is very much in love. Upon arriving at a formal dinner a gentleman takes the hand of his hostess and bends low over it as if about to kiss it, but does not do so. After dinner etiquette demands that he take her hand again and kiss it.

Never Buy Whisky for Medicinal purposes unless you know the bottlers of it to be reliable, as most whiskies sold under celebrated names are spurious, cheap articles, whose bottlers cannot afford to have their names on the labels. Uncle Sam's Monogram Whisky is bottled by the oldest and largest firm in the liquor line in the Northwest and the favor with which it has been received is the best proof of its superior quality. Ask your druggist or retail dealer for it.

CURES OTHERS

For Severe, Lingering Coughs, Weak Lungs, Bleeding from Lungs, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, in its early stages, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a sovereign remedy. It not only cures the cough but also builds up the strength and flesh of those reduced below a healthy standard by "Wasting Diseases." Will not make fat folks more corpulent.

MR. WILEY.

B. F. WILEY, of Box Elder, Converse Co., Wyo., writes: "I had bronchitis for twenty years and over, and I could not work without coughing so hard as to take all my strength away. I took five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and give you my word and honor that I can do any work that there is to do on my ranch without coughing. I have not taken any of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' for a year."

WHY NOT YOU?

Always Sit Down When You Can.

Mother's motto was: "Always sit down when you can," writes an old housekeeper. Sit to beat eggs, to mix cake, to peel the vegetables for dinner, and I have seen mother with a small board in her lap sit tranquilly ironing handkerchiefs with her tired feet on a cricket and near enough to the stove to obviate the necessity of rising for a hot iron. Now there are self heating irons, so that one may not be troubled changing flats. And when at the end of the day I have said:

"It has been a hard day for mother," she has replied, "Yes, but I am not so tired as I expected to be."

Don't you suppose the few moments rest at every change was a help in the end? Don't say it won't pay to get a chair for those few moments, for though you may not see it now it will add to your years and help to keep your strength in the long run.

Cheap at That.

"Think of it, Josiah. There are people heartless enough to sell their own flesh and blood."

"How do you know, Mandy?"

"Right here in this paper I see an offer, 'Heavenly Twins, 75 cents each.'"

100 BUS. OF WHEAT FROM TWO ACRES.

This remarkable yield was reported by Frank Close, Minnesota, on two acres of Marvel Spring Wheat. Speaking of this wheat, this new sort takes the cake. It is the greatest cropping spring wheat in the world. Farmers who tried it in the past season believe seventy-five to one hundred bushels can be grown from one acre, and are going to get this yield for 1894. At such yield wheat pays at 30 cents a bushel. Salzer is the largest grower of vegetable and farm seed in the world.

216 BUS. 8 LBS. OATS FROM ONE BUS. SEED.

This remarkable, almost unheard-of, yield was reported by Frank Winter of Montana, who planted one bushel of Great Northern Oats, carefully tilled and irrigated same, and believes that in 1894 he can grow from one bushel of Great Northern Oats three hundred bushels. It's a wonderful oat.

If You Will Cut This Out and Send It with 7 cents postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will get free their mammoth catalogue and a package of above spring wheat, or send 8 cents and get catalogue and package of above named oats. W

Dexter Intermediate Folding Machine.

We take pride in calling attention to our "Intermediate" Folder. We have designed this machine with a special view of supplying a thoroughly well made, simple, durable folding machine to publishers whose circulation does not justify them in purchasing one of our "Regular" machines. It will be readily understood that we have special advantages in the construction of this moderate-priced machine, being able to use many parts that are made from the same patterns intended for our more expensive folders. The accompanying cut illustrates our Hand Feed machine. The Attached Folders are built from the same patterns, but have press attachments in place of feed board. They are so arranged as to be readily moved back from the press when not needed. You will make no mistake by thoroughly investigating this machine before you purchase any of the "so-called" cheap machines now on the market. We are always glad to send these machines to responsible publishers subject to trial and approval. We will be glad to send you our Catalogue, and are always pleased to answer correspondence.

IN THE HANDS OF A MOB

RIOTING MINERS NOW IN CONTROL OF BESSEMER, MICH.

Becoming Angry at Not Receiving Their Daily Supply of Free Food, They Threaten the Poor Commissioners With Death.

Ironwood, Mich., Feb. 19.—A serious riot occurred at Bessemer yesterday over the distribution of supplies sent to this section for the benefit of the starving miners. It was learned recently that many of the men who had been receiving help were possessed of a plentiful supply of provisions and considerable money, and, in justice to those who have been sending contributions to this section it was decided to refuse further help to such people. Notices to this effect were sent out during the week. Friday W. J. Haggerson, justice of the peace and poor commissioner at Bessemer, received several threatening letters warning him of death if the decision of the poor commissioner should be enforced.

Yesterday morning a large gang of Italians and Poles assembled in front of the poor supply store and threatened to commit depredations unless contributions were continued. Three men entered the store and, brandishing knives and guns, helped themselves to a supply of flour and pork. Several officers stood by, but were so alarmed over the situation that they dared not interfere.

The mob then started for the residence of W. J. Haggerson, but he had removed his wife and children to a place of safety. He returned to his home with a Winchester and had been joined by about fifteen of his friends, who were thoroughly armed. They succeeded for awhile in subduing the disturbance, but an hour later the tumultuous gang became so strong that Haggerson and his friends were obliged to flee for the woods. Haggerson and his family and many of his friends drove through the deep snow to Ironwood.

They were forced to leave that place to protect their lives. A drunken mob of Italians and Polacks hold possession of the town and threaten death to all who have been instrumental in cutting off supplies.

A strong posse was organized in Ironwood last night for the purpose of proceeding to Bessemer to protect life and property. David F. Foley, ex-sheriff of this county, who became notorious through the United States in connection with the capture of Holzhay, the Black Bart of the Lake Superior country and a successful train robber, in that he held up half a dozen trains without any assistance, volunteered to go to Bessemer and quell the tumultuous gathering. Foley is a desperate man. He has been a cow boy in his time, and has roughed it in all of the tough mining camps of the West. He knows and fears no danger, and would willingly risk his own life for a friend.

Guatemala Is Accommodating.

Washington, Feb. 19.—After prolonged effort the department of state has at length succeeded in bringing to a most successful termination a troublesome case involving the capture of a criminal in a foreign country with which we had no extradition treaty. Some months ago Joseph F. Hahn fled from Natchez, Miss., embezzling $80,000 in bonds and a quantity of diamonds. As an act of comity, solely, the Guatemalan government caused the arrest of Hahn and an agent of the state department has sailed for San Francisco, bringing Hahn and all of the bonds and diamonds.

After Arid Lands.

San Francisco, Feb. 19.—The trans-Mississippi convention passed a resolution memorializing congress to enact legislation donating to the various states and territories all arid lands within their boundaries susceptible to irrigation, prescribing such conditions as will secure the lands to actual settlers through purchase from the state. An ineffectual attempt was made to pledge congress in favor of the system of irrigation and control of lands by the general government. Adjourned sine die.

Bloody Tracks.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Feb. 19.—Ferdinand Schubert, a farmer of Beaver Falls, heard a disturbance among his fowls last night and went out with a loaded shotgun. He pushed the gun inside the hencoop, when a man screamed. He ordered the man to come out. Two men sprang out and one of them presented a pistol at Schubert, but suddenly turned and ran off. Schubert fired to scare the men. This morning he found a track of blood in the snow, but could not follow it to a house. Schubert went to Sheriff Winchman and gave himself up.

Low Price for Ore.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 19.—What has stirred up iron ore men and vessel owners more than anything else for some time was the announcement to-day that E. C. Pope & Co., agents for the Norrie mine, had sold to the Chenango Valley Steel company of Newcastle, Pa., a large block of ore at the remarkably low figure of $2.75 per ton. This is nearly a dollar less than the same ore sold for last year, the price at that time being thought exceedingly low. The size of the block is said to range between sixty and seventy thousand tons.

Yaqui Indians Starving.

Hermosillo, Mex., Feb. 19.—Reports have been received here of intense suffering among the Yaqui Indians, whose territory is situated in the heart of the Sierra Madre mountains, west of here. In that high altitude the winter has been very severe and this together with a shortage in food supplies has brought the Indians to the verge of starvation.

Four Spouters.

Armour, S. D., Feb. 19.—The board of county commissioners accepted the bid of S. Swanson of Minneapolis to drill four artesian wells at the heads of dry streams in this county. The sinking of such wells will, it is believed, make running streams of the dry water courses.

Deadly High Winds.

Milwaukee, Feb. 19.—A special to the Wisconsin from Ellis Junction, Wis., says: Frank Walters was instantly killed and Gus Johnson and Martin Burke seriously injured by the collapse of a bridge which they were erecting across Oullet creek on the Milwaukee road. The disaster was caused by a high wind.

Now a State Bank.

Le Sueur, Minn., Feb. 19.—The National bank started up again as a state bank.

Morton Hanged in Effigy.

Omaha, Feb. 17.—Secretary of Agriculture J. Sterling Morton was hanged in effigy at his home town, Nebraska City, last night. The perpetrators are not known.

A Social Sensation at Belle Plaine.

Belle Plaine, Iowa, Feb. 17.—H. C. Sanford, a business man of this village, is charged with assaulting, with intent to outrage, Mrs. J. Martin, and also administering a drug with the intention of committing the assault. Mr. Martin stabbed Sanford, who is recovering. Sanford says Mrs. Martin was drunk, and he was taking her home.

The Markets.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Closing prices: Wheat—May, 59 1-8c; July, 61c. Corn—May, 37 1-8c; July, 38c. Oats—May, 29 3-4c; July, 28 1-8c.

Minneapolis, Feb. 19.—February close, 58c; May opening, 54 3-4c; highest, 55 3-8c; lowest, 55 1-2a55 5-8c; close, 56 1-4a56 3-8c. July opening, 57 1-4c; highest, 58c; lowest, 57 1-4c; close, 57 7-8a58c. On track—No. 1 hard, 59 1-4c; No. 1 Northern, 57 1-4c; No. 2 Northern, 55 3-4c.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 400 head; no change; prime steers, $4.75a5.10; choice steers, $4a4.50; fair steers, $3.25a3.85; others, $3a3.50; Texans, $3.10a3.75. Hogs—Receipts, 9,000 head; shipments, 4,000 head; active, 10c higher; heavy rough, $4.60a4.80; packers, $4.90a5.15; prime heavy and butcher weights, $5.15a5.25; prime assorted light, $5.20a5.25.

Cattle—But one bunch offered, and yards cleaned up early at about steady prices with yesterday, at 10a25c lower than a week ago. There is a fair demand.

Wild Talk.

London, Feb. 19.—The widely announced meeting of the Autonomie club, under the auspices of the international workers' group, was attended by only fifteen persons. Fourteen of these were foreigners. The speakers who had been announced to address the meeting did not appear. After waiting two hours Gibbons, of the commonwealth group, made a speech, in the course of which he urged effort in righting the wrongs they complained of. He held up Vaillant, Pallas and "other martyrs" as worthy of his hearers' emulation. Hundreds, he said, were ready to sacrifice their lives in the great cause. He himself was perfectly prepared to do so. They had nothing to live for, but were simply the slaves of the capitalists. Speeches, he added, were useless and physical force was necessary.

Love Finds a Way.

St. Paul, Feb. 19.—An irate father, a stalwart young Lochinvar, a beautiful and disobedient daughter and a supposed runaway marriage were the elements of a sensation developed on Dayton's Bluff yesterday. Julia Allgner, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Alpheus Allgner, of No. 544 De Soto street, is reported to have eloped with William Cox, a boarder at her father's house. The father is very angry, and he asserts that never shall his daughter live with the man she is said to have chosen for a husband.

Mill Burned.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 19.—The brick mill of the Griswold Linseed Oil company at Warren, Ohio, the second largest plant in the country, was destroyed by fire to-day. The building, stock and machinery was valued at $300,000, but the loss will hardly reach that amount, as about $50,000 worth of seed and one small building were saved. The insurance is $120,000. The water supply was inadequate and the firemen could do nothing.

Embezzler Caught.

Kansas City, Feb. 19.—Frank C. Brady, who, in August, 1892, decamped from Portland, Or., an embezzler from the Sunny Side Improvement company to the extent of $25,000, has been captured after a long chase, and is now en route to Portland in charge of officers of the law.

Negro Murderers in Bonds.

Armore, Ind. T., Feb. 19.—Three Louisiana murderers have been captured near here and turned over to Sheriff Thompson of Shreveport, La., after a long chase. They are George Washington, alias Green, for whose capture a $500 reward is pending; Jim Tayler and William Beaks, all negroes.

Smallpox in Rags.

Depere, Wis., Feb. 19.—The first case of smallpox directly traceable to imported rags developed here. The victim is a Miss Willmatte, employed by the Shattuck & Babcock paper mill. All of the 100 girls have been exposed to the contagion. The state board of health has been notified.

Hale and Hearty at 100.

West Union, Iowa, Feb. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Jared Ferguson of Decorah have been married seventy-eight years. Yesterday Mr. F. celebrated his 100th birthday anniversary. He was a sergeant in the war of 1812, and came to Iowa in 1857. He is still a hale and hearty old gentleman.

Had a Little Election.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 19.—At a special city election to-day for a successor to the late Judge Devoy as municipal justice, Col. W. H. Brown was elected by a vote of 328 to 212 for Judge R. W. Cutts, who was Judge Devoy's predecessor. Judge Brown was the first mayor of the city.

Temperance in Iowa.

Des Moines, Feb. 19.—The Republican members of the senate committee for the suppression of intemperance held a meeting and decided by a vote of 7 to 2 not to support the Harsh bill as amended. A new committee was appointed to draft a new bill. The objection to the Harsh bill was its unconstitutionality.

Highway Robbery.

St. Paul, Feb. 19.—Late last night E. J. Dahl of New Ulm, Minn., was held up in the business part of the city and robbed of over $500. He was able to give a good description of his assailants, and as a result the police arrested six men on suspicion.

Big Block for Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 19.—C. J. de Lendrecia has let a contract to J. Shanley of Duluth for the erection of a $45,000 brick block, 145x70, for a wholesale dry goods house.

Failed at Des Moines.

Blew Out the Gas.

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 19.—Two men, one Fred Meyers of this place and the other a stranger, were found dead in their room at the Grant house yesterday morning. They had evidently blown out the gas when they retired about 11 o'clock. The stranger has not yet been identified.

Statue of Napoleon Demolished.

Boulogne, Feb. 19.—The statue of Napoleon, which was erected here in 1854 by Englishmen, has been blown down and broken to pieces.

Too Much Morphine.

McConnellsville, Ohio, Feb. 17.—Dr. M. B. Davis of Rosseau, Morgan county, had been suffering with hemorrhages of the lungs, and to alleviate his sufferings took a large dose of morphine and died. It is thought by many to be suicide because of financial troubles. His friends claim that it was an accident.

A Fine Piece of Peat.

Independance, Iowa, Feb. 17.—Calvin Brittain, living one mile west of this city, has discovered genuine peat in a piece of boggy land. It covers an area of fifteen acres, is ten feet deep throughout and burns with steady flow, leaving fine white ashes.

The Grip
Has shown by its sudden attacks, its terrible prostration, and its serious, often fatal results, that it is a disease to be feared. For a fully developed case of the Grip, the care of a skilled physician is necessary.
To Prevent the Grip
we confidently recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies the blood, keeps the kidneys and liver in healthy action, gives strength where it is needed, and keeps up the health-tone so that the system readily throws off attacks of the Grip or of Diphtheria, Typhoid Fever, Pneumonia, etc.
After the Grip
Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequaled for purifying the blood and restoring strength.
Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures
Hood's Pills cure all liver ills, biliousness, jaundice, indigestion, sick headache.

Rats Forced to Keep Gnawing.

Have you any idea why it is that rats mice and squirrels are continually gnawing at something? They do not do this for "pure devilment," as people generally imagine, but because they are forced to. Animals of that class, especially the rats, have teeth which continue to grow as long as their owner lives. In the human species the teeth are developed from pulps which are absorbed and disappear as soon as the second set are full grown, but in the case of the much maligned rat the pulp supply is perpetual, and is continually secreting materials by which the incisors gain in length. This being the case, the poor creature is compelled to keep up his regular gnawing operations in order to keep his teeth ground off to a proper length.—St. Louis Republic.

Ugly Tempers
Are a product of bad digestion. Your dyspeptic is almost invariably a cross-patch. The way to renew cheerfulness of disposition and an equal temper soured by indigestion, is to take a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which not only banishes dyspepsia, but also relieves biliousness, constipation, chills and fever, rheumatism and kidney trouble. Use it with persistence three times a day.

Throughout the entire world there are annually about 180,000 suicides.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

POCKET LINED WITH FISH-HOOKS.

A Pickpocket Undertakes to Explore It and Finds Himself Caught.

A remarkable story came to light yesterday regarding an experience on Monday night of Charles Osborne, the mining man of Shasta County, with a pickpocket, in which he came off immensely best. Osborne has just sailed for South Africa in company with J. C. Petty. The story is so unusual as to seem hardly credible, but is vouched for in a way to carry belief.

Osborne arrived here several weeks ago. He is one of the best known mining men of California, having mined for years in the north. He was the discoverer of the Gladstone gold mine, French Gulch, which he sold for $50,000. As he was on his way to Johannesburg to take charge of some mines and did not know when he would get back, he spent some time here seeing the sights and taking his ease preparatory to starting.

While here he sent to Redding for $1,000, which he received by express. Much of this money he carried on his person, for Osborne is a big, stalwart man, who has been about the world, and is not afraid of anybody. One night over a year ago, when he and his friend Petty were out seeing the sights, a light-fingered man touched him for two $20 gold pieces, which he had in one of his trousers pockets. This was a surprise to Osborne, and set him to thinking. He had never had anything like them happen before, and he was much annoyed. He said nothing about it at the time, however, but set to work devising a plan for thwarting any similar accident in future.

In a dim way he recollected that he thought some one had put a hand in his pocket on the night he lost the coins. Osborne, as is customary among many mining men, wears substantial corduroy clothing, and these are equipped with unusually strong pockets. In the right pocket of his trousers, therefore, he skillfully arranged half a dozen big fish-hooks, each carefully fastened in its place, and in such a way that they would offer no resistance to a hand being inserted, but the hand would be grasped by the barbs while being withdrawn. Any one of the hooks would hold a 10-pound salmon.

Thus equipped Osborne again started forth. At the corner of California and Kearny streets a fakir was blithesomely expatiating about his wares, and the man stopped to hear what he had to say. Desirous of testing his invention, he jingled two or three $20 pieces carelessly in sight, and then dropped a couple of them into the yawning maw below the fishhooks. Then he leaned back and became absorbed in the street-corner oratory. In a few moments, sure enough, he felt a hand going down his pocket. It moved slowly and carefully, but every time the fakir said anything to make the crowd laugh it went down with more confidence. Pretty soon Mr. Osborne felt that he had a man at his elbow who was doing some deep thinking. He knew this by the commotion that had taken place in his pocket. He said nothing, but he knew something was going to happen. It did, when a voice said:

"Say, mister, I've got my hand in your pocket!"

"What in—have you got your hand in my pocket for?" said Osborne, cheerfully; "Why don't you take it out?"

"I can't; its caught," said the man, looking up and turning pale.

"Well, come right down here to a policeman. He will help you take it out," replied the mining man, and he moved off as he spoke, the thief being forced to trot along by the side of his captor.

"Oh, I didn't get any money. For heaven's sake let me go!" cried the thief.

Osborne did not care anything about imprisoning the fellow and punishing him further. He declared he would not have minded it a bit if he had lost the additional gold pieces. All he wanted was to see if his trap would work. So he released the fellow and let him go. He immediately ran away, and Osborne returned to his hotel, followed by several people. H. R. Bemis and others examined the fishhook-guarded pocket. It had considerable blood in it from the lacerated hand of the would-be-thief.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Boston's Wealthy Women.

One of the wealthiest women in Boston is undoubtedly the widow of the late Augustus Hemenway, as she was the chief heir to an estate valued at $22,000,000. Mrs. Hemenway resides in one of the grand old houses on Mount Vernon street, and from her home dispenses a wide hospitality that includes the poor as well as the rich, and the charities and philanthropic enterprises in which she has long been quietly interested can only be numbered by her nearest friends. Her normal cooking school and her gymnasium are described by the Journal as two of her most successful undertakings.

Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, daughter of Prof. Louis Agassiz, has a private fortune which enables her to dispense a royal bounty. Her "kindergarten" work alone is said to cost her about $50,000 a year.

Mrs. Sears, the wife of J. Montgomery Sears, and daughter of Charles F. Choate, of Southboro, also has a worthy fortune in her own name. Mrs. Sears' reputation as an artist has been established since her notable triumph in winning the $500 Evans prize, awarded by the jury of the New York water color exhibition last year.

Mrs. S. D. Warren of Mount Vernon street, is credited with at least $3,000,000. She owns the Androscoggin mills and a great deal of other property. She is exceedingly philanthropic, and her love for pictures has led her to indulge in many by the most eminent artists of the time. Mrs. Alpheus Hardy is worth nearly $1,000,000. She is very fond of flowers cultivating them with great success. A superb chrysanthemum is named for her. Mrs. W. H. Slocum, daughter of Moses Williams, is worth $800,000 and Miss Elizabeth Brigham enjoys a share in the use of her late brother's large estate, which, when the last legatee shall have died, will endow a hospital to be called by the name of its founder. There are many women whose names do not appear in the tax list because their money is invested in government and corporation bonds. In the latter case the corporation pays the taxes, and the names of individuals do not appear. There is, however, a long list of names of women who pay taxes on very large sums, ranging from $100,000 to $500,000 or more.

"August Flower"

"One of my neighbors, Mr. John Gilbert, has been sick for a long time. All thought him past recovery. He was horribly emaciated from the inaction of his liver and kidneys. It is difficult to describe his appearance and the miserable state of his health at that time. Help from any source seemed impossible. He tried your August Flower and the effect upon him was magical. It restored him to perfect health to the great astonishment of his family and friends." John Quibell, Holt, Ont.

THE WORK OF CONGRESS

RESUME OF PROSEEDINGS OF THD SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Feb. 21.—There has been considerable talk about the senate today of the prospect of a Democratic caucus to consider the tariff bill. Senator Gibson of Maryland, who has been cooperating with Senator Gorman and others to secure a duty on coal, said to-day that he considered a caucus inevitable, and that he thought it would be held during the first part of next week, or possibly the latter part of the present week. Members of the finance committee do not consider that a caucus will be necessary, and they confidently predict that none will be held. They attribute the caucus reports to the dissatisfied element, and are evidently of the opinion that they will not be able to secure sufficient backing among Democratic senators to force a caucus. The meeting of the full Democratic committee does not change the aspect of the situation so far as can be learned, though it came near doing so, and at one time looked as if the meeting might result in ordering the calling of a committee meeting to-morrow and the reporting of the bill to the full committee then. Only the fact that the week will then be over half gone and that the senate will probably adjourn over until Monday on account of Washington's birthday, prevented.

The sugar schedule appears to be at present the item which is giving the greatest annoyance, and there is no doubt but that for the unsatisfactory status of this matter, the other disputed questions would have been agreed upon before this time and the bill reported to the full committee.

The session of the senate was devoid of special interest. Senator Daniel of Virginia concluded his speech on the Hawaiian question, and while supporting warmly the course that had been followed by the administration, he declared that now there was nothing to do but recognize the new government and wish it godspeed. After Senator Daniel's speech the bill for additional printing office facilities was taken up and discussed.

The deadlock on the Bland seigniorage bill was not broken in the house to-day. Roll call followed roll call, when it being apparent that Mr. Bland could not muster a quorum he moved to adjourn.

Washington, Feb. 22.—The tariff question came up in quite an unexpected way in the senate to-day, and for two hours it held the floor to the exclusion of all other business. The matter was indirectly alluded to by Senator Voorhees, who arose to a question of privilege to deny a newspaper statement indicating that the Democratic members of the finance committee were submitting to the president's directions in matters relating to the tariff bill. After this denial by Senator Voorhees Senator Chandler of New Hampshire precipitated the discussion of the day by an inquiry as to the part that Senator Mills is performing in the consideration of the bill in committee, and whether he is still acting as the proxy of Senator McPherson since the latter's return to the city. Senator Voorhees at first requested Senator Chandler to read the Record for his information, but when the New Hampshire senator insisted upon a direct answer Senator Voorhees finally declared that it was no business of the senator how the finance committee considered the bill. This provoked an era of acrimony, and for the next hour senatorial courtesy had no place in this dignified body. Many senators accused each other of unworthy acts, and Senator Vest finally quoted from the Record in attempt to prove that Senator Chandler had promised to take care of certain officials in the Southern states in 1876, if they would decide against the Democracy and in favor of Hayes for the presidency.

Washington, Feb. 23.—There was a series of dramatic incidents in the house which may possibly culminate with legal proceedings against the sergeant-at-arms for false imprisonment of members of congress. Sergeant-at-Arms Snow, acting by virtue of the general warrant of arrest issued last Monday, has been apprehending members wherever they should be found. The warrant contains the names of fifty-six congressmen. Mr. Snow began last night to arrest congressmen on the floor of the house on warrants charging them with absenting themselves on Monday. This was in accordance with a colloquy between Speaker Crisp and the sergeant-at-arms during the session yesterday. Mr. Snow asked if he was expected to arrest members on the floor. Mr. Crisp answered that the sergeant-at-arms was expected to "execute the order." This was accepted as meaning that arrests on the floor should be made, and Mr. Snow at once began to carry this idea into effect. He arrested seven congressmen as they sat in their seats. Deputy Hill made as many more arrests. In each case the member was on the shoulder and then told that he was released on parole to report when required. This morning the arrests began again and continued until interrupted by a stirring scene. Representative Cummings of New York came down the middle aisle of the house just as the session was about to open. Deputy Hill stepped up to him and notified him that by virtue of the warrant he had Mr. Cummings would be placed under arrest and his parole taken. The congressman flushed and took the matter seriously. He stepped back and in bitter language denounced the effort to arrest him. He refused to recognize the validity of the warrant. "I give you fair warning," said Mr. Cummings, "that if you touch me you act at your peril." For a moment it looked as though there would be serious trouble, as Mr. Cummings plainly intimated that he intended to resent the slightest touch indicating arrest by the use of force. The deputy quickly withdrew, however, as the orders of the sergeant-at-arms are to avoid indignities to congressmen in every way possible. Members who were apprehended threaten to secure suitable redress and talk of legal proceedings for false imprisonment. A serious scene followed when Gen. Sickles denounced his arrest. This culminated finally in the discovery that the warrant under which members had been arrested was faulty, in that the names of those arrested had not been included in the warrant. By this time the house was in such a tangle that Mr. Bland moved to adjourn. Despite the efforts of the Republicans to hold the Democrats in session in order to force them to find a way out of their predicament the motion was carried.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The members of the house under arrest were finally discharged from custody to-day by dispensing with further proceedings under the call. It required four hours to accomplish this, and although the scenes of disorderly turbulence which characterized yesterday's proceedings were not repeated today the proceedings were fully as interesting. The Democrats were evidently very anxious when the house met to extricate themselves from the complications arising from the wholesale arrest of members, but by flank movements the Republicans succeeded in preventing this until the whole situation had been thoroughly ventilated. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the day, barring Mr. Bland's bitter phillipic against the filibustering Democrats, was a verbal duel between Mr. Reed and Mr. Turner over the question of a quorum—a question just now of pre-eminent importance in house circles on account of the proposed Democratic caucus to consider the advisability of adopting this expedient. After the arrested members had been discharged Mr. Bland returned to the silver bill, but his motion failed again for lack of a quorum. He only lacked two votes, however, and this is the high water mark. Although Mr. Bland still insists on going ahead with the seigniorage bill, many of the Democrats believe it should now be abandoned.

Mr. Bland denounced the New York delegation in heated words. He was several times called to order by Representative Coombs of New York. The house, in consequence, was in another uproar. Mr. Bland's speech was sensational in its criticism of the disorder which reigned in the house yesterday. He declared that the men who are obstructing legislation and defying the house were anarchists and revolutionists. They were worse than the criminal who would throw dynamite bombs from the galleries. There were hisses at this statement, which grew louder and culminated in cries of "Shame." Mr. Bland proceeded in his impassioned utterances. He said mobocracy had taken possession of the house. The mobism of anarchy was being given an object lesson. The anarchist was being invited to parade the streets and commit his deeds of violence. Mr. Bland proceeded with frequent characterization of those members who had obstructed legislation as "anarchists," "revolutionists." As Mr. Bland spoke there were alternate scenes of extreme confusion and silent astonishment. Seldom or never in the memory of veteran members had such violent characterization of the members of the house been heard.

Numerous plans for strengthening the rules are under consideration. The one most generally approved is to provide that the attention of the speaker may be directed to the fact that a member is present and not voting. Thereupon the speaker may direct that the member be brought to the bar of the house and his name recorded as present, to make a quorum. It is said that this obviates the criticisms of "Reed rule" in the method of counting a quorum. The proposed rule would be guarded by the formality of bringing members to the bar of the house where there would be no question as to the actual presence. The feeling is so strong that some Democrats are ready to accept "Reed rules" on the quorum question without any excuses or explanation.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The battle over the Bland seigniorage bill goes merrily on in the house. Despite the many reverses Mr. Bland has met in his attempts to procure a quorum, he is as determined as ever to fight it out on this line if it takes all winter. If he does not succeed, however, it is not probable that the speaker and his associates on the rules committee will permit his bill to longer block the path of business. As the opponents of the measure have now adopted an open filibustering policy, a rule will be formulated by the committee on rules to prevent this and bring the vote directly to Mr. Bland's motion. A caucus will be held to-night or to-morrow to consider the question of an amendment to the rules which will either give the speaker the power to count a quorum or place it in the power to compel a vote with the alternative of fining him. While it would seem from the number who signed the caucus bill—116—that a majority of the Democrats favor some method of preventing filibustering, some of the leading members do not desire to push such a modification of the rules at the end of this long fight. With eighty majority they think they should first vindicate their ability to extricate themselves from the present humiliating position, and afterwards, they argue, the events of the past two weeks would furnish ample justification for such a modification of the rules. The outlook for the week is full of contingencies. The struggle over the Bland bill may drift into a big parliamentary contest over a change in the rules, in which event there will be some bitter opposition manifested from the Democratic side, especially if the proposed rule contemplated lodging in the speaker's hand the power to count a quorum. Pending the result of the silver fight the Democratic opponents of the measure, no matter what they may favor with regard to a change of the rules as an abstract proposition, will contest anything which is designed to lessen their powers of obstructing the seigniorage bill. If the silver bill is gotten out of the way before the end of the week the contested election cases and appropriation bills will follow.

The senate has made but little progress in its efforts to clear up the calendar in advance of the forthcoming discussion of the tariff bill in the senate.

Bishop Michael Tierney.

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 26. — Rev. Michael Tierney was yesterday consecrated bishop of the Roman Catholic church, in the diocese of Hartford, in St. Joseph's cathedral. The service was the impressive ceremony of the Roman Catholic church prescribed for such occasions. Among the officiating clergymen were many priests outside of the diocese of national reputation. Archbishop Williams of Boston acted as consecrator.

Will Live at Waupun.

Milwaukee, Feb. 26.—Rudolph J. Peschmann, proprietor of the Cream City hotel, who robbed and murdered Mrs. Schums, an aged guest, and then set fire to his hotel, has been sentenced by Judge Wallber to state prison at Waupun for life.

A Burglary at La Crosse.

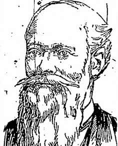
La Crosse, Wis., Feb. 26.—Last night a burglar entered the house of J. E. Wheeler and got a fine gold watch and several pieces of jewelry, but the family was aroused before he found any money.

MAJ. STRAIT IS NO MORE.

THE EX-CONGRESSMAN OF MINNESOTA IS DEAD.

He Passes Away on Board a Train at El Paso, Tex., While Returning From a Trip to Mexico—His Death the Result of a Hot Spring Bath.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 26.—Just as the Mexican Central train arrived here yesterday morning at 8 o'clock a passenger, ex-Congressman H. B. Strait, who for twelve years represented Minnesota in the lower house at Washington, breathed his last. He was a pioneer of Minnesota State, having represented the second district when there were only three congressmen from that state, and afterward the Third district when the number was increased to five. He was a prominent broker, interested in four national banks in his state. He was at Washington on Feb. 1, where, after concluding his business, he met two old Minnesota friends who had recently moved to North Dakota. One was Judge W. J. Mooney of Langdon. The other was Capt. M. J. McCormick, president of the Grand Forks National bank at Grand Forks, N. D. With them he agreed to take a trip through Mexico, and go thence to the midwinter fair at San Francisco before returning home. They went to New Orleans and enjoyed the Mardi Gras festivities, thence to San Antonio and Laredo, Tex., and via the narrow gauge to Monterey, San Luis Potosi and the City of Mexico. Returning North, they took the Mexican Central railroad to El Paso, but stopped off at Quertaro and at Aguas Callientes last Friday, where Maj. Strait called upon Congressmen Wilson and Tarsney. Here a hot spring bath had a bad effect on Maj. Strait. After his train pulled north, and after he had seen Congressman Walson carried on a stretcher to the south-bound special, he became nauseated and his stomach would retain nothing. He grew worse in the train, suffering from threatened heart disease, cold feet and bowel congestion. A doctor was telegraphed for and met the train at Chihuahua Saturday. The major there was revived by stimulants and the external application of warm water cushions. His companions of the trip attended and nursed him, with the assistance of one female passenger and General Passenger Agent White, of the Mexican Central, during the night, but the doctor said the distinguished patient would not reach El Paso, which was nearly verified. The major was wholly himself up to the last moment, when he grasped the hand of Capt. McCormick, his old-time friend, and pressing it, said: "Captain, this is getting very serious." The train had hardly stopped at the first station on American soil when the Minnesota statesman was dead.



Horace B. Strait.

Maj. Strait leaves a wife and daughter at Shakopee, Minn., and a son, Burton, in New York, who is connected with the Standard Railroad Equipment company. His brother, W. W. Strait of Los Angeles, Cal., will arrive here to-day. The body is being embalmed and will be shipped to St. Paul to-morrow. The sad occurrence has cast a gloom upon the friends who accompanied the dead man during the extended trip, and they are undecided as to continuing their contemplated journey West.

Missionary Convention.

Detroit, Feb. 26.—About 1,200 delegates are expected to attend the missionary convention of the international student volunteer movement for foreign fields, which is to be held here this week. About 300 of the 500 colleges of the United States and Canada will be represented. Representatives from Oxford and Edinburgh universities are to be here. The student volunteer movement started in 1886 at a meeting of New England college students at Northfield, Mass., led by Dwight L. Moody. It is entirely undenominational, forty creeds being represented and includes both sexes. Some of the most prominent Christian workers in the country will take part this week.

Seven Lives Lost.

Gurdon, Ark., Feb. 26. — News has reached here of the burning of a farmhouse and its occupants ten miles west of Murfreesboro, in Pike county, on Wednesday night. John Wert, a farmer, his wife and five children, occupied the house, and all perished in the flames. The building was constructed of logs with a large fireplace built at each end. While the family were asleep fire flew upon the floor and in that manner the dry timbers and other inflammable material soon became ignited. When discovered the next day the entire building was reduced to ashes, and only the charred bodies of the occupants remained.

Nicaragua Wins.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Senor Guzman, the minister of Nicaragua to the United States, has received a cablegram to the following effect: "The capital of Honduras (Tegacighlpa) capitulated last night. Publish this cablegram. Our victory puts an end to the war in Honduras."

Paris, Feb. 26.—The foreign minister of Nicaragua has sent a cable message to the Nicaraguan consul in this city, saying that the allied forces have captured Tegucigalpa, and that the war is at an end.

Not Her Child.

Helena, Mont., Feb. 26.—This town is agog to-day over a story that was printed this morning in a local newspaper. It relates to A. Ruce, employed by Mrs. Delbert Bedford to palm off on her confiding husband a waif as his own child. The deception was complete for three months, and might never have been discovered but for the fact that the real mother of the child demanded the return of her baby. The putative mother refused to give it up, as her deception would be exposed. Then Julia Olson, a seamstress, went to Bedford and told him that the baby was hers, and not Mrs. Bedford's nor his. Bedford then went to Dr. Kellogg, to whom he had paid $84 for attendance upon his wife while she was pretending to be ill. The doctor owned up to the truthfulness of Julia Olson's story, and he is under arrest for getting money under false pretenses. Julia got out a writ of habeas corpus to recover her baby, but Mrs. Bedford and her cherub have both disappeared, though the officers think they can find them. Bedford is half-owner and manager of the Northern News company, which controls the sale of literary matter on Northern Pacific trains between St. Paul and Portland. Mrs. Bedford and Miss Olson occupied adjoining wards in a laying-in hospital when the latter's baby was born, and it was at once transferred to Mrs. Bedford.

Shot His Mother.

La Crosse, Wis., Feb. 26.—A quarrel which began three days ago in the country a few miles from town took on a sanguinary hue last night. Two brothers, Evan and Theodore Erickson, quarreled and Evan pounded Theodore so that he needed a doctor's services since. Evan has since been hiding in barns. Last night he went home, declaring he would kill his brother. The latter escaped by a window and hid in the barn. Then Evan began to smash furniture and flourish a revolver. The family ran out and he followed and shot his mother twice. She fell bleeding in the barnyard. Then he drew a large clasp knife and cut a gash in his throat, severing his windpipe, but missing the jugular. His brother and sister carried both the wounded into the house and bandaged the wounds as well as possible. The brother then drove six miles for a doctor, who, on his arrival, found both alive. Mrs. Erickson is not dangerously wounded, and the young man may recover, though it is not expected.

He Fears No Courts.

Des Moines, Feb. 23.—George W. Howard, vice president of the American Railway union, organized a branch with 175 members yesterday. The general executive board of the Knights of Labor and Gen. J. B. Weaver were present. After the organization Weaver and General Master Workman Sovereign made short speeches. In reference to the injunction against him by Judge Jenkins, Sovereign said: "I am going to Winona, Minn., and speak there to-night. On Tuesday and Wednesday I shall be in St. Paul and Minneapolis to talk to the Northern Pacific employes, and as sure as there is a God in heaven I will violate that injunction of Judge Jenkins'. It is infamous and an outrage on all workingmen. He would be a poor representative of organized labor who would not have the backbone to do what he pleases against this disgrace, and would deserve the condemnation of all honest workingmen. I fear no courts. If there is a United States Marshal here let him serve his papers."

Dynamite Proof Safes.

San Francisco, Feb. 26.—The Examiner says the Wells-Fargo Express company, profiting from its recent experiences with train robbers, has about decided to adopt the plan now in operation on the Santa Fe system in order to discourage the holding up of trains and looting of express boxes. Heavy burglar proof safes will be placed in express cars for the safe keeping of all valuables and money in transit, and to protect express messengers and keep robbers out of the safes, the combination will be made known only to the company's agents at stations along the road. It will be the duty of agents to put their packages into the safes on trains and to take therefrom such packages as the express messengers notify them are in the safes to be delivered to them. The safes will be dynamite proof.

Bulow's Heir.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 26.—A man who claims to be the only relative of Hans von Bulow, the great German pianist who died in Cairo, Egypt, on Feb. 13, has been discovered in this city. His name is Carl von Bulow. He says he is a nephew of the dead musician, and being the only relative, will come in for his estate, which amounts to 8,000,000 marks. The nephew is now employed in the capacity of bar porter in the Hotel Butte, but says he will start for Germany to-morrow to claim his fortune.

Mistaken for Burglars.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 26.—William Farrar of St. Louis, who has been on a prolonged spree at St. Charles, Ark., and a Mr. Ballard were shot and killed by William Parker, a young merchant, Saturday night. Farrar, in a drunken frenzy, attempted to burst in the door of the store in the rear room of which Ballard and Parker were sleeping. Ballard went out to see what was going on, when Parker awoke, and taking both Ballard and Farrar for burglars, killed them.

Gift for a Washington University.

New York, Feb. 26.—A lady in New York, whose name is for the present withheld, has presented to Bishop John F. Hurst, for the American university at Washington, $100,750 in cash. It is understood that this is an endowment for the chair of history, which is the first department contemplated by the trustees of the university. A few days ago a gift of equal value was contributed by an Ohio gentleman.

His Identity Established.

Alexandria, Minn., Feb. 26.—The man killed by a Great Northern train near here a few nights ago was a German named Venkunz, who lived near Albany, this state. He had become insane and had walked from Albany, fifty-three miles, dragging a hand sled.

Shot by Savages.

London, Feb. 26.—Dispatches received here from the west coast of Africa announce that a number of British officers and sailors have been killed in an encounter with slave dealers.

ADDRESS BY POPULIST

RESULT OF THE DELIBERATIONS OF THE PARTY'S LEADERS.

Action of the Democrats and Republicans on the Silver Question Denounced and Free Coinage of Both Gold and Silver Demanded.

St. Louis, Feb. 24.—The national central committee of the Populist party, which has been in secret session here the past two days, Chairman H. E. Taubeneck presiding, concluded its work this afternoon and issued the following deliberations:

"The union of the leaders of the old parties under Grover, Steve and John Sherman have forced down the volume of the circulating medium to the single gold standard, thereby enhancing the purchasing power of money, and depreciating the price of all the products of labor as well as the earnings of wage workers. The power acquired by the campaign promises of the Democratic and Republican parties to restore silver to the place occupied as a money metal previous to the crime of 1873, has been used to consummate that iniquity. The tactics of deceiving the people by sham issues, which have been so successful in the past, will be employed to maintain the gold standard and retire greenbacks. The British policy of a single gold standard system of finance is contrary to every principle of American independence. Therefore, we are opposed to any international conference with foreign nations to regulate the financial policy of this country, but favor a financial system that is distinctly American. The success of the Demo-Republican financial policy enslaves producers to reward absorbers of wealth. The issue is made by the declaration in the Omaha platform in favor of the free coinage of gold and silver at the ration of 16 to 1 and the issuance of standard money exclusively by the government without the intervention of banks. We denounce the issue of bonds in time of peace, as an act of treason and usurpation unequaled in the history of civilized government. They propose to drown the outcries of a plundered people with a sham battle over the tariff, so that capitalists, corporations, national banks, rings, trusts, watered stock, the demonetization of silver and the oppression of the usurpers may not be lost. They propose to sacrifice our homes, wives and children on the altar of mammon; to destroy the multitude in order to secure corruption from the millionaires. The national committee claims no right to dictate to the different states or congressional districts as to the details of their platforms within the bounds of the fundamental principles of the Omaha platform, and we call upon all patriotic, liberty-loving citizens to unite with us in this effort to hold the rights of American freemen from industrial slavery."

Resolutions denouncing the Wilson bill were also adopted.

Diversify and Show Off.

Valley City, Feb. 24.—The farmers and business men of Barnes county are alive to the necessity of the greater diversity in farm products. To stimulate producers in this line the first fall fair ever held in this county will be held at Valley City on the 2d, 3d and 4th of next October, when liberal premiums will be awarded to exhibitors of live stock, grain, root crops, dairy products, etc. A fair association composed of merchants and farmers has inclosed and equipped one of the finest grounds to be found in the state, and every inducement will be held out to farmers to diversify and depend less on the old one crop plan.

Anarchists Sentenced.

Vienna, Feb. 24. — The court before which the twelve anarchists, accused of conspiring against the life of Emperor Francis Joseph, have been on trial today, sentenced the prisoners. Franz Haspel was sentenced to ten years' rigorous punishment and Stefan Habnel, the second leader, received a sentence of eight years imprisonment. The other conspirators were sentenced to terms of from two to four years' imprisonment and six of the accused were acquitted.

Hall's Bill Is Late.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Representative Hall has introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $25,000 for the improvement of the Minnesota river opposite Belle Plaine, Minn. In view of the fact that Mr. Hall has introduced this measure at so late a date, it is presumed that he does not anticipate being able to secure its passage at this session. Mr. Hall also introduced a bill providing for a special pension for Sam Lundberg of Carver, Minn.

He Gets His Exequator.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 24.—A. M. Keattie, the Hawaiian consul appointed by President Dole, has at last received his exequatur. In a letter accompanying, the statement is made that the reason it was held back so long was because the department had been awaiting the settlement of affairs in Hawaii. This apparently shows that Lord Rosebery has concluded to look upon the provisional government as a fixture.

He Has Hydrophobia.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—A man violently ill with hydrophobia caused a panic in the crowd of poor who sought aid at the county agent's office. He gave his name as George Barker, a laborer, during a lucid interval, but soon became violent again and, barking and screaming, attempted to rush at the people about him. After a terrible struggle he was overpowered and taken to a hospital.

Patriotism in Iowa.

Des Moines, Feb. 24.—In the senate Mr. Carpenter moved to reconsider the bill requiring the flag to be placed on public school houses of the state. After a lengthy discussion the motion was deferred. The senate bill passed allowing railway companies to invest in the capital stock of other companies.

Postponed for a Week.

Milwaukee, Feb. 24.—The hearing on the petition of railway labor unions to secure a modification of Judge Jenkins' famous Northern Pacific strike order, which was to be had to-day, was postponed until next Friday.

Fined for Treating.

Red Wing, Minn., Feb. 24.—Edward Conlin, a man living over in Wisconsin, came to this city on a visit and treated an habitual drunkard to whisky. He was arrested, tried and convicted. He paid a fine of $25 and costs.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of four hundred and sixty-six dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Joseph Jean and Odile Jean his wife mortgagors to Security Trust Company, of Nashua N. H. mortgagee bearing date the 7th day of July 1890, and with a power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 10th day of July 1890 at 4:20 o'clock p. m. in book 50 of mortgages on page 40. Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Security Trust Company of Nashua N. H. mortgagee, to E. P. Goodsell Jr. by written assignment dated the 2nd day of April 1892 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on the 4th day of May 1892 at 8:30 o'clock a. m. in book 61 on page 202, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage viz:

The west half of the west half, of Section two in Township one hundred and fifty, of Range forty-two, in Polk county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances: which sale will be made, by the sheriff of said Polk county at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston in said county and state, on the 14th day of April 1894 at 10 o'clock a. m., of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

I have recommended Beggs' Blood Purifier and Cherry Cough Syrup several times and must say that I have been surprised and more than pleased at results following use of same. I am not in habit of endorsing patent medicines, but can say truthfully, Beggs' medicines are all that is claimed for them.—Tessie Jones; M. D., Wintersville, Mo.—For sale by J. L. Johnson Druggest.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three hundred and thirty-eight dollars which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Herman Lindner, an unmarried man, mortgagor, to Security Trust Company, mortgagee, bearing date the 25th day of August 1892 and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 31th day August 1892, at 10 o'clock a. m. in Book 50 of mortgages on page 86 and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The north-east quarter of Section seven, in Township one hundred and fifty, of Range forty-four in Polk county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston in said county and state, on the 24th day of March 1894 at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt, and interest, and taxes if any on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated January 29th A. D. 1894.

Security Trust Co. mortgagee.

A YEAR
FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS.

If you want work that is pleasant and profitable send us your address immediately. We teach men and women how to earn from $5.00 per day to $3,000 per year without having had previous experience, and furnish the employment at which they can make that amount. Nothing difficult to learn or that requires much time. The work is easy, healthy, and honorable, and can be done during daytime or evenings, right in your own locality, wherever you live. The result of a few hours' work often equals a week's wages. We have taught thousands of both sexes and all ages, and many have laid foundations that will surely bring them riches. Some of the smartest men in this country owe their success in life to the start given them while in our employ years ago. You, reader, may do as well; try it. You cannot fail. No capital necessary. We fit you out with something that is new, solid, and sure. A book brimful of advice is free to all. Help yourself by writing for it to-day—not to-morrow. Delays are costly.

OF

POLK COUNTY, MINN.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss. DISTRICT COURT,
County of Polk. } 14th Judicial District.

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA, to all Persons, Companies or Corporations, who have or claim any Estate, Right, Title or Interest In, Claim to, or Lien upon any of the Several Pieces or Parcels of Land in the List Hereto Attached, Described:

The list of taxes and penalties on real property for the county of Polk, remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1894, has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court, of the County of Polk, of which that hereto attached is a copy.

THEREFORE, You, and each of you, are required to file in the office of said Clerk, on or before the 20th day of March, A. D. 1894, your answer, in writing, setting forth any objections or defense you may have to the taxes and penalties, or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to, or on which you have or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim or lien.

And in default thereof, judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land, for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interest and cost.

NILS MYUS.
Clerk of the District Court in said County of Polk.

Explanation to the Tax List of 1892.

Wherever the notation "Ex. Int. R. R. Co." appears as a part of any description of land in the following list it means that the title of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company or its trustees or mortgagees is not in any wise to be impaired or affected by the tax judgment to be entered in these proceedings and that only the interest of the purchaser from said company should be effected by said tax judgment or sold thereunder.

[In the following list, "a" represents acres; "e" east; "n" north; "s" south; "w" west; "ne" northeast; "nw" northwest; "se" southeast; "sw" southwest; "bl" or "blk" block; "r" or "R" range; "&" and; "tp" or "twp" township; "ft" feet; "st" street; "cor" corner; "frl" fractional; "pt" part; "$" dollars; "do" or " means a repetition of the word or words in the line above onw hich it occurs. The spaces between figures in columns of figures represent the decimal point between dollars and cents, and all figures that fall below any dollar mark, as above represented, are to be read in the same manner as though the dollar mark was there.]

DOGS FOR USE IN WAR

HOW THEY ARE TRAINED IN A LITTLE TOWN IN AUSTRIA.

The Intelligence They Display Is Simply Marvelous—How They Hunt Out and Succor the Wounded and Lost—Scenting an Enemy When Five Miles Away.

Some 80 miles west of Vienna the little market town of Wels nestles in the foothills of the Austrian Alps, which here rise in bold cliffs from the banks of the Traun.

The forests of the neighborhood are too open to harbor much game, but a stranger stopping at the summer hotel of the little town might easily be led to believe that the citizens must be the most indefatigable hunters of the Austro-Hungarian empire. From morning till night, and sometimes till long after dark, he may hear the echo of shots and the barking and howling of dogs approaching the town or dying away in the distant hills, and occasionally answered from far and near, as if all the sportsmen of the northern Alps had met in convention.

The plan of training dogs for military purposes was first adopted by the French garrisons in Algiers, but has since been tried with great success in Prussia, Italy and especially in Austria, where four footed messengers have for many years been taught to carry letters to the snow bound villages of the Alpine highlands. The shaggy collies used for that purpose make the best war dogs and can be trained to race in a bee line to the next military post and announce their arrival by a peculiar bark that is at once recognized and answered by the shout of a sentry.

They will also range a long chain of hills in quest of wounded soldiers, and either dash back to report their discoveries or stand guard at the side of the cripple till an ambulance party comes near enough to be signaled by a long drawn howl.

Trainers send out three or four of their shaggy pupils at once and ascertain their proficiency by all sorts of ingenious tests. Soldiers instructed to act the part of helpless cripples will hide in thickets or caverns and keep still till the dog tugs at their sleeves, when they will sit up and reward his sagacity with a piece of sausage.

They then try to rise, but pretend to be too weak to walk or even to shoot, and ask the dog to call for assistance. If help is near, Collie will set up a loud howl, repeated at shorter and shorter intervals, till the signal is answered from the valley below. If his appeals should remain unheeded, he will mount the next rock and look about as if to impress the lay of the land on his mind, and then dash off to summon help from headquarters.

Should two cripples intimate their need of aid at the same time, Collie will guide the rescuing party to the hiding place of the one farthest away, and help them to pick up or somehow assist the the other man on their way home.

Messenger dogs carry letters in a small bag wrapped around their collar and will permit only the proper officials to touch that collar. A noncommissioned officer displaying the insignia of his rank, may venture to remove the bag, but the dog will follow him and see to it that he gets him an answer.

Private soldiers are "stood off" with a menacing growl. Persons wearing the uniform of the enemy cannot stop the messenger with anything but an extremely well aimed shot. Dogs racing along the battle front will dodge bullets by running zigzag and develop a marvelous talent for taking advantage of every cover, running through the highest grass or along the safe side of rocks and fallen trees.

Picket post dogs are selected from a different breed. The half shepherd, half wolf dogs that carry letters and hunt up cripples are not entirely devoid of scent and can find their way back home in a manner not wholly explicable on the theory of keen eyesight. But for efficiency in the role of sentries they yield the palm to a species of deerhounds that do their best work after dark.

On picket duty a well trained sentinel of that breed will scent the approach of a troop of cavalry before a man, with his ear on the ground, can hear the trampling of the horses. The dog sentry will announce his discovery in a more discreet way than the Scotch widow who screamed through the citadel of Lucknow when her "inner ear" heard the approaching bagpipe of the McGregors. Phylax on scenting danger will step up close to his uniformed companion, and after a pause of silence and keen attention will announce his suspicion by low growls, getting more frequent rather than louder, as the cause for alarm becomes more unmistakable.

The best dogs of that breed have "challenged" cavalry from a distance of three to five miles, according to the direction of the wind, and infantry from nearly two miles. They can be trained to announce the approach of a known friend in a quite different way—viz, by leaping to and fro or crouching down and jumping up by turns, but without the warning growl of the danger signal.—F. L. Oswald in Youth's Companion.

The Goliath of Big Basin.

In Big Basin, Santa Cruz county, Cal., there are thousands of giant redwoods that will measure from 10 to 23 feet in diameter. But the Titan of them all is a giant, known far and near as "the Goliath of Big Basin." This monstrous vegetable growth is 23 feet in diameter at the ground and is perfectly solid, a fact noted as a rarity in these colossi of the forest. Goliath is a fraction over 200 feet in height, the lower 100 feet of the trunk being free from branches or unsightly excrescences. Experienced woodmen declare that the tree would weigh more than 100,000 tons and that it would "cut" 1,500,000 feet of clear board measure lumber, besides 100 cords of wood that could be gotten out of the limbs and waste.—St. Louis Republic.

TRIED TO BREAK RECORDS.

A Toboggan Slide That Will Likely Prove Fatal to Three.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—A special to The Sun from Colorado Springs, Colo., says: Richard Woods, a Manitowoc driver, and two other men, tried to break all previous records of speed in descending Pikes Peak, on a contrivance called a toboggan by the railroad men. This consists of a flat board nailed over a groove which fits closely on the rack rail of the cog road. Below 50 feet there is a sharp turn at the top of Son-of-a-Gun hill, the steepest point in the whole road. Here the brake must have become useless, for the toboggan with its human freight, shot down the incline beyond all control. At the first slight turn the frail board jumped from the rails, leaping into the air for a fearful distance and throwing the three men away out over the mountain side. None of the men struck the earth within 80 feet of the track, and one of them, Wood, landed fully 75 feet away.

The surface there is entirely rough, broken rock, with jagged edges. The men struck on this, being terribly cut and bruised. All three may die.

Even With the Lightning Rod Men.

A gang of lightning rod sharks made an attempt to rod a farmer's house against his will Saturday, but got the worst of the bargain. The farmer is an old soldier, living 10 miles south of this city, named John Snyder. On Thursday one man called and inquired who the owner was, got a drink of water and departed. The next day another called and proposed to make the farmer a present of 100 feet of rod, charging him 75 cents a foot for 10 feet and charging him extra for the necessary points, insisting that the farmer sign a contract for the balance. This he refused to do, and the fellow left. Saturday two more men drove up to his place, threw out rods and tools and proceeded to put up the rods. The farmer objected, but they claimed to have an order to do the work and laughed him to scorn. Snyder got his gun, and covering the man in the wagon, who had drawn a revolver, he ordered him to clear out or he would let daylight through him. The fellow drove off at a lively rate, leaving his pal at the mercy of the farmer, who served him in like manner, and now the farmer has 40 feet of lightning rods to sell.—Warsaw (Ills.) Cor. St. Louis Republic.

Love For the Zigzag.

The straight line is an abomination to the Chinese. They endeavor to avoid it in their streets and buildings and have banished it completely where country field paths are concerned. They will always substitute a curve whenever possible, or they will torture it into a zigzag.

In districts not devastated by the Tai Pings nor subject to the influence of the foreigner, the houses and temples are characterized by curved, often peaked, roofs, ornamented with fantastic modifications of the "myriad stroke pattern." The inhabitants of such regions are soon found to have a mental world to correspond. The straight line is scouted. They think in curves and zigzags. To the Chinese mind the straight line is suggestive of death and demons. It belongs not to the heaven above nor to the earth beneath. In a true horizon line are seen the "undulations of the dragon." Therefore, argue the Chinese, the straight line pertains to hades.—Contemporary Review.

Hope Without Faith.

"Oh, doctor, I have sent for you, certainly; still I must confess I have not the slightest faith in modern medical science."

"Oh, that doesn't matter in the least. You see, a mule has no faith in the veterinary surgeon, and yet he cures him all the same."—Tagliche Rundschau.

Mrs. Southworth's Home.

Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, who is now nearly 74 years old, loves Washington, her home, better than any place on earth. One would hardly believe that her cottage contained 14 rooms, all endeared to her by long and eventful associations, but best of all she loves her study, where she can watch the grand old Potomac with its high banks and picturesque, changing views. She seldom writes now, but instead reads, and her favorite books are the lives of Christ, and the comparisons she makes of the various histories of his life. Prospect cottage remains unchanged, for Mrs. Southworth, save for the needed repairs from year to year, keeps intact the features of her old home. Recently one of the grand old trees near the veranda was blown down, and this and the destruction of a natural flower garden on the steep hillside have caused Mrs. Southworth to mourn as for some old friends.—Washington Correspondent.

Bullet Waves.

One of the interesting results of the recent experiments in England in photographing flying bullets has been to show that the disturbance in the air travels faster than the bullet itself.

The photographs exhibit air waves in advance of the bullets, even when the latter are moving faster than the velocity of sound.

In one case where the bullet was moving considerably faster than sound travels in the air it was preceded by an atmospheric disturbance which, at the moment the photograph was taken, was half an inch in advance of the point of the bullet. Even when the bullets were traveling four times as fast as sound the atmospheric disturbance kept ahead of them.—Youth's Companion.

A Reminder of Cold Weather.

The first installment of children's sleds and possibly the only one to be made this season by the Maine Manufacturing company at Fairfield is now being decorated and made ready for the market. They say that last year they made about 47,000 of these sleds, and this year the output will be less than 6,000.—Bangor Commercial.

GREELEY AND RAYMOND.

There is not a paper in all this country that possesses the individuality that characterized the New York Tribune when Horace Greeley was its editor or The Times when edited by Henry J. Raymond.—Kansas Commoner.

The day of great newspapers, edited by great editors, such as Horace Greeley and Henry J. Raymond, has passed away.—Chicago Tribune.

We had the pleasure of knowing both Greeley and Raymond. We were more intimate with the first named of these contemporary editors than with the other. They were able, sincere, energetic, public spirited Americans. Neither of them was a cherub. Mr. Greeley, good man! said "damn" more than once as we regret to remember, and when he called Raymond "the little villain" that cool headed man retorted in language which many people have forgotten. The two did not get along very well together when one was editor of The Tribune and the other among his assistants, nor afterward when they were editors of rival papers, though both were of the same party. Neither of them was an "ideal editor," or a very deep thinker, or a first class statesman or a notable scholar.

Greeley was a stronger and more stirring writer than Raymond, but Raymond was a far more skillful editor than Greeley. Greeley was more fervent in mind than Raymond; Raymond was more judicious and nimble than Greeley. Raymond, when he was a member of the legislature, and the speaker of the assembly, and the lieutenant governor of the state, and a member of congress, and a delegate to state or national conventions, gave evidence that he was greatly more ingenious in politics than Greeley, who, indeed, during the brief period of his service in congress, did not win distinction. Raymond always kept up a close intimacy with those astute political managers, Thurlow Weed and William H. Seward, while Greeley was unable to stay long in the "political firm of Seward, Weed & Greeley," in which, as he said when he left the concern, he had been a "junior partner."

Greeley was more of a philosopher than Raymond, who, in turn, was more of a man of affairs than Greeley. Greeley was often compared with Benjamin Franklin, though he did not possess Franklin's scientific quality; Raymond might be compared, in many respects, with Franklin Pierce, though he was not of Pierce's politics. Greeley had certain eccentricities of manner and action; Raymond was always regarded as a very level headed man. Both of them belonged to the antislavery school in politics; but Greeley's fervor in the cause far surpassed Raymond's. Greeley had in his earlier years been a champion of "social reforms" which were bitterly denounced by Raymond, who, however, in the latter years of his life, began to look with favor upon certain theories of socialism. Greeley was negligent in his dress; Raymond was natty. Both Greeley and Raymond were founders of New York daily papers which still exist, but neither of which is now characterized by the traits of its founder.

We agree with The Kansas Commoner that none of the New York papers now possesses the individuality of Greeley's Tribune or Raymond's Times, and no one of them can possess it, for both of these memorable individuals long ago departed for "the undiscovered country from whose bourn no traveler returns" after it had been their lot "to grunt and sweat under a weary life," but that is not a reason why we should despair of the American press. We may yet have editors not unworthy to be compared with the greatest and best we have ever had.

A true man was Horace Greeley, strong, earnest and good—honored be his memory! An able man was Henry Jarvis Raymond—clear headed, quick witted, reasonable, temperate, genial and highly accomplished—let his name shine in the editorial galaxy!—New York Sun.

Maria Pettini.

Italian critics think that they have among them a young singer who is to create a great sensation. Her name is Maria Pettini, and her only instructor has been her mother, who has been a singer of some distinction. Recently the Roman Academy of St. Cecilia offered a diploma of merit, and Signorina Pettini entered the competition. The audience before whom she sang was the most critical one Rome could show, but her hearers were so delighted that, contrary to their usual custom, they applauded loudly. The diploma was awarded to her without one dissenting voice.—Rome Correspondent.

Mrs. Gage's Hope.

Mrs. Matilda Joslyn Gage, who is the representative of the Woman Suffrage party for the state of New York, is an older worker in the cause than Susan B. Anthony. She told the New York City league the other evening that Miss Anthony was not favorably impressed with the idea of woman suffrage at first. Mrs. Gage bases a hope for general interest in the work upon this fact, for she says, "If Susan could change so decidedly, I don't see why other people may not."

Orders For Women.

A curious fact is brought to light by the Manchester Guardian in connection with the reception of the Order of St. Isabella of Portugal by Mme. Carnot. The order is reserved exclusively for women, and in the bestowal of its insignia the acquiescence of the queen as well as of the king of Portugal is required. It is therefore the daughter of the Comte de Paris who has conferred this distinction upon the wife of the president of the French republic. Prussia, Russia, Austria, the German empire and Bavaria all have orders specially reserved for women who distinguish themselves.—London Queen.

PULPIT AND PEW.

There are 1,289,728 negroes who are members of the Methodist church in this country.

It is reported that a new church, called the American Methodist church, is about to be organized by some white and colored ministers in the south.

Bishop Tucker of Uganda ordained seven men to the ministry recently, two of whom are the greatest chiefs in the country and govern great provinces.

The Rev. Charles Houston opened a ball in Wolverine, Mich., recently, with a prayer in which he asked that none might be led away in their hours of amusement.

Sam Jones has been dropped as a member of the North Georgia conference. A pastorate in the conference is worth only $1,000 a year. Sam is making a great deal more than that on the road.

The Rev. Mr. White of Brooklyn, known to fame as the "marrying minister," who never turned away a loving couple, is dead. In his life he made 14,000 people more or less happy, as he claimed that none of those whom he united ever returned to revile him.

Bought Him When a Savage.

"Here is the best investment I ever made in my life," said C. Gentile as he took the extended hand of a stalwart young man with the features of the American Indian and introduced the gentleman as Dr. Carlos Montezuma. "One would not think I bought the doctor for $30. He was but five years of age then. It was in the summer of 1871. I was prospecting in Arizona, taking photographs of Indians and Aztec ruins and gathering curiosities. One day a band of Pimo Indians came into my den with this handsome fellow here, but he was not handsome then. He was painted in glaring colors, with rows of beads around his neck. I took a fancy to him as a genuine live curiosity. The Pimos wanted $30 for him. I tried to beat them down, but they insisted upon their price, and I gave it. The little chap cried for a day or two, thinking I was going to kill him, and he laughs now when he explains that he took me for the devil."

Dr. Montezuma is in the government service and is now on his way from the Colville reservation of Washington to the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., where he will enter upon the duties of school physician. The doctor was partly educated in Chicago in the public schools, where he spent five years, and later took the course in the Chicago Medical college, entering the Indian service of the government after his graduation. He says his life will be dedicated to the service of the Indians, and he will never be perfectly satisfied until the government properly educates the young of his people.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Turkish Priest In the Toils.

In the Turkish village on Midway plaisance there is a muezzin named Drenar Effendi, a priest, very zealous in the performance of his religious duties. Yesterday afternoon he was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct and given a ride in the patrol wagon to Woodlawn station.

The trouble arose from a growing disposition on the part of the Turks to treat the duties of their religion with indifference. When Drenar Effendi called the Turks to prayer yesterday afternoon they did not respond with what seemed to him a proper amount of alacrity, and incensed at their slowness he seized a club and began to beat them over the head. This attracted a large crowd at once, and a guard arrested the priest. By the time he reached the station the Turks began to be very much frightened at the thought of their priest's being locked up like a common criminal in a Christian jail, so a delegation was sent over to Woodlawn to bail him out in time for the sunset service, attendance upon which was secured by moral suasion instead of a club.—Chicago News-Record.

Prince of Detectives.

Vidocq, the great French detective, was born in Arras in 1775. He began life as a baker and early became the terror of his companions by his athletic frame and violent disposition. At the same time he was a notorious thief, and after many disgraceful adventures he enlisted in the army. In 1796 he returned to Paris with some money, which, however, he soon squandered. Next he was sentenced at Lille to eight years' hard labor for forgery, but repeatedly escaped, and in 1808 he became connected with the Paris police as a detective.

His previous career enabled him to render important services, and he was appointed chief of the safety brigade, chiefly composed of reprieved convicts, which purged Paris of the many dangerous classes. In 1818 he received a full pardon; and his connection with this service lasted until about 1828, when he settled at St. Mande as a paper manufacturer. Soon after the revolution of 1830 he became a political detective, but with little success. In 1848 he was again employed under the republican government, but he died penniless in 1857.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Cinderella and Her Slipper.

Yes, I know you are saying to yourself, "That headline would have looked and sounded better had it been 'Cinderella and the Glass Slipper,'" but the writer has been making a critical study of this most interesting nursery story and finds that the famous "glass" slipper properly has no place in it. The "glass" slipper is really the "fur," "cloth" or "felt" slipper, the word "glass" having been substituted through a strange mistranslation of the story. In the original it was written pantoufle en vair, which, being translated, would be "the fur slipper." The translator, however, wrote it as if it had been pantoufle en verre, making the "little cinder girl's" fur foot covering one of glass, which, it must be admitted, would be one quite appropriate to a fairy.—St. Louis Republic.

Street Cars Run by Natural Gas.

The cars are of the ordinary size, but are constructed entirely of natural gas pipes, ranging in size from six inches down. These hollow tubes are neatly carved, so that to the average observer the fact that they are built of such material is not noticed. These pipes are heavily charged with gas, and with the aid of a boiler and the engines at work beneath the floor it is said a run of 30 miles can be made without refilling the tubes. A speed can be obtained equal to that of cars run by the electric method. It said that one of the latter will cost $6,000 for its construction, while a gas car can be made for $2,000. Either artificial or natural gas can be used as the propelling power. It is further asserted by its inventor that to operate it a day of 12 hours will cost but $1.14, while the expense of running an electric car for the same period will be $6.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

The Stupid Husband of a Noted Singer.

Catalani's husband, a handsome Frenchman, was even more unintellectual than his wife—he was stupid. Once, having found the pitch of the piano too high, she said after the rehearsal to her husband: "The piano is too high. Will you see that it is made lower before the concert?"

When the evening came, Catalani was annoyed to find that the piano had not been altered. Her husband sent for the carpenter, who declared that he had sawed off two inches from each leg, as he had been ordered to do. "Surely it can't be too high now, my dear!" said the stupid husband soothingly.—Youth's Companion.

The City and the Country Dude.

A city dude seldom does anything worth chronicling, for he is universally regarded as empty headed; incapable of even arousing genuine curiosity. But a country dude—well, he is pretty certain to be interesting. Here is a specimen: A Buckfield young man recently tried to lift his carriage out of the mud while standing on the axle to save soiling his shoes.—Bar Harbor Record.

Why Children Are Always Doing Things.

Temptation, which is continual in children because everything is new to them, is nothing else than the force of an idea and the motive impulse that accompanies it.—Alfred Fouillee in Popular Science Monthly.

A curious box was recently found amid the ruins of Pompeii. The box was marble or alabaster, about 2 inches square and closely sealed. When opened, it was found to be full of pomatum or grease, hard, but very fragrant. The smell resembled somewhat that of the roses, but was much more fragrant.

American pioneers were God fearing and Bible loving. They staked out town lots in 22 Bethels, 10 Jordans, 9 Jerichos, 14 Bethlehems, 22 Goshens, 21 Shilohs, 11 Carmels, 18 Tabors and Mount Tabors, 22 Zions and Mount Zions, 26 Edens, 30 Lebanons, 20 Hebrews and 36 Sharons.

A Liverpool policeman, who, as he thought, swallowed a sixpence 13 years ago, recently had a severe pain in his throat. A fit of coughing came on, and the long lost coin, half of its original thickness, was released from his throat.

There is an unknown quantity of silver in the bay of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil—a silver mine, in fact, of, comparatively speaking, unlimited dimensions, and every ship that drops anchor there cuts into the bed of ore.—Exchange.

At Redditch, England, 20,000 people make more than 100,000,000 needles a year, and they are made and exported so cheaply that England has no rival and practically monopolizes the trade.

thing to say to us. "All men may die, but I shall live," is the dream of heedlessness. "All men must die, and therefore I," is the fact that is to be recognized and prepared for.

But we can become indifferent even to this "last enemy." It is not the glum indifference of desperate despair, but the cheerful indifference of perfect faith. If we have no place to go to, it is hard to contemplate our exit. But if there is a better place, a residence in which will be added happiness, we may even shake hands with Death, tell him that our latchstring is always out and he will be welcome whenever he sees fit to come. It is the fear of taking a leap in the dark that bids us pause. But if we are sure of taking a leap into the light we can easily let go our hold on this rugged life and drop into the life to come. The sea may rage as it pleases if our next port of entry is heaven, and lurking accidents and diseases may come out of their hiding places into the open, for at the worst they can only do us a good turn by opening the door of a larger and better house to live in.—New York Herald.

The tortoise is not an animal one would naturally fix upon as likely to be afraid of rain, but it is singularly so. Twenty-four hours or more before rain falls the Galapagos tortoise makes for some convenient shelter. On a bright clear morning, when not a cloud is to be seen, the denizens of a tortoise farm on the African coast may be seen sometimes heading for the nearest overhanging rocks. When that happens, the proprietor knows that rain will come down during the day, and as a rule it comes down in torrents. The sign never fails. This presensation, to coin a word, which exists in many birds and beasts may be explained partly from the increasing weight of the atmosphere when rain is forming, partly by habits of living and partly from the need of moisture which is shared by all. The American catbird gives warning of an approaching thunderstorm by sitting on the low branches of the dogwood tree (whether this union of the feline with the canine is invariable the deponent sayeth not), uttering curious notes. Other birds, including the familiar robin, it is said, give similar evidence of an impending change in the weather.—Chicago Herald.

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS.

Be independent. Do not lean on others to do your thinking or to conquer your difficulties.

Trust to nothing but God and hard work. Inscribe on your banner, "Luck is a fool, pluck is a hero."

Spend less than you earn. Do not run in debt. Watch the little leaks, and you can live on your salary.

Make all the money you can honestly, do all the good you can with it while you live, and be your own executor.

Be punctual. Keep your appointments. Be there a minute before time if you have to lose your dinner to do it.

Work. The world is not going to pay you for loafing. Ninety per cent of what men call genius is only talent for hard work.

Enter into that business or trade which you like best and for which nature seems to have fitted you, providing it is honorable.

Be honest. Dishonesty seldom makes one rich, and when it does, riches is a curse. There is no such thing as dishonest success.

To Stop the Discord.

The prodigious and conflicting clamor of pianos in the main building at the World's fair is to cease, and only one piano will be played at a time in one portion of the music section. Each exhibitor will have his 10 or 15 minutes, and he will thus make no discords, as the other pianos and organs that are scheduled for the same time will be separated from him by some hundreds of feet and several partitions.

Skatemaking In Midsummer.

Manufacturers are this season receiving larger orders than ever for skates. One company received two orders in one week—one for 100,000 pairs and another for 50,000 pairs. This is the busy season for the manufacturer of skates.—Hardware.

Where the Blame Belongs.

One of the lovely nymphs who was floating about among the sylvan woods and streams during the summer has among her belongings a gown which the prosy man who pays the nymph's bills considers not a dream, but a very substantial reality, as it cost him $500 over and above the original price. That was the sum he paid for one of the horses that took cold while the carriage waited at the door of the modiste when the gown was being fitted. He had been clipped, and the illness resulted in his death. The owner of the "creation," however, thinks the unreasonable man should place the blame where it belongs—on the modiste of the fashionable horse.—New York Times.

This Year's Juicy Melons.

It is one comfort that financial stringency hasn't hoarded up and hidden away all the peaches and melons. The quality as to most fruits is hardly up to the customary mark this year, and a good many apples fail to attain their customary size and flavor. Even the tomato is inclined to indicate a little falling off. The watermelons are good. If the market does not show quite such huge ones as a few of the big southern melons seen here in most years at this season, the supply of good sized ones is abundant and the quality good.

The only criticism is that while they were probably harvested and sent north at the customary time not all of them for some reason have fully and completely ripened this time. In the heart of many of the sweetest will be found a streak or two of unripeness. But this criticism does not apply to all. Some of the southern melons are as sugary as they are juicy, and how good they are these hot days, especially after a few hours of cooling near the ice! Those who have not tried them in the morning before breakfast have something to learn of their excellence at that hour.—Hartford Times.

A Narrow Escape.

A narrow escape from "a mysterious dispensation of Providence" is reported in Aroostook county, where a farmer was tending a horse fork, unloading hay, with a lighted cigar in his mouth. He placed the fork, and as the forkful started it hit the cigar, which flew out of his mouth and went up with the hay. But his buildings are yet standing.—Lewiston Journal.

We have our opinions of people who are always pretending they want to hide from newspaper interviewers and reporters, and who abuse these nice young gentlemen and ladies as a nuisance. The fact is, it is the newspaper that makes people nowadays. The person who is never interviewed does not amount to much.

All this summer the German papers of America have been sadly exercised over the Weltausstellungssonntagsfragen. Their editors wax thin and pale. If the World's fair directors had known their action would give rise to a word like that, they never would have tried to open the show on Sunday.

A movement looking to the abolishment of free lunches is on foot among the New York State Liquor Dealers' association. They think apparently that it does not pay these hard times. The funny man of the New York Tribune suggests that they keep up the lunches and let the bar go.

The bill of A. J. Stoser, for $78 (boarding jurymen at $2 per day) which was allowed at a previous meeting at $58.50 was on motion reconsidered and the bill allowed in full.

The following resolution offered by Demers, and seconded by Kirsch was adopted: Be it

Resolved, That the amount of $1,040 be and the same is hereby appropriated out of the general fund in payment of the steam heat plant placed in the court house by W. F. Porter & Co. as per contract, conditional that said W. F. Porter & Co. shall agree to put in such additional radiation as shall be found necessary to heat the different rooms satisfactorily and as stipulated by the contract.

Kirsch moved and Demers seconded that the assessment of T. B. Walker be reduced to $85,000. Motion carried.

The assessment of E. J. Locken for goods and merchandise in the City of Crookston was reduced to $500.

The bill of R. J. Montague for services rendered as attorney in behalf of the county in the case of Cooke & Hammond vs. Polk county was allowed at $80.50. Oppegaard & Lindem voting in the negative on the ground that the expense was unnecessarly incurred.

The county auditor was authorized to draw his warrant for the amount of fee necessary for the filing of certain liens held by the county with the different town clerks.

The county road and bridge committee was instructed to investigate the condition of the bridge accross Red Lake river at Red Lake Falls with power to act.

The county auditing board submitted their report of the condition of the county treasury and consisted of the following items:

Can Animals Blush?

It is hard to tell whether animals blush, for their faces are covered so thickly with fur, or hair, or feathers, that we do not know what may be going on beneath hide or skin. Were they as barefaced as man is, it is more than likely we should see them blush, especially the more bashful sort, and those with some sense of shame.

It is the case that the faces of vultures flush, and several of the monkeys become purple with rage, which may be considered as a kind of blushing. This may be proved any day in the monkey house in Central Park, where the monkeys seem to fly it to a passion on the smallest provocation.

CURES OTHERS

M. W. Scott, Esq., of the U. S. Marshall's Office, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "For many years my wife has been a constant sufferer from indigestion, sick headache, nervous prostration and all other complaints that the female sex is heir to, and, after trying many remedies and doctors with but little or no relief, I persuaded her to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' She was so out of heart she returned the answer that it would be like all the rest—of no good; but on my account, she said she would try it, so I got one bottle each; and before she had used half of a bottle she felt that it was benefiting her, and she has continued to improve ever since, and now thinks it the most wonderful remedy on earth for her sex, and recommends it to all suffering females. She has not been so well in ten years.
I write this without any solicitation and with a free, good will, so that you may let all who may suffer know what it has done for her." Sold by medicine dealers everywhere.

TUMBLING UPWARD.

A Peculiar Danger to Which Deep Sea Fish are Exposed.

It is only reasonable to suppose that the ability to sustain this enormous pressure can only be acquired by animals after generations of gradual migrations from shallow waters. Those forms that are brought up by the dredge from the depths of the ocean are usually killed and distorted by the enormous and rapid diminution of pressure in their journey to the surface, and it is extremely probable that shallow water forms would be similarly killed and crushed out of shape were they suddenly plunged into very deep water.

The fish that live at these enormous depths are, in consequence of the enormous pressure, liable to a curious form of accident. If, in chasing their prey or for any other reason, they rise to a considerable distance above the floor of the ocean, the gases of their swimming bladder become considerably expanded, and their specific gravity very greatly reduced; up to a certain limit the muscles of their bodies can counteract the tendency to float upward and enable the fish to regain its proper sphere of life at the bottom; but beyond that limit the muscles are not strong enough to drive the body downward, and the fish, becoming more and more distended as it goes, is gradually killed on its long and involuntary journey to the surface of the sea.

The deep sea fish, then, are exposed to a danger that no other animal in the world is subject to, namely, that of tumbling upward. That such accidents do occasionally occur is evidenced by the fact that some fish, which are known to be true deep sea forms, were discovered dead and floating on the surface of the ocean long before our modern investigations were commenced.—Popular Science Monthly.

A View of Matrimony.

What a pity it is that our girls are brought up to regard marriage as almost as inevitable as death! It handicaps them from the start in their intercourse with men. While they always have the feeling of being on parade for inspection there can be no naturalness or simplicity. If girls were taught to regard matrimony as possible but not inevitable; taught also that a career in which work, with achievement, is possible to a woman; that life without matrimony may still be a life of usefulness and happiness, I fancy there would be more ease of manner in the social relations of men and women, and more beneficial friendships between them.—New York Recorder.

A French Duel.

If the French are prone to challenge each other to fight duels on the smallest provocation, they are also prone to bring them to an end with very little fighting.

It is credibly related that, on the occasion of a duel between two members of the chamber of deputies, one of the combatants was taken with a fit of bleeding at the nose just as they came upon the field.

"Blood!" exclaimed one of the seconds of the other man. "Blood has been shed. The honor of my principle has been satisfied."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The Puzzle Solved.
Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

SUNSET.

I watched the rays of the setting sun
One beautiful autumn day,
They streamed like a shower of silver-threads,
Then gradually faded away.
Me thought they seemed like tokens of love
Sent forth in various number
To earth, from the smiling, blushing sun
Ere sinking to its slumber.

But hanging low in the western sky
Was a great dark purple cloud,
Like a demon, watching its victim die.
Tho' clothed in a morning shroud.
And sailing forth on rapid wing
Through gasping breath of dying day,
It captured and conquered the gorgeous king
Thus the end of that autumn day.

CUPID'S SERVITOR.

Like a batch of bread made with stale yeast—sodden and sour—was the face of Clymer Ames. He was the very last man you would have supposed to be the salaried servitor of Cupid. Yet, so fond ot paradoxes is Fate, that this man, who has eschewed Love, made his bread and butter by serving him. But like all who wait on Love with interested motives, he received nothing but dross for his pains.

Yet one day it happened that this fickle master had placed before his eyes those illuminating glasses which turn the common sky into heaven, which convert life into a lyric and woman into a creature of perfume and melody and light.

But the next day, as one may see, these glasses were taken off again, and Clymer Ames had never looked through them since.

Yet every day from 8 in the morning till 5 in the afternoon this man, who could have killed Eros for his perfidious conduct, was obliged to toil in his behalf. He was, in short, the clerk who issued the marriage licenses. When he first went into the service of the greatest of cosmopolitans, Cupid, he dedicated to him a very bad chirography, a totally uneducated perception and an indefatigable industry.

In the course of a few weeks spent behind the little window in the county Court's spacious apartments, the chirography of this young man began to improve. So did his perceptions.

He could tell, when a man approached him, whether he had family pride or not; whether or not he was sentimental and impatient; whether he was inclined for hymeneal display; whether he was happy or fearful; whether he was going to marry a woman of whom he was proud or only one with whom he was in love.

Clymer Ames, who at first, saw only the stage-carpentering and scene-shifting in this drama of the emotions, began to wonder how it would look from the front. He found himself getting very curious as to what a man did and said before—armed with the age, name, maternal and paternal parents' names of his bride—he came to ask for legal permission to be forever happy.

It would be very easy, of course for Clymer Ames to get that legal right. In his capacity of lover he could approach himself in his capacity as clerk, and without unnecessary embarrassment or hesitation ask for a license and get it. To be sure, he could not well be on both sides of the window at once, and he had some doubts about the complete regularity of a license granted under circumstances in which the applicant associated with such unseemly familiarity with his superior, the clerk.

This, however, was a difficulty which he felt could be overcome. But what was the fifth act. What led up to it? What did a lover do through the four preceding acts?

Clymer Ames determined to find out.

Fate, which is sometimes kind only to be cruel, aided him. It went further and abetted.

Lydia Eastwater lived in the new block but one to where Clymer Ames boarded, and she came down to see the daughter of the landlady and play tennis with her on the lawn. Clymer, who had hitherto detested tennis, felt convinced as soon as he saw Lydia Eastwater on the green that exercise was the only thing for him after his long office hours.

The rest of the summer he put on white flannel as soon as he got home, and he all but slept with a tennis bat in his hand.

"I guess it must be pretty dull staying in the office all day this hot weather," said Lydia Eastwater one night when they stood together on the same side of the white tennis net.

"It's dull enough. But nothing to what it used to be, you know. I have something to look forward to now."

"Have you?" said Lydia Eastwater innocently, picking a bug off her red and white skirt. "I'm sure I'm glad of it."

"It's the tennis at night I look forward to. It brightens up my whole day. Don't you care for it, too?"

"Me?" ejaculated Lydia with ungrammatical nonchalence. "Oh, yes, I like tennis well enough. I wish though that these people would come back and go to playing. Standing around on a tennis ground till you are ready to drop isn't any pleasanter than standing around anywhere else."

She flirted out one foot as she talked and revealed a marvelous stocking. Clymer wondered if the twenty-two fellows who had that day applied to him for the sanction of the law to their bliss had experienced any such difficulties in the first act—he felt himself nearing the end of that part of the drama.

If Lydia Eastwater would only show by some sign, however slight, that her heart throbbed as his did he would be willing to have the curtain rung down for the entre'act and let the orchestra play awhile.

"It is not because I play tennis that I am happy," he exclaimed explosively, "but because I play tennis with you."

"Oh," cried Miss Eastwater, as she tied the yellow bow on her hat, "Isn't it too bad then that I am going away tomorrow for the rest of the summer?"

Going for the rest of the summer! Clymer was sure none of those twenty-two happy men with licenses in their pockets had ever known such suffering as this. He leaned against a tree. He could not remember feeling so strange since that day he fainted in the office, after being up all night with the poor agent who had the rheumatic fever

"Then you are not sorry to go?" He whispered. "You will not miss me?"

Lydia Eastwater tied the yellow bow once more. It was growing into a deep twilight. The one bar of red in the west was all there was left of the day. She hit a moth that fluttered by in the dusk.

"Why, yes, I shall care. I shall care very much indeed." She looked straight at him, and the red in the west got into her cheeks. Clymer started forward throbbing with a new life. He forgot all about the first act and even about the fifth one. All he saw was a girl's eyes. All he felt was her soft lips.

Then the other players came walking across the lawn in the twilight, and the next day Miss Eastwater went away.

Clymer wrote to her, of course. He stole the time in which to do this from the county. But the answers were not just what he had expected they would be.

They were full of pleasant gossip and even of the expression of those girlish opinions which most young maidens hold, and which so strongly resemble copybook mottoes. But she said very little of just the sort of thing that Clymer desired her to say. He consoled himself by looking at every applicant for a license who thrust his face in at the little window and reflecting:

"Ah! my man, you look happy now. But I know what you have been through! You may not believe it, but I myself have experienced the rapture of a fitting close to the first act, and am now in the midst of the perplexities which are so necessary to the progress of the play. My dear fellow, take this filled-out blank with my blessing. It looks very common-place, perhaps, to the uninitiated. But you and I are perfectly aware that it is the passport to heaven."

None of these remarks were audible, of course. They were the combined soliloquies of Clymer the lover and Clymer the clerk. The man who supplied the office with legal blanks stood aghast at this time at the number consumed in what was technically known as Cupid's department.

They seemed so remarkably in excess of the number of applications recorded that the night clerk might, with some show of justice, have been accused of throwing them into the waste basket.

And it is true that they did go there, but not until a deal of labor had been expended upon them, not until the blank spaces revealed the fact that Clymer Ames who lived in a certain city, township, county and State, and who was of such and such an age, and without legal hinderance or incumbrance of a marital sort, received herewith permission from the clerk to marry Miss Lydia Eastwater, whose qualifications were then set down.

One day a stranger entered the office—a fine fellow, with the elision of the "I" and a swing in the gait.

"Man of importance, of property, of temper and enthusiasm," said the clerk to himself after his usual manner of summing up his customers.

"I want a marriage license," said the young man gayly and peremptorily.

"Name," said the clerk, trying to be perfunctory, but actually throbbing with sympathy with this happy young animal.

"Alfred Sidney Johnson Clayton."

"Name of lady?"

"Lydia Ernestine Eastwater."

The clerk went on filling out the rest of the blank and did not move a muscle. The lover—but there was no lover except the young man who went out swinging his shoulders as he went.

And so the peace of Cupid's servitor became as was mentioned at first, like a batch of bread made from stale yeast. And though he works for love, he and his clerk do not speak when they meet, and the capricious boy has even been seen to fold his wings closer about him with an air of contempt when he looked at Clymer Ames, clerk of the court and issuer of marriage licenses.—Omaha World.

Onions.

One day I was taken with chills and headache. My quinine-box was empty, and I was looking forward to a restless night. In desperation I peeled a raw onion and slowly ate it, then went to bed, with warm feet and an extra quilt. I was asleep in five minutes, and awakened in the morning quite well. Our homely but strong friend will be appreciated in time as a medicine, and if agriculturists would turn their attention to raising a model onion, with the strong scent taken out that taints the breath so unpleasantly, families would be putting such pills in the cellar by the barrel, and the doctors would take to onion farming. The onion acts as a cathartic and deuretic, and may help to break up a cold or lessen the bad symptoms. A doctor says; "I always store a barrel of onions in my cellar in the fall. We have them cooked twice a week, and whoever of the family is threatened with a cold eats some onions raw. If this vegetable were generally eaten raw there would be no diphtheria, gout, rheumatism, kidney or stomach trouble. I know the young men and women are afraid to eat them. One young man went so far as to say to me; 'If my wife ate onions I would get a divorce the same day.'"—Rock Islander.

Ten Temper-Tacks.

It is well to fasten one's temper down so that it will not fly before every gust of anger that blows upon it, and for fastening I wonder how these temper-tacks would hold?

Prudence, because of the afterwhile.

Charity, that it may not fly without cause.

Self-respect, that it may not debase you and shatter your ideal woman.

Perseverance, that the contrariness of circumstances may prevent your growing desperate.

Patience, that the weakness of others may not rob you of your self-control.

Judgment, that loosening the will may not affect your whole life.

Unselfishness, in case your weakness pains those you love.

Candor, that you may explain condemning circumstances.

Courage, to be strong amid disappointments.

Sympathy, that you may have compassion upon the unfortunate instead of berating them.—Toronto Globe.

A NEW ENGLAND MIRACLE.

A RAILROAD ENGINEER RELATES HIS EXPERIENCE.

The Wonderful Story Told by Fred C. Vose and his Mother-in-Law to a Reporter of the Boston Herald. Both are Restored After Years of Agony.

The vast health giving results already attributed by the newspapers throughout this country and Canada to Dr. Williams' "Pink Pills for Pale People" have been recently supplemented by the cases of two confirmed invalids in one household in a New England town. The names of these people are Fred C. Vose, his wife and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Oliver C. Holt, of Peterboro, members of the same household.

To the Herald's reporter who was sent to investigate his remarkable cure Mr. Vose said: "I am 37 years old, and have been railroading for the Fitchburg for 15 years. Since boyhood I have been troubled with a weak stomach. For the past 7 years I have suffered terribly and constantly. My stomach would not retain food; my head ached constantly and was so dizzy I could scarcely stand; my eyes were blurred; I had a bad heartburn, and my breath was offensive. I had physicians, but they failed to help me. My appetite gave out, and four years ago I developed palpitation of the heart, which seriously affected my breathing. Had terrible pains in my back and had to make water many times a day. I finally developed rheumatic signs and couldn't sleep nights. If I lay down my heart would go pit-a-pat at a great rate, and many nights I did not close my eyes at all. I was broken down in body and discouraged in spirit, when some time in February last, I got a couple of boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished the first box I noticed that the palpitation of my heart, which had bothered me so that I couldn't breathe at times, began to improve. I saw that in going to my home on the hill from the depot, which was previously an awful task, my heart did not beat so violently and I had more breath when I reached the house. After the second and third boxes I grew better in every other respect. My stomach became stronger, the gas belching was not so bad, my appetite and digestion improved, and my sleep became nearly natural and undisturbed. I have continued taking the pills three times a day ever since last March, and to-day I am feeling better than at any time during the last eight years. I can confidently and conscientiously say that they have done me more good, and their good effects are more permanent, than any medicine I have ever taken. My rheumatic pains in legs and hands are all gone. The pains in the small of my back, which were so bad at times that I couldn't stand up straight, have nearly all vanished, and I find my kidneys are well regulated by them. This is an effect not claimed for the pills in the circular, but in my case they brought it about. I am feeling 100 per cent better in every shape and manner."

The reporter next saw Mrs. Holt, who said: "I am 57 years old, and for 14 years past I have had an intermittent heart trouble. Three years ago I had nervous prostration, by which my heart trouble was increased so badly that I had to lie down most of the time. My stomach also gave out, and I had continual and intense pain from the back of my neck to the end of my backbone. In 14 weeks, I spent $300 for doctor bills and medicines, but my health continued so miserable that I gave up doctoring in despair. I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills last winter, and the first box made me feel ever so much better. I have taken the pills since February, with the result of stopping entirely the pain in the spine and in the region of the liver. My stomach is again normal, and the palpitation of the heart has troubled me but three times since I commenced the pills."

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headaches, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ont.—Boston Herald.

Small Social Duties.

A distinct mark of good breeding which young girls are apt to treat rather lightly is what we may call the small social obligation.

Every girl who has been well brought up will of course perform her important duties, be they social or otherwise. She will call to see her friend who has been in trouble. She could not fail to answer promptly in writing any written invitation, or to return a first visit in due time, whether the acquaintance offered her be acceptable or not; but there are a thousand and one slight occasions constantly arising which one, unless she is quite punctilious in such matters, as she should be, is apt to fail to recognize as obligations.

There is no courtesy that may with good taste be either accepted or declined without polite acknowledgment. The receipt through the mails of a newspaper addressed by a friend, and containing a marked paragraph of interest to either or both, should be answered promptly by note, unless, for instance, the recipient should happen to have another paper or magazine holding some further notice of the same subject. In that case the sending of this, with article marked, should be a grateful and sufficient acknowledgment of the first.

Ordinary notes of regret sent in answer to formal invitations need, of course, no reply, being themselves final answers. But when a friend declines an invitation, assigning as a reason for so doing that her little brother has fallen and broken his collar-bone, or that she herself has met with an accident, an early note expressing regret and interest—or a visit, if the degree of intimacy requires it—is absolutely obligatory.—Harper's Young People.

Always Fond of Nursing People.

Florence Nightingale, the world-famous nurse, was born in Florence, Italy, in 1823, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. Her father, William Edward Shore, of England, inherited the estates of his grand-uncle, Peter Nightingale, and in pursuance of his will assumed the name Nightingale. As the child of wealthy parents, Miss Nightingale was well educated. From early childhood the care of the sick was a favorite occupation of hers, and in 1849 she entered, as a voluntary nurse, a school of deaconesses to qualify herself to minister to the sick. In 1854, at the solicitation of Secretary of War Sidney Herbert, she went to Constantinople as the superintendent of a staff of nurses to care for the soldiers of Great Britain who were wounded in the Crimean war. By her rare executive ability and thorough knowledge of what was necessary she made the hospital, which was in the most deplorable state, a model in the thoroughness and perfection of its appointments. So immense were her labors that she frequently stood for twenty hours in succession giving directions. Notwithstanding this her pleasant smile and kind words to the sick made her almost idolized by the army. She returned to England Sept. 8, 1856. Her services have secured her the sincerest gratitude of the English people, and a world renown. Queen Victoria sent her a letter of thanks, with a superb jewel. A subscription of $250,000 was raised to found an institution for the training of nurses under her direction, and the soldiers of the army, by a penny contribution, raised a sum sufficient to erect a statue to her honor, which she refused to allow.

Serious Defect.

A hungry pedestrian had put up for the night at a wayside inn, and found the supper rather scanty, the most substantial part of it being a single sausage.

With a faultfinding look and gesture he called the innkeeper to his side.

"Is that the best you can do in the way of sausage?" asked the traveler.

"Why, now," said the host, "isn't it good?"

"Oh, it's good enough, perhaps, but the ends of it don't suit me."

"The ends! What's the matter with them?"

"Too near together," said the hungry man, and the innkeeper took the hint.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

RESUME OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Condensed Record of the Important Transactions of Our National Lawmakers—The Work Done in Both Branches.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The proceedings in the house to-day were full of exciting incidents. Mr. Bland being unable to secure a quorum, concluded to allow the debate on the bill to proceed, at the same time declaring that he would return to the assault to-morrow. Two sensational speeches followed, one by Mr. Pence of Colorado, who denounced the Republicans for submitting to the crack of ex-Speaker Reed's whip, and warned him if the election of a president were thrown into the house in 1896 he would rue his filibustering course, and the other by Mr. Fithian of Illinois, who condemned in the severest terms the action of his Democratic colleagues who were taking part in the filibuster. Toward the close of the session Mr. Pence's reflections on Messrs. Pickler and Ellis (Or.) drew forth from a statement which Mr. Pence characterized as "absolutely untrue." He was twice called to order and the house, by a vote, refused to allow him to proceed. It is probable that Mr Pence's speech will be the occasion of further comment to-morrow. A resolution introduced by Mr. Boutelle for the recall of Minister Willis from Hawaii. It recites the antipathy the United States has always expressed to intervention by a foreign minister in its domestic affairs and the propriety of not enforcing upon a weak power what we obect to from a strong power. It cites the praiseworty forbearance of the Hawaiian government toward Mr. Willis and the specialties of commerce and kindred that bind the United States to these islands, and concludes that it shall be resolved, "That "is the sense of this house that most sacred obligations of good faith, the highest mutual interests of the United States and the friendly government of Hawaii that Minister Willis shall be recalled. A bill to ratify the agreement for the purchase of lands from the Yankton tribe of Sioux Indians for settlement has been introduced by Representative Lucas of South Dakota. It proposes to appropriate $600,000, making $100,000 immediately available.

Washington, Feb. 28. — Mr. Pence's speech of yesterday in which he struck right and left at his colleagues in the house cut a prominent figure in to-day's proceedings. Mr. Pence's reference to Mr. Hainer had been incorrectly reported, and rising to a question of privilege he took occasion to apologize for the personalities he had indulged in, but Mr. Cooper of Indiana was not satisfied, and gave him a severe scoring. Again today Mr. Bland was unable to muster a quorum on his motion to close debate on the seigniorage bill, so he allowed the debate to run on without limit.

The remains of the historic Kearsarge will be raised from Roncador reef if the house committee on naval affairs has its way. To-day the committee voted to report favorably the bill of Representative Blair of New Hampshire, but was more generous than Mr. Blair proposed. While his bill would appropriate $30,000 for the undertaking, the committee decided to raise the sum to $45,000 with a proviso that the wrecking company shall receive not more than $10,000 if the attempt is a failure.

There was a warm discussion in the house committee on invalid pensions today over the proposition of Representative Pickler of South Dakota that the files of the pension bureau should be open to pensioners and their attorneys for examination. The vote of the committee was against the bill, and unfavorable report will be made to the house on the ground of the labor the bill would impose on the pension bureau. Mr Pickler intends to make a minority report to the house, and Republican members undoubtedly will make a strong fight in favor of the rule.

The senate held another brief session in which nothing of importance was accomplished, and at 1:20 o'clock adjourned, after an executive session of half an hour, in order that the caucus might be continued. A bill introduced by Senator Brice compels the report on the manifests of coasting vessels on the great lakes of the loading and unloading of cargoes at intermediate points not shown in clearance papers

Washington, March 1.—In the house Mr. Bland moved to dispense with further proceedings under the call and on that motion Mr. Reed forced the yeas and nays. Further proceedings under the call were dispensed with—188 to 3—and the vote then recurred upon Mr. Bland's demand for the previous question on the motion to limit debate. The dead-lock was broken on this vote after two weeks of filibustering. The demand for the previous question on Mr. Bland's motion was sustained—177 to 7. Loud cheers greeted the announcement. Mr. Tracey immediately moved to reconsider the vote by which the demand was sustained. A quorum having been secured, Mr. Outhwaite, from the committee on rules, reported a special order to discharge the committee of the whole from further consideration of the pending bill (the seigniorage bill) and providing that after two hours' consideration in the house the previous question should be considered as ordered on the bill and pending amendments, no intervening motions to be in order.

Upon the adoption of the order Mr. Outhwaite demanded the previous question. As the roll call was proceeding Mr. Reed precipitated a lively scene by challenging the correctness of the tally. Amid cries of regular order he explained that he challenged the announcement upon the statement of Mr. Tracey, who had kept tally.

The speaker suggested emphatically that Mr. Tracey was not the keeper of the rolls of the house. Nevertheless, Mr. Reed insisted that he was entitled to respectful treatment. The speaker had his name called on the demand of the previous question on the adoption of the special order, and it was sustained—179 to 10—one more than a quorum. The vote was then taken on the adoption of the special order. The quorum was lost on the vote on the adoption of the special order—165 to 11—three short of a quorum.

The house was again blocked just as the last barrier was being removed, and Mr. Outhwaite stated that this question would come up as soon as the house convened to-morrow, and he moved an adjournment. It was carried and the house adjourned.

The senate held a two hours' session to-day, the whole of which was given to a speech by Senator Frye in opposition to President Cleveland's Hawaiian policy.

Washington, March 3.—The house has entered upon the consideration of appropriation bills. The fortification bill, carrying something over $2,000,000, was passed in twenty-five minutes, and then the pension appropriation bill was taken up. This bill usually leads to considerable display of political feeling and today was no exception. An altercation occurred between Mr. Meridith of Virginia and Mr. Funk of Illinois over the former's attempt to prove that there were many fraudulent pensions on the rolls which almost resulted in a personal collision. Mr. Meridith, who was the aggressor, rushed over to the place where Mr. Funk was standing and shook his fist in the latter's face. Hot words were spoken, but friends interfered, and the speaker restored order before any blows were struck. Hon. Galusha A. Grow, recently elected congressman from Pennsylvania, was sworn in.

Washington, March 5.—The Democratic members of the senate committee on finance find it necessary to take at least one more day to consider the tariff bill before presenting it to the full committee. While some of the schedules of the bill have been agreed to for the time being by the committee the work is not yet considered finally concluded upon any of them, and important changes are liable to be made up to the last moment. For this reason members decline absolutely to give out any of the rates fixed. They also refuse to confirm any figures published, and while they do not say that the rate of 40 cents per ton on iron ore and coal are erroneous, they assert that whatever figures they may have agreed to are still subject to changes. The contest between members of the committee and the discontented element has been very sharp. Senators Hill, Gorman, Brice, White, Caffery, Smith, and possibly two or three others constitute a very compact organization and constitute an influence which the committee is finding it difficult to resist. Still committeemen do not believe that the opposition of the senators will go to the extent of opposing the bill by their votes. Sugar is still the most disturbing element. The Republican members of the committee have not changed their purpose of asking for an explanation in committee of the changes made, and they will insist upon explicit and comprehensive statements. Senator Morrill has reiterated his purpose to this end within the past day or two, and other Republican members of the senate finance committee will sustain him. If the Democratic members comply, as it is supposed they will in a measure, it is probable that some time will be consumed, so that even though the bill be presented to the full committee on Tuesday, it cannot be definitely stated when it will be reported to the senate. The Democratic members are pledged, however, to get it in at the earliest practicable moment.

The senate to-day took up the printing bill, while the house devoted its attention to the appropriation bills.

Washington, March 6.—The debate on the pension appropriation bill continued all day in the house and at times considerable spirit was displayed.

Mr. Dolliver (Rep. Iowa) said he would not have obtruded himself in this debate were he not in receipt of letters complaining in terms that excited his sympathy with the present management of the pension office.

Mr. Hepburn (Rep. Iowa) declared that the first proof of hostility to pensioners by the administration was found in the fact that Grover Cleveland was president; second, that Hoke Smith was secretary of the interior. When Hoke Smith went into office, he continued, 567,000 applications were pending. The applicants were dying at the rate of 17,000 a year. Instead of adjudicating these cases the department went back and suspended 12,000 pensioners whose cases were in lawyers adjudicta. How did this record compare with that of his predecessor, who in the previous six months allowed 110,000 claims? He denied that there were any great number of fraudulent pensioners.

Mr. Baldwin (Dem. Minn.) gave a humorous description of the the war dogs of the other side; Mr. Dolliver who was only prevented from charging on the serried ranks of rebellion and of having himself enshrined on the pension roll by his tender youth; Cannon, whose old age thirty years ago enabled him to escape the draft, and Pickler, who now refused to smooth the front of grim-visaged war. "In the name of God and a suffering people," he concluded, "let us have peace." (Laughter and applause).

The senate held a short session and but little business of importance was transacted. A brief debate on silver was precipitated by the intention expressed by the vice president to refer to Bland seigniorage bill (which had just been received from the house) to the finance committee. Mr. Stewart of Nevada opposed this disposition of the bill, and asked that it be allowed to lie on the table subject to being called up at any time. This was finally ordered. Mr. Stewart at the same time offered a free silver amendment to the bill. The only other event of interest was the offering by Mr. Morgan of Louisiana of a resolution looking to the appointment of a tariff commission member which he offered as a substitute to the tariff bill. A number of bills of minor importance were passed.

STUMBLING ON SUGAR

THE SENATE COMMITTEE LABORS WITH THE TARIFF BILL.

All Points of Difference Have Been Settled With the Exception of Sugar—Tug of War Between the Growers and the Refiners.

Washington, March 6. — The Wilson tariff bill has been the subject of an earnest consultation among the senators to-day. It has reached a certain stage of completeness, and yet may be thrown out of gear by a single article. That article is sugar, and it was generally understood that if a definite agreement could be reached on this article it would then be possible to agree upon everything else, and that the bill could be reported without delay. It is understood that by mutual concessions and frequent consultations the demands made by those Democratic senators who opposed the bill in the form in which it was first presented have been met and tentatively agreed upon; but even these agreements are subject to the approval of the treasury department and the needs of the government in the matter of revenue. Secretary Carlisle has been with the members of the committee most of the day to discuss and compare changes, but, while these concessions have been made and the members of the finance committee and the objecting senators have found a middle ground, there yet remains the matter of sugar, and the difficulties surrounding an agreement upon this are the greatest that the tariff makers have to contend with. The Louisiana senators have one plan which does not meet with favor by the refiners. The plan of the refiners is objectionable to the Louisiana senators. A suggestion has been made that an ad valorem tax be laid, and the refiners say this would afford them no protection. Some senators, looking toward concession, have said that if an ad valorem rate is not just to refiners, a differential be made in their favor. This is stubbornly resisted by those who claim that an ad valorem rate would afford them a just protection, as the higher price of the refined sugar would necessitate a greater tax when imported than the raw sugars. It appears also that the proposition for an increased tax on whisky is mixed up with the proposed duty on sugar. If the latter is agreed to, the necessity for an increased whisky tax disappears. For this reason those who have been insisting upon increases in the whisky tax are not favorable to a sugar tax.

Advised to Return to Work.

Massillon, Ohio, March 6—The national executive board of the United Mine Workers of America will to-morrow issue a circular through President John McBride and Secretary and Treasurer P. McBryde, in which all miners now on a strike are advised to return to work. The circular says that at the meeting of the national executive board held Feb. 27, 28 and March 1, the present deplorable condition of mining affairs was discussed and resolutions were adopted to the effect that the present would be an inopportune time for action of such a character, as it would necessitate a stoppage of work in any one or more competing districts. The board calls upon all mine workers to hold themselves in readiness and to prepare for a general strike for higher wages and an improved condition at as early a date as the national convention, which meets in April, may determine.

Bad for Loggers.

Eau Claire, Wis., March 6. — Mild temperature, accompanied by copious showers, has threatened the logging interests seriously. Reports indicate that in many localities in the logging regions the roads have commenced to go to pieces, but that there is no likelihood of a general breaking up just yet. Operators generally will hold on until the last minute, hoping for another cold snap, as to quit now would entail a heavy loss to many. The Northwestern Lumber company's camps on the Eau Claire have broken up and 200 or 300 men came down on the Wisconsin Central and Omaha roads from the Chippewa pineries to-day.

Claims Not Allowed.

Washington, March 6.—The court of claims has rendered a decision in the claim of Charles H. Armstrong and 158 others for $75,508. The decision was against the claimants. It appears from the record in the case that the claim was for expenses incurred and paid for services and labor furnished in 1863 in fortifying the city of Pittsburg, Pa., against the threatened attack of Gen. Lee's army on its Gettysburg campaign. It is alleged by claimant that labor was furnished at that time at the urgent request of Gen. Brook, who was then in command of the department of the Monongahela, and that full compensation was promised by him.

Corbett Confident.

Baltimore, March 6.—Champion Corbett and wife are stopping in Baltimore this week. The all-absorbing topic in circles where he is king, is his approaching fight with Peter Jackson. He said that he expected to win it; that Jackson was no better than he was at San Francisco at the time of their meeting, and that he thought himself much improved. Next to the fight itself in importance is the place where it is to come off. Corbett is inclined to favor England. He sails for that country next month, and he and Brady expect to do some figuring with a few dukes and lords for the mill.

Abandoned the Hebrew Faith.

Cincinnati, March 6. — Dr. E. John Kauffman, the first husband of Minnie Seligman, the actress, and a prominent Jewish physician, last night abandoned the Hebrew faith and publicly joined the Baptist church. His present wife was baptized with him.

Judge Hoyt Dead.

St. Louis, March 6.—A special to the Republic from Atlanta, Ga., says Judge Samuel B. Hoyt, who, during the war, was a commissioner of the Confederate states, died last evening. He was a cousin of ex-Gov. Hoyt of Pennsylvania

Not a Nuisance.

Sioux Falls, S. D., March 6.—A telegram from Pierre announces that the supreme court has reversed the decision of Judge Aitken, declaring the Sioux Falls brewery nuisance under the prohibitory law and ordering its destruction.

An Election in Iowa.

Des Moines, March 6.—Municipal elections were held in a number of cities throughout Iowa yesterday. The weather all over the state was extremely disagreeable, and in most places the vote was light. The Republicans made gains in several cities that have been steadily Republican, and in some others gained slightly in councilmen. Their largest gain was in Iowa City, where they carried every ward but one.

In Cedar Rapids there was a spirited contest, resulting in a victory for the Democrats, they re-electing their mayor by 500 majority, and selecting all the other city officers save the treasurer. The council stands four Republicans and four Democrats.

At Muscatine the Democrats elected the mayor and two of the four city officers. They also secured two of the four aldermen.

At Burlington, as the result of a Democratic split, Eugene Butts, Republican, was elected mayor, and the Republicans also secured three aldermen. Butts is the first Republican mayor since 1880.

In the places heard from prohibition, or, rather, the question of modifying the present law, does not seem to have played any part. Several points are yet to be heard from, however.

Portland, Me., March 6.— Municipal elections were held in Maine yesterday and resulted generally in favor of the Republicans.

Gold in the Treasury.

Washington, March 6.—The amount of gold paid out by the treasury during the month of February in the redemption of United States treasury notes was $19,192,509, and the amount paid during the five days of the present month was $629,014. The total amount received at the treasury department in payment of principal, premium and interest in new 1904 bonds is $58,205,612. The amount of net gold in the treasury is slowly but regularly increasing. The figures at the close of business yesterday was $107,205,379.

New Jersey Trouble in Court.

Trenton, N. J., March 6.—The rival sensational trouble is transferred to the supreme court to-day on an order directed against the presidents of the rival senates, Maurice A. Rogers and Robert Adrian, to show cause why one and each of them should not be regarded as having usurped, intruded into and unlawfully executed the office of president of the senate of New Jersey. A full bench was present, and the court was crowded with representatives of both parties.

Mr. Porter Banqueted.

Rome, March 6.—A banquet was given last evening at the Grand hotel in honor of Mr. Porter, the retiring United States minister. The guests included Mr. Wayne MacVeagh, the new representative. Mr. Porter offered a toast to King Humbert and Baron Blanc. The foreign minister in reply expressed the sincere and cordial friendship and high esteem they had always felt for him. Baron Blanc concluded by offering a toast to President Cleveland, which was responded to with enthusiasm.

Well Known Minister Dead.

Delaware, Ohio, March 6.—Rev. Dr. Frederick Merrick, aged eighty-four, who has been connected with the Ohio Wesleyan university in this city for over fifty years, being president from 1860 to 1874, died from the effects of a stroke of paralysis at his home here to-day. He has given his entire life, together with property valued at $30,000, to the college. As an educator, minister and teacher he was known in nearly every state in the Union.

Electrical Storm.

Gainesville, Tex., March 6.—The most severe electrical storm in years passed over this section last night, accompanied by heavy wind and rain. A large number of houses were unroofed and several overturned. T. A. Meserve's stock barn was burned with its contents, including several head of valuable horses. Much damage is reported done to Santa Fe railroad bridges in the Indian Territory.

May Fight To-Day.

Rio de Janeiro, March 6.—Extensive signalling with searchlights indicates that many ships are lying outside the harbor. It is thought that the government fleet has at last arrived and that it will enter the harbor to-day. In that event a battle between the opposing fleets is looked for. The rebel ship Aquidaban is still absent from the harbor and her whereabouts is unknown.

Officials Accused of Fraud.

Washington, March 6. — Charges of falsifying accounts have been made against the deputy marshals at Purcell, Ind. T., by A. Breen of that place. The accusation, which does not give the names of the alleged offenders, declares that never was such frauds perpetrated as is done in this place. The government is swindled on all sides and to a great extent.

Bought a Magazine.

New York, March 6. — Benjamin S. Harmon, assignee of the Godey Publishing company, sold, under order of the court of common pleas, the good will and plant of Godey's Magazine for $5,000 to Harry Wakefield Bates. The sale was made at auction, Mr. Bates being the only bidder. A corporation is now being organized for the purpose of taking over the good will.

A Populist and His Bride.

Redwood Falls, Minn., March 6.—A. D. Stewart, one of the prominent leaders of the People's party, has returned from his honeymoon. Mr. Stewart was married to Miss Annie McNair of Winnebago, Ill., Feb. 22. He has purchased a large farm near town, where he will settle down with his young wife.

Whalebacks.

West Superior, Wis., March 6.—Work has been resumed at the barge works. The whalebacks will be repaired and put in shape for the opening of navigation. The Christopher Columbus will be fitted out to run between Chicago and Milwaukee.

Residence Burned.

Montrose, Minn., March 6.—The residence of Anton Schmidt, a farmer living three miles south of here, was totally destroyed by fire last night. Loss, $800; insurance, $400.

BLAND'S BILL PASSED

THE LONG STRUGGLE IN THE HOUSE IS AT LAST ENDED.

The Bill for the Coinage of the Silver Seigniorage and the Silver Bullion in the Treasury Is Passed by a Vote of 167 to 130.

Washington, March 2.—The long struggle in the house over the Bland bill for the coinage of the silver seigniorage and the silver bullion in the treasury has ended by the passage of the bill by a vote of 167 to 130, a majority in favor of the bill of 37. The special order to bring the bill to a vote was adopted by a bare quorum immediately after the house convened. This broke the opposition of the filibusterers and they were powerless to do anything further to place an obstacle in the way of the bill. All the amendments offered to the measure by its opponents were defeated, the one which polled the most votes being Mr. Outhwaite's amendment to strike out the second section. The bill as passed was in the nature of a substitute for the original text of the measure. The changes do not affect the material features of the bill, which provides for the coinage of the silver seigniorage in the treasury, the issue of silver certificates thereon, if need be, in the discretion of the secretary of the treasury in advance of the coinage and thereafter the coinage of the remainder of the bullion as fast as practicable and the issue of silver certificates thereon to take the place of the treasury notes issued, under the Sherman act which are to be retired and cancelled as rapidly as the coinage takes place. The changes made in the substitute simply make specific the fact that the seigniorage is to be coined and that this bill shall not affect the redemption of the treasury notes under existing law. An analysis of the vote by which the bill passed, shows that 141 Democrats, 19 Republicans and 8 Populists—168—voted for it and 79 Republicans and 50 Democrats—129—voted against it. The bill for the rescue of the armament of the wrecked Kearsarge passed just before adjournment.

Yeas—Abbott, Aitken, Alderson, Alexander, Arnold, Bailey, Baker (Kan.), Bankhead, Bell (Colo.), Bell (Tex.), Berry, Black (Ga.), Black (Ill.), Bland, Boatner, Boen, Bowers (Cal.), Branch, Breckenridge (Ark.), Breckinridge (Ky.), Bretz, Brookshire, Broderick, Brown, Bryan, Bunn, Bynum, Cabaniss, Caminetti, Cannon (Cal.), Caruth, Catchings, Clark (Mo.), Clarke (Ala.), Cobb (Ala.), Cockrell, Coffeen, Conn, Cooper (Fla.), Cooper (Ind.), Cooper (Tex.), Cox, Crawford, Culberson, Curtis (Kan.), Davey, Davis, Dearmond, Denson, Dinsmore, Dockery, Donovan, Doolittle, Durborrow, Edmunds, Ellis (Ky.), Ellis (Or.), Enloe, Epes, Fithian, Forman, Funston, Fyan, Geary, Goodnight, Gorman, Grady, Gresham, Hall (Mo.), Hammond, Hare, Hartman, Hatch, Heard, Henderson (N. C.), Hepburn, Hermann, Holman, Hooker (Miss.), Hudson, Hunter, Hutcheson, Jones, Kem, Kilgore, Kribbs, Kyle, Lacey, Lane, Latimer, Layton, Lester, Lisle, Livingston, Lucas, Maddox, Maguire, Mallory, Marsh, Marshal, Martin (Ind.), McCleary (Minn.), McCreary (Ky.), McCulloch, McDonnald, McDearmon, McGann, McKeighan, McMillin, McNagny, McRae, Meredith, Money, Montgomery, Morgan, Moses, Murray, Neill, Newlands, Paschal, Patterson, Paynter, Pearson, Pence, Pendleton (Tex.), Pendleton (W. Va.), Pickler, Post, Price, Reilly, Richards (Ohio), Richardson (Mich.), Richardson (Tenn.), Ritchie, Robbins, Russell (Ga.), Sayers, Settle, Shell, Sibley, Simpson, Snodgrass, Springer, Stallings, Stockdale, Stone (Ky.), Strait, Swanson, Sweet, Talbert (S. C.), Tate, Taylor (Ind.), Terry, Tucker, Turner (Ga.), Turner (Va.), Turpin, Tyler, Weadock, Wheeler (Ala.), White, Whiting, Williams (Ill.), Williams (Miss.), Wilson (Wash.), Wise, Woodward—167.

From Private to Paymaster General.

Omaha, Neb., March 2.—The promotion of Col. Thaddeus H. Stanton, chief paymaster of the department of La Platte, to be assistant-paymaster general of the army, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., goes into effect to-day. Col. Stanton is one of the most widely known officers of the army, and has worked his way up, having enlisted in the army from Washington, Iowa, as a private at the breaking out of the war.

Tired of Convict Labor.

Fort Madison, Iowa, March 2.—The operation of the shoe factory at the state prison here was discontinued to-day. The reason given by the contractors is that the work of the convicts was not satisfactory, and that it was difficult to market the goods.

Bombs in Budapesth.

Budah Pesth, March 2.—A tin box to which a fuse was attached was found in one of the rooms of the Unterhaus of the diet. The discovery has caused a sensation, and the police are blamed for not taking proper precautions after the warnings they have received and the threats made by anarchists.

Small Liverpool Failure.

Liverpool, March 2.—The failure of James Gaskill & Son was reported on 'change to-day. The failure had no effect on business, however, as it had been anticipated.

C. W. Peters has finished his term of School in district 24.

W. D. Dawley was doing business in town the first of the week.

D. A. Turner, of Crookston, was doing business in town today.

James O'Brien, the Thief River Falls lumberman, was in town today.

We understand that there will be a dance in Bjerk's Hall next Saturday night.

C. W. Peters wishes to announce that the bath room will be open hereafter every Saturday.

Frank Gravel the corpulent traveling man from Crookston, was doing business in town last Monday.

Rev. Evenson, of Thief River Falls will preach in the Norwegian Lutheran Church next Saturday evening.

Are we going to have an early spring? It looks like it but it is dangerous to predict about the weather.

We learn that the train will soon commence to run from here to Red Lake Falls first instead of going to Thief River Falls first as it does now.

Rev. Billings, of Fisher Minn., was here several days the first of the week assisting Rev. Willett in holding revival services in the M. E. Church.

A. C. Schmidt the Crookston painter, is painting the counters and shelving in Rapp & Post's new store, A. C. is an artist and is doing some fine work.

Crookston Republicans have called a convention to nominate a straight party ticket for the April city election. Heretofore party lines have not been drawn in the city elections.

It is rumored that the Great Northern will build from Fosston to Duluth this year and that President Hill, who is now in Europe, is there to raise the necessary cash,

We have had some very mild weather the latter part of last week and most of the snow on the roads has disappeared. We have had some colder weather this week with a light snow but the roads are bad neither good for sleighing or wheeling,

Trains on the Red Lake Falls branch of the Northern Pacific will only make three trips a week hereafter. The train leaves Grand Forks in the morning instead of at Fertile, as heretofore, and will run on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The spring apportionment of current school funds will be made at the state department of public instruction next Monday. It is thought that the amount per capita will be about 90 cents this spring. The number of pupils to share this is estimated at 256,000

The Rainy Lake gold discoveries are attracting hundreds of men who are going there in the hope of striking a fortune. Rainy Lake City is only two months old but it already has several hundred people and corner lots are selling for $500. They expect the biggest kind of a boom there as soon as spring opens.

Agent Robinson, of Thief River Falls was in town last night to report to the railway company that their depot in that place was burned that evening. Fire was discovered about 7 p. m. and the building was quickly burned to the ground. Very little freight was in the depot at the time.

A gold-bug paper says: "Secretary Carlisle's $50,000,000 loan has had no effect on the money or stock market." Well, why should it? But suppose Mr. Carlisle were instructed by congress to issue $250,000,000 in non-interest bearing treasury notes, "to be issued directly from government to people, without the intervention of national banks,", and receivable by the government in payment of all dues, it would not be said that it had no effect on the money or stock market, for an effect very like a boom would be quickly apparent in all channels of business.—F. "Is this a godless town? Here we have a city with 1200 inhabitants and no resident priest or minister. What is the matter? Don't our people take sufficient in the greatest of all living issues, the salvation of their immortal souls, or are they self-sufficient to that degree where they may safely dispense without the guidance of priest or minister?—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

E. D. Childs, of Crookston, has entered into a contract to ship a car of artesian water each day to a grocery firm in Grand Forks. The water will be shipped in tank cars holding 1,000 barrels each and sold at 50 cents per barrel of 52 gallons. Each car will then bring $500, which ought to yield a profit and still it is said river water will come as high after it is boiled.—Norman County Herald,

Just think of it, the board of trade farmer, Ed Partridge, of Chicago, is reputed to have cleaned up $2,000,000 in his wheat deals for the past three months. During the same time hundreds of other men have been forced to feel grateful for the privilege of getting a plate full of soup daily from some soup house sustained by charity. Something is out of hinge that such a state of affairs can exist in this country,—Mankato Weekly Ledger.

A game warden made his appearance in town last week and confiscated an elk's head. He was heard to remark that the Governor wanted an elk's head The poor fellow thought he made a great haul. An elk's head can be bought for three dollers, moose heads for $2.60 and deer heads for the taking. The government allows the Indians to kill moose, elk and deer. The state of Minnesota pays a political debt to some worn out political heeler to go around the state on the border of the reservation picking up these worthless relics and then boast how they protect the game. There are other things the state might do of greater advantage to the public —Thief River Falls News.

Next Tuesday occurs the annual village election and candidates for the various positions are busily at work fixing up their political fences. Apparently but little interest is shown but in reality candidates are numerous but seem to prefer to do their work on the quiet. A caucus will probably be held the last of the week and a ticket nominated but many prefer to come out after the caucus is over and we may expect a lively time on election day.

Diligent inquiry has shown that the following are desirous of village honors.

For president, S. M. Dainard, E. M. Hoff and C. G. Rapp.

For recorder, J. L. Johnson, O. F. Post and Christ Hall.

For councilmen, Andrew Berg, H. L. Freeman, Andrew Hall, R. H. Aimer, Carl Johnson, M. E. Bjerk, S. M. Huff H. O. Jackson, and C. A. Sehie.

For treasurer, B. E. Parkee L. K. Kolstad and J. C. Dahl.

For constable O. W. Brink, Dan Patterson and August Peterson.

For justice, O. H. Peters and P. S. Stranahan.

It is understood that Charley Brink and Seymour Harris are prominent candidates for street commissioner and each are busy interviewing all who are likely to be councilmen and the fight promises to be close. For the other appointive offices candidates are slow in announcing themselves.

Delinquent Tax List

OF

POLK COUNTY, MINN.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss. DISTRICT COURT.
County of Polk. } 14th Judicial District.

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA, to all Persons, Companies or Corporations, who have or claim any Estate, Right, Title or Interest in, Claim to, or Lien upon any of the Several Pieces or Parcels of Land in the List Hereto Attached, Described:

The list of taxes and penalties on real property for the County of Polk, remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1894, has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court, of the County of Polk, of which that hereto attached is a copy.

THEREFORE, You, and each of you, are required to file in the office of said Clerk, on or before the 20th day of March, A. D. 1894, your answer, in writing, setting forth any objections or defense you may have to the taxes and penalties, or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to, or on which you have or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim or lien.

And in default thereof, judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land, for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interest and cost.

NILS MEYS,
Clerk of the District Court in said County of Polk.

Explanation to the Tax List of 1892.

Wherever the notation "Ex. Int. R. R. Co." appears as a part of any description of land in the following list it means that the title of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company or its trustees or mortgagees is not in any wise to be impaired or affected by the tax judgment to be entered in these proceedings and that only the interest of the purchaser from said company should be effected by said tax judgment or sold thereunder.

[In the following list, "a" represents acres; "e" east; "n" north; "s" south; "w" west; "ne" northeast; "nw" northwest; "se" southeast; "sw" southwest; "bl" or "blk" block; "r" or "R" range; "&" and; "tp" or "twp" township; "ft" feet; "st" street; "cor" corner; "frl" fractional; "pt" part; "$" dollars; "do" or " means a repetition of the word or words in the line above on which it occurs. The spaces between figures in columns of figures represent the decimal point between dollars and cents, and all figures that fall below any dollar mark, as above represented, are to be read in the same manner as though the dollar mark was there.]

IN THE APIARY.

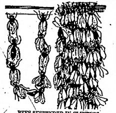
The comb consists of hexagonal cells placed end to end in such a manner that each cell is closed by three waxen plates, each of which also assists in completing one of the cells of the other side of the comb. The construction of the comb and the care of the young devolve upon the workers.

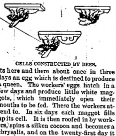
In the construction of the comb the bees take hold of each other and suspend themselves in clusters, which consist of festoons, crossing themselves in all directions, and remain immovable for about 24 hours, during which time the wax is secreted in the form of thin plates from between the scales of their bodies. A bee makes its way to the roof of the hive and detaching its plates of wax in succession from the abdomen with the hind legs works them up with the tongue in the material which forms the comb This bee is followed by others, which perform the work.



BEES SUSPENDED IN CLUSTERS.

As soon as a few cells are thus prepared, the queen bee begins to lay her eggs. The first eggs develop into workers; the next produce the drones and also the queens. The eggs are deposited in the cells, and in five days the maggot is hatched. The sole employment of the queen bee is laying these eggs, and as only one is deposited in each cell this occupies her almost incessantly. The queen when thus engaged is accompanied by a guard of 12 workers, who clear the way before her and feed her when exhausted. She lays workers' eggs for 11 months and afterward those which produce drones.

As soon as this change has taken place the workers begin to construct royal cells, in which, without discontinuing to lay the drones' eggs, the queen deposits here and there about once in three days an egg which is destined to produce a queen. The workers' eggs hatch in a few days and produce little white maggots, which immediately open their mouths to be fed. These the workers attend to. In six days each maggot fills up its cell. It is then roofed in by workers, spins a silken cocoon and becomes a chrysalis, and on the twenty-first day it comes forth a perfect bee. The drones emerge on the twenty-fifth day and the queens on the sixteenth.



CELLS CONSTRUCTED BY BEES.

As for nearly a year the queen does not lay any eggs destined to become queens, if any evil befall her in that time the hive is left without a queen. Her loss stops the work of the hive, and unless another queen is provided the bees either join another hive or perish from inanition.

That Big Meteor.

If it was not duly recorded on a ship's log, one would be inclined to class the tale told by the captain and first officer of the steamer Yemassee with the sea serpent yarns. But there it stands in the Yemassee's logbook—the brief note that Dec. 20, 15 miles south of Charleston bar, 40 minutes past 6 in the morning, the captain and his first officer saw "an immense meteor." The meteor lasted entire for 10 minutes, bearing east in a straight line; then for 10 minutes more it wabbled zigzag and at the end of that time burst into a hundred fragments, more or less. It took 10 minutes for the fragments to be used up and disappear, so that the whole phenomenon lasted half an hour. Both the officers vouch for this. The Yemassee is a ship making trips between New York and Charleston.

There is only one point of disagreement between the two men about this monstrous meteor—if it was one. The first officer stakes his reputation for veracity on the size of the thing being equal to at least that of six moons. It must have been as broad as the 30 ton Canadian cheese at the World's fair. The captain is more moderate in his estimate of the size and falls one moon. He says it was as large as five moons. Furthermore, the first officer says its rays burned like those of the hot sun. The fragments after it had burst looked like fireballs.

Here now is a nut for science to crack. Perhaps the phenomenon which the two seamen supposed to be a meteor was an electrical appearance.

Women at the Polls.

"Do unmarried women possess the ballot in this country?" asked the English tourist.

"Not to any great extent," replied the native. "In Wyoming women are allowed to vote, and in a few other states they vote on school questions."

"Don't they vote in Pennsylvania at all?"

"No."

"That's odd. I certainly heard some one speak of the maiden vote the other day."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

ONE BETTER.

Very Good For New York, but Chicago Takes the Palm.

"By the way," said the drummer as he took a cigar out of his case and reached for a match, "this American nation has lost heaps of money by not knowing a good thing when it was crawling around in the grass."

"To what do you refer?" asked the man who had been sharpening his knife on his bootleg.

"To this cigar case. Latest fad out—made of snakeskin and combines beauty and wear. We might have been using that sort of material for the last 200 years, but didn't know a good thing."

"Are you sure it's snakeskin?"

"Of course. Haven't you been in New York lately?"

"No."

"Place on Grand street where they make 'em while you wait. Not only that, but you can pick out your own snake. The day I went in they had about 50 of them in a cage, and I was told to select the one I fancied most. I made my choice, and he was taken out, his skin slipped off, and in about 20 minutes I had this case. Very convenient, don't you know, and it's a strictly New York idea."

"I think we can beat it in Chicago, however," said the other man as he changed his knife to the other bootleg.

"Anything new there?"

"You bet! There's a restaurant on State street where they serve oxtail soup at 10 cents a plate, and they bring in the ox and cut his tail off right before your eyes. In that way there can be no deception. They use about 1,500 tails per day."

"Must make a big lot of bobtailed oxen out your way?"

"Oh, it does."

"And a bobtailed ox is not a thing of beauty."

"By no means, not until he is fixed."

"How fixed?"

"Why, as fast as they leave the restaurant they are taken over to a place on Randolph street and dehorned."

"And then?"

"And then they are sent east and sold as Jersey cows. You get your soup, your horns, your fad and your Jersey cow. All very simple and very convenient, you know, and it's strictly a Chicago idea!"

The man with the snakeskin cigar case sat and thought for awhile with a very serious expression of countenance and then suddenly said:

"I've tried and tried, but it's no use, and I might as well give it up."

"What's that?"

"Lying! The other fellow is always from Chicago and always beats me out of sight!"—Detroit Free Press.

Accounting For It.

The author of "Road, Track and Stable," like every lover of horses, goes about with his eyes open. Often, he confesses, when vexed by some legal problem—for he is a lawyer—he has looked from his office window and envied the teamsters in the street. In particular he has observed a certain negro who drives a very fine pair of jet black horses belonging to a coal merchant. These horses have taken many premiums at horse shows and bear the appropriate names of King Cole and Chloe. Evidently the negro is wrapped up in them. Once or twice at least every year he exhibits them at a show or fair, and on these occasions he has nothing to do except to talk. And I know of no machine that runs more easily and pleasantly than the tongue of a horseman under such circumstances.

I discovered accidentally one day that the very color of the horses is a source of pleasure to him. It was in winter, and the streets were heavy with snow and slush. The team pulled a big load of coal so neatly out of the slough that a bystander was moved to express his admiration at their prowess.

"Huh!" exclaimed the colored man, grinning from ear to ear. "You see, mistah, them horses is black!"—Exchange.

Her Great Desire.

A lady who had reached the time of life when she began to resent every birthday as a personal affront was attending a sewing circle at the parsonage on day when the cry went up that there was a mouse in the room. Every lady in the room except this one fled, screaming. She remained in her chair as pale as death.

Hearing the uproar, the pastor, who was in his study, came in to see what was the matter.

"It's a m-m-mouse!" the pale lady gasped.

"Indeed! And why didn't you run with the rest? Aren't you afraid of mice?"

"I'm mortally afraid of them!"

"Then why, please, did you stay in the room?"

"I was in hopes," the lady faltered, "that I might be scared out of a year's growth."—Youth's Companion.

Mamma's Changing Love.

Small Son—I don't believe mamma loves you any more.

Papa—Oh, I guess she does.

"If she loved you, she wouldn't want to make you unhappy, would she?"

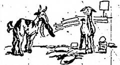
"Of course not."

"Well, she said she was going to tell you to whip me, and you know it always makes you unhappy to have to whip me."—Good News.

Newspaper Item.

"What idiots they have on the newspapers nowadays!" exclaimed Hornblower. "There was a reporter in here yesterday, and I told him about the big improvement I have made down our way. Of course I told him not to mention my name in his paper, and the blamed fool didn't."—Texas Siftings.

His Advances Spurned.



Captain Ricornus—Excuse me, but won't you have a bit of this delicious overshoe?

Miss Nannie Goat—No, thank you. I never chew gum.—Puck.

Not In It.

Madam—Well, Mary, what did you think of the pictures at the academy?

Mary—Oh, mum, there was a picture there called "Two Dogs," after Landseer, but I looked at it for nearly half an hour and I couldn't see no Landseer.—Spare Moments.

The Center of Attraction.

"Oh, no. That big crowd you see around his office all the time is attracted by the cries of his patients."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

HOW TO WASH TABLE LINEN.

Care Should Be Used In Washing White, Colored, Embroidered and Damask.

Be sure that your linen goes into no vessel that is not clean and freshly rinsed. See that it is put to boil inside a bag of clean cheese cloth. If stained, wet the spots with alcohol, and wash out in clear cold water before allowing suds to touch it. Stains of milk or soft eggs must be soaked in clear cold water for 10 minutes, then washed out. Use a mild white soap, or the Brown Windsor that comes in long bars. Make a strong lather, only letting the soap touch the fabric at some obstinate grease spot. Tea cloths or others with delicate colors wash brighter if a handful of salt is added to the first suds, which should be barely lukewarm. The second may be hotter. Wash quickly through both. Fold smoothly for the wringer, then pop into your bag and set to boil in cold water for 10 minutes. Rinse first in hot, then in lukewarm water. Have your bluing water cold and free from specks of color. Dip your linen in very thin starch containing a suspicion of bluing, and hang, if possible, in the sun. See that the line is clean. Take pains to hang each piece square, as if dried awry it will be very hard to make it even again.

Let everything dry thoroughly and do not dampen or fold until a little before ironing time. After a cloth is properly wet pull the diagonal corners as hard as possible and fold with a lengthwise crease through the middle. Roll smooth and tight and let it lie for 20 minutes. For rich damask or embroidered cloths put an extra blanket on the ironing table under its muslin cover. Lay the embroidered part smoothly over it, right side down and press with a heavy iron just below scorching heat. When almost dry and very smooth, turn and iron on the right side, using very light irons on the embroidery and heavy ones on the plain round. Stretch the fabric well with the hands before pressing embroidery.

When the right side is properly done, fold it lengthwise along the middle, then begin at one end and lay about six inches lightly over; do not fold it down but roll until all the length is coiled. Go over the cloth twice or thrice with a hot iron, changing irons frequently. Iron till the pattern shows plain on a glossy white surface. If not thoroughly dry when ironed, hang upon the horse for an hour or two, then fold or roll to such compass as required for the closet.

How to Wring Out Hot Wet Flannels.

Put them inside a towel and hold the ends in the hand while wringing. A square bag with a stick run through each end and an opening in the middle of one side is better. Drop the dripping cloth into the bag, then use the stick to turn it by.

How to Care For a Refrigerator.

Place your refrigerator in a cool spot, but one having light and air. Once a week remove everything from it, and take out all shelves or movable parts. Wash these well in hot soapsuds, rinse freely in boiling water. Put them in the sun or before the range to dry. Wash in the same way the rack on which the ice sets, but use greater care, as this is generally corrugated or grooved, and secretions of dirt may be overlooked. Wash the inside of the entire refrigerator with suds and boiling water, being careful to wipe all perfectly dry. Use a flexible wire for running down the tube where the refuse water runs off. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of washing soda in a quart of boiling water on the stove. After it boils pour it into the ice compartment, follow it quickly with a kettle full of boiling water and wipe dry. Leave the refrigerator open for an hour and then put back your ice and food. The best day in the week for this work is when the iceman is expected. Attend to it immediately after breakfast. Never put warm food in a refrigerator, as it will absorb the flavors of other food, and also heat the refrigerator.

How to Make Paint Shine Without Varnish.

Paint mixed with a liquid composed of one gallon of linseed oil, two ounces each of burnt umber and black lead, and a quarter of a pound of litharge, boiled together, will dry quickly, with a hard finish and a glosslike varnish.

How the Odor of Food May Be Removed From Cooking Vessels.

Sometimes the most careful washing will not wholly remove the flavor or odor of food from the utensil in which it was cooked. This is frequently the case with fish, onions, cabbage, etc., but there is a remedy which, though a little trouble, is well worth trying. After any of these articles have been cooked, wash the utensil carefully with soap and water. Nearly fill it with cold water, and for each quart of water add about a tablespoonful of dissolved washing soda. Place on the fire and let the water get boiling hot. Now turn this water into the sink. Rinse the utensil with clean warm water, and on wiping it dry it will be found perfectly sweet.

How to Prevent Cold Feet.

Do not wear the same stockings on two successive days, but keep two pairs going alternately, hanging each to dry and air when not in use. Every night bathe the feet in tepid water and rub hard with a coarse towel.

How to Make Virginia Eggnog.

To make a gallon of eggnog take one dozen eggs; separate the whites and the yolks very carefully. Beat each until it becomes as light as practicable. Add a pound of pulverized white sugar to the yolks and mix. Then add a quart of cognac brandy and half pint of Jamaica rum, pouring them in a small stream while stirring actively. Add half a gallon of rich milk. Then add not less than three-fourths of the bulk of the whites. The remainder of the whites should be put upon the surface merely as an ornament. A large portion of the white of the eggs should always be mixed to render it light and wholesome.

NORTHWESTERN MILLING.

Flour Output Shows a Slight Increase—A Better Market.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 23.—The flour output showed a small increase last week. The quantity ground was 115,590 barrels, against 108,655 barrels the week before, 163,735 barrels for the corresponding time in 1893, and 171,620 barrels in 1892. Under the stimulus of rather better buying, a larger capacity is moving this week.

Though wheat fluctuated up and down last week, millers held to their prices pretty firmly, and this seemed to inspire buyers to some extent, with the idea that it was time to take hold, and the orders booked in the aggregate were double the amount of flour ground.

Of Superior and Duluth the same paper says: Three of the mills were in operation last week. They produced 34,647 barrels of flour, a daily average of 5,780 barrels, against 7,000 barrels the week before, 1,541 barrels in the corresponding week of 1893, and 12,282 barrels in 1892. This week's output will be somewhat smaller, as only the Lake Superior and Freeman mills will be in operation. They will grind about 4,000 barrels daily. The flour trade is still in no very brilliant condition.

IRON TRADE REVIEW.

A Well Maintained Volume of Business Is Reported.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 23.—The Iron Trade Review this week says:

A well maintained volume of trade is the concurrent report from all the principal iron and steel centers of the country. As to prices there is no betterment, and in some directions an evident weakening. It is clear that the volume of imperative wants in iron and steel, growing out of the long stifling of consumption is steadily increasing, and just as clear that there is no disposition in any department of the trade to buy in advance of what contracts in hand will justify. So much of the every day shipment from furnaces and mills is in response to urgent requests to forward at once, that there is no mistaking the policy of buyers everywhere to govern themselves entirely by events. A two weeks test proved that the advance in soft steel was too rapid for existing conditions, and buyers have slowed up in the past week, with the results that sales of billets at Pittsburg are now reported at $15.50, a decrease of 50 cents from the late quotation of sellers. There is a weakening also in Bessemer pig, though for a fortnight no activity could be affirmed of that market.

A BETTER FEELING.

Railroad Agents In the Northwest Make Optimistic Reports.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 23.—Railroad officials are continually receiving gratifying reports from their local agents on the line regarding business prospects. The Milwaukee passenger department has received 175 letters from as many agents, who wrote in response to a request of Mr. Conley, regarding the present business outlook. Almost all of these are favorable. The agents hold that the depression has reached its lowest ebb and that the flow is about to begin, as seen by a better "feeling" than for some time past.

GULF AND INTERSTATE.

The Executive Board Has Money to Begin Its Construction.

WICHITA, Feb. 23.—The executive board of the Gulf and Interstate road will meet the Arkansas City delegation here. President Stoddard states that the money has been secured from Missouri to start construction, and that "Buffalo" Jones, chief of construction, will start the work of grading in less than three weeks. He does not state who furnishes the money, but officially declares that the road will be under way in less than a month.

Floods In Florida.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Feb. 23.—The steady rains during the past 10 days have caused a freshet in all the streams in this section. News has just been received that the town of Geneva, Ala., on the Choctawhatchie river near the Florida line, is more than half submerged in water, and the river is still rising. The flood at that point is said to be the greatest since the memorable flood in 1865.

Not Credited In Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—The announcement made in London that Guatemala had suspended payment on its external debt is not credited here, similar reports having been in circulation since the first of the week, and having been authoritatively denied by Minister Guzman, who received a cable from his government saying that the interest on the Guatemalan debt had been punctually paid in London.

Stage Robber Will Die.

DEADWOOD, S. D., Feb. 23.—The Mexican, Wright, who with another Mexican held up the Spearfish mail coach Sunday, has been captured. He was found hiding in a haystack five miles from the scene of the holdup. Both hands and his feet and limbs are badly frozen. He cannot survive.

Jahnn Released on Bail.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., Feb. 23.—The examination of August Jahnn, arrested on the charge of murder in the second degree, was held at Sauk Rapids before Justice Miller. The prisoner was held to the grand jury in $7,000 bail, which was furnished.

Liquor Officially Spilled.

BLITTON, S. D., Feb. 23.—Nine barrels of beer and several bottles of whisky taken from John Grey's blind pig, were, under orders from the court, spilled by the sheriff.

Guatemala Suspends Payment.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Advices received here from Guatemala announce that the Central American republic has suspended payment, owing to the decline in silver, on its external debt.
